Goodwin Against Approval
Of College Store Contract

By Rona Cobin

"I can unequivocally say that I will not sign any contract with the College store unless the highest authority in the city has seen it. I can not take the slightest criticism from that city with a union. We do not need a union to get what the employees deserve."

Thus stated Mr. John B. Goodwin, business manager of City College, when asked his position in the matter of union representation for the College with employees.

The College Store Committee, an advisory board consisting of four students and an equal number of faculty members, with faculty chairman, met on Saturday to discuss the matter of recognizing the unionization of the employees in the College Store. The objections were made by the students.

The store, after remitting their grievances to Mr. Goodwin and the committee for more than a month, finally decided that there was nothing left but to recognize the demands, for better and more fair working conditions were due the workers. Although the Teachers Union and desire for their goals in the quickest possible time, the employees have not yet agreed on a contract. The union has been given as a budgetary item.

The Business Manager considers the union an unnecessary burden on the school, feeling that the savings in wages, the workers, and higher productivity must bring the union into the existing situation. According to Mr. Goodwin, the ideal state of affairs is a relationship such as that which exists between the Electrical and Elevators Union. This is a setup where the employees are organized themselves as merely and air.
