A STRIKE FOR PEACE
An Editorial

A NEXT-WAR forces culminate weeks and weeks of preparation for a mass upsurge of peace sentiment today.

Students throughout the country are demanding recognition of their abhorrence to war. The means by which they affect their war hatred is unique.

Labor has utilized the strike as its chief weapon for reform. That students should borrow this method to give a better protest against war is consistent with the common characteristics of these two groups.

Undergraduates strike out without qualification. The very concept of a sudden cessation from daily activity is realistic and forceful. It should be clearly understood, however, that this strike against war is no sense of war against educational attitude. The strike is directed at the maneuvers and mobilizations of the group which seeks to profit out of war. The strike is directed against increasing involvement, against the approaching menace of fascism with its glorification of free thought and action.

The inclusion of the Oxford Club as a resolution at all university meetings today, proves the concreteness and the clear-cut determination of anti-war action. It is no empty gesture to swear not to support one's country in time of war.

We must steel ourselves now and resolve that we will not support any war, on the same theory that a doctor prescribes a pledge for a drunkard, even though there be the assurance when a drink is good even for an interned drunkard.

The effectiveness of today's anti-war strike will assume vital importance if it moves the great masses of the world to protest. The action of the student front can only be matched by the masses of the world in the Chase of peace. It will be shown clearly at 11 a.m. today.

All out!

1400 School of Business Students Turned Out Last Year

The anti-war strike to be held today represents the third annual student strikes initiated at City College of New York on April 2, 1934 as part of a nation-wide student demonstration against war.

Last year, on April 12, 1400 students from the School of Business were among the 1800 who struck through the entire nation. On that occasion, students here voted to leave the education and join students from Townsend Harris, Brooklyn College, and the New York School for Social Work in a combined anti-war strike in the drizzling rain at Madison Square Park. There the students took the famous pledge, which states: "We refuse to support the government of the United States in war. We will not support the government of the United States in any way." This pledge will be presented to the

JOSEPH COUGHLIN TO APPEAR

A comic element will be introduced at the strike with the appearance of students impersonating Coughlin, Heatr, and other notorious figures.

The resolutions to be introduced at the strike will stress the following:

—Erecting the Board of Higher Education to recognize the American Student Union; urging the government to pass the American Youth Act, which was introduced in the Senate; or the elimination of ROTC as inimical to the interests of peace; and pledging the support of the government, the United States and any war it may undertake.

Student Anti-War Strikes Were Begun Two Years Ago

After the strike, a regular strike took place at Madison Square Park, where several hundred students once more took the Oxford Oath. There a Student Council representative laid a wreath at the base of the Eternal Light with the words: "We are returning the land to the French for their loss.

Many prominent educators, including sixteen college presidents, have openly endorsed the strike, and students are holding sympathetic demonstrations in England, France, Belgium, Puerto Rico and other countries.
