Propose Plan To Reorganize Commerce Center

A plan to convert the School of Business into a two-year professional school has been proposed to the faculty and several members of the Board of Higher Education, the TICKER learned last night.

The plan would abolish all liberal arts courses at the Commerce College and establish a two-year business course leading to a B.B.A. degree, modeled after the system at Columbia College. Students would take their first two years of work at another branch of the City Colleges and then be eligible for entrance into the professional school.

The plan, initiated by a small group of Professors, was first presented to several members of the Board of Higher Education and was then considered at a special session of the College faculty last Thursday. After lengthy deliberation, the faculty took no action on the proposal.

Upon learning of the plan and the faculty meeting, George Weisman, editor-in-chief of the TICKER, sent a communication to the faculty urging them to insist on student opinion on the plan before taking action upon it.

A similar plan was suggested by Professor Guy Snider of the Economics department last fall at the SC-TU Forum on curriculums. His suggestion at the time also envisaged a two-year professional School of Business, and was received by the faculty with approval.

ASU Launches Roll Call for Human Rights

By Jane W. Popper

Believing that the progress of American education is indissolubly fused with the fate of American democracy, the American Student Union of the School of Business has launched its campaign to add 3,000 names to the Human Rights Roll Call, in signal support of governmental agencies working to extend democracy.

The national drive to obtain a quarter of a million signatures has officially closed February 12 and already endorsed by prominent educator, legislators, and civic leaders, calls for a program "to make democracy meet human needs and guarantee human rights." Seven points are set forth:

1. The promotion of literacy and the attainment of equality of educational opportunity.
2. The support of cultural activities accessible to the people.
3. The conservation of human resources through jobs and social insurance.
4. The public provision of medical care for all the people.

President Gano Dunn of Cooper Union, an alumnus of City College, will speak on "The Future of Education in a Democratic Society" at an ASU meeting this Friday.

The Board of Education, Monday, reaffirmed reappointment to Bingham & Arm after its City College Administrative Committee had voted three days earlier for reappointment of Arm as a tutor in the Department of Government and Sociology.

The Board reaffirmed the decision of its Executive Committee that a tutor appointed for a fourth year shall not receive tenure unless he has met the residence requirements for the Ph.D. degree. Under this interpretation of its tenure by-law the Board reaffirmed eighteen tutors to the instructional staff and in each case denied permanent tenure.

The Administrative Committee had considered Mr. Arm's case for two meetings, finally voting 4 to 1 for reappointment without tenure. This was based on (1) recommendations from the Government Department committee on appointments and the college committee on Faculty Personnel and Budget, and (3) the Inter-

Garden Battle To Close Season

The 1933-34 basketball season makes its close bow this Wednesday night, Madison Square Garden, amid the pomp, tradition, and excitement that customarily surrounds the annual City-N.Y.U. clash.

No basketball game creates as much furor as this "Army Navy" of the hoop pastime. This is the twenty-sixth meeting between the two schools and the Violets boast a 14 to 10 lead over Army in consecutive victories in as many years. It is the longest series City has posted over Army.

The series always provided finishers and fans with overflow galleries and jam-packed engagements. The difference between victory and defeat is a matter of a few inches, a few points. The total margin of victories for the Violets is but twelve points.

The Cannons, to date, have won 11 games and lost 6. The Beavers record 10 victories and 6 defeats. Comparative scores average at 80 to 70 or 82 to 75.

For Succor by Seniors

Compliance with the above call received the ten per cent plurality of the City Colleges and then by substantial margins last week.
