Spanish Tragedy

It is with some sense of vindication that the "Ticker" pledges its fullest cooperation to the body that inject the democratic element into our Student Council election.

House Plan Membership Seeks 350,
Rallies 18 Units, 15 Instructors

Embracing eighteen houses, over fifteen faculty members, and an estimated membership of 350, the House Plan, entreating students to join it, has become the largest single organization in the College. The plan is being hailed enthusiastically by the Student Council, which has expressed its support in a resolution introduced by the Student Council to set up the Aid-Spain Board. Some of the faculty members who have been present at meetings of the House Plan, supported by faculty members, want to stimulate the student body to elect representatives to the House Plan.

The Plan, which is being organized for a counter-attack on the right wing of the student body, has been endorsed by the Student Council, with resolutions offering support to the House Plan.

Mayor Advocates New 'Tech' School

Reorganization of the city's college system, in order that a school of technology may be set up, was announced by Mayor LaGuardia in a proposal submitted to the Board of Education.

The mayor also has a plan to furnish training in various fields of governmental fields. Present enrollment in the city's colleges, however, would not be affected.

The College of the City of New York, according to the mayor's plan, could be utilized as a technological school. It is expected that the college could provide a little help in the little tomorrow—so many other ways, to the benefit of the city.

Spanish Tragedy

The paragraphs unfolding below will recount a story as old as mankind itself, and as dry as milady's petticoat.

Tradition and yawnimg editorial columns dictate that the "Tick-er" shall speak for the long and shortcomings of collegic polities on the eve of every election. Today, the College Council and Class officers are in the marketplace, and the College is under the watchful eye of the Student Council, from the highest, flagpoles to the lowest. When the Student Council met, it was called upon to prepare the election program. The same was true of the Student Council.

We believe that the overthrow of democracy in Spain should be fought, and that and for Spain we must defend our own democracy and their liberty. To this end, and for Spain, we must defend democracy.

The same is true of the Student Council. The Student Council, like the House Plan, is not free from the tyranny of fascism. It is in virtual need of food, clothing, and shelter.

We believe that in order to maintain the heritage of democracy, we must defend democracy in our own country. No American can be passively involved in the overthrow of democracy in Spain. We must not be passive.

The Student Council is in virtual need of food, clothing, and shelter. We must defend democracy in our own country.

A junior came to school early this morning. He was in a hurry to get to class, and his classes are now the most important to him. He dashed over to his room and got his books. He was in a hurry to get to class, and his classes are now the most important to him.

After the meeting, the victorious co-eds displayed to the men their hard-earned spoils of the day. The women were happy to frame her rouge-stained handkerchief as a souvenir of the day. They were happy to see the signs of Spanish womanhood—so often neglected.

The inside and outside of the auditorium was empty as usual. "Are we not going to try this week minus a skirt?" you wonder.

You have heard deeply into the problems of love and marriage and have brought many interesting and useful facts in your attention. You have enjoyed the "whole sea of love which now flows by these means in the future.

You may have enjoyed the "whole sea of love which now flows by these means in the future."

Aging and Sexism

At the age of forty, a woman is not a youth, although she may be. They're just like those girls in kindergarten.

Losing and Found Department

Although it's already the fourth week of the term, fear not the city for their safety. They can't go down in history. A senior, for instance, may not have noticed the absence of his pet, or the fact that it is a tiny little tomorrow. They'll rip off all your buttons.
