The Class of 1940

An Editorial

We were born at the end of the World War, too late to help "Save the world for Democracy." Stalin's cotton manufactur- ers were given priority over those for food and clothing. The U.S. Navy was not able to get enough steel to build a battleship. Our country was faced with a shortage of aluminum and rubber. Our schools and colleges were closed down. The United States was not yet at war.

But in 1940 a new generation was born upon the American stage, a generation which now goes through elementary school, high school, and college. It is just beginning to appreciate life. It is beginning to realize what is good and what is bad. It is beginning to realize that it has the power to change the world.

But there are those who have other ideas. With their billion dollar war budget, they have创下 trillions of dollars. But they are not waste away; they are being prepared to shamelessly drag America into World War II.

It seems as though they've given us just enough time to be graduated from college.

Elect Schoenholz Ticker Chief

Election of Jerry Schoenholz, '41, and Howard Wenzman, '42, as acting business manager of The Ticker was announced last Friday at the Fred Waring broadcast, at which time President P. F. Damon, chairman of The Ticker, Association, will serve until October when the new business manager will be elected by the students.

Professor Damon, speaking on the topic of "A short history of The Ticker," said: "We felt that of the candidates the one that seemed most qualified to do the job was Jerry Schoenholz."

Former Ticker Columnist Completes Autobiography

By Maxwell Rheinweig '38

I now feel like a blood brother of the Harvey I. syllabus, over which the students and instructors at 8 p.m. for my thousand years of history per hour. I have to condense my literary career into a few hundred words, and in addition, I have to condense the new generation, tell a few jokes and something sneaky in a good way.

Last week I received a police ultimatum from the editors and directors of The Ticker, demanding that I complete the autobiography and get the hell out of my office. This is the last issue, chum!

I won't come out, then, but tell me how the editors and management office of The Ticker has been doing. I have heard nothing from any of the editors. I have heard nothing from any of the management office of The Ticker.

I'm not against writing articles, but I'm against writing articles about myself. I'm not against doing a joke, but I'm against doing a joke about myself. I'm not against doing something new, but I'm against doing something new about myself.

Ex-Tickerite Predicts Future

At the final meeting of the term on Thursday, the Hebrew Society of the School of Business, previously known at 1555 Broadway, presented recordings of international music written in the 20th century.

The Jewish Culture Foundation arranges social functions, forums and round-table discussions at which men in politics, the arts and business gather.

In a farewell gesture to the College, Mr. David Goldstein of the Music Department directed the final program of the Hebrew Union last Friday at 10. In room 68, Mr. Goldstein presented recordings of international music written in the 20th century.

The United States was represented by George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" and selections from "Porgy and Bess." As a tribute to Austria, Mr. Goldstein played a record of"Die Feuerflammen.""Mendelssohn's "Schwanengesang" and "Nonet" by the young Russian composer Monsalvat. Ravel's "Bolero" concluded the program.
