Lawyer Intimates Faculty Influenced Canning's Story

Faculty Elections Revised; Need President Approval C

In a move calculated to give the city college presidents practically dictatorial power over the choices of department chairmen, the Board of Education last Tuesday nullified the democratic practice of choosing the chairmen adopted by the board three years ago.

New Election Thursday

The upper class president election, scheduled for Thursday but postponed because too few candidates had applied for the position, was once again delayed until Friday when House members would vote on the proposal.

CANNING WAS INTIMIDATED; HINT AT WEISMAN HEARING

Washington, D.C., October 2, 1929

Mr. Canning was reported to have been given an opportunity to present his case on October 1st, but declined an offer of a settlement on that day.

Mr. Canning's case was reviewed by the Appellate Court of the United States, which reversed the decision of the lower court. The case was remanded for a new trial.

Mr. Canning's attorney, Mr. John B. Cohen, stated that his client would continue to resist the actions of the government as long as possible.

The Department of Justice announced that it would continue its efforts to secure the conviction of Mr. Canning on charges of conspiracy and contempt of court.

Meanwhile, the National Council of Women continued its investigation of the case and urged the President to take action to prevent further attacks on the press.

The case of Canning vs. United States continues to attract public attention and will be closely watched by the legal profession.
