Wright's GI Proposal: College While Serving

By Ira Bernstein

A system which would enable the students of this and other colleges to remain students, while serving in the army was presented by President Harry N. Wright at the first Convocation of the spring term. It consisted of drafting all eighteen-year-olds and then making available to them the opportunity of attending college.

After this period, the students would enter active service. One difficulty with this idea, Pres. Wright pointed out, is that for a period of two years the armed forces would probably have a large cut in the manpower ordinarily available for active service.

"It is probable that the reduction in the enrollment of schools in following semesters will not exceed 20-25%, "Pres. Wright said.

In speaking about the proposed accelerated program of other colleges, Pres. Wright said that a student can now finish his college career here in three years, without any acceleration. By attending summer school and carrying a full 11-credit program, a student can graduate in three years. In this way it is possible for many students to finish their college education before entering the armed forces.

Pres. Wright's speech was on "The Draft, the College and You."

He mentioned that the nation must be mobilized, that industry, science and other institutions must be able to meet defense needs.

One of the other pertinent points which he raised was the legislation of mobilization. He stated that "we cannot drop our tools and rush to grab a rifle to defeat the enemy. In this crisis we must keep a home front of manpower."

The Convocation was opened with an address by Dean Norton to enlarge, freshmen. The Dean stated that they were entering a great school and that this Convocation was one of the ways in which "the new members would be greeted in the fellowship of the School."

This speech was followed by two songs rendered by the "Twins, the Brothers in Arms". The second was "When You Were a Tulip" and "Shine on Harve Moon."

President Wright's address followed the community singing.

Teard Recommends Combining New York City Colleges

Coordination of the four municipal colleges into a single city university, under the direction of a chancellor, was proposed by Dr. Ordway Tead, chairman of the Board of Higher Education. The recommendation was contained in a two-year report released Monday.

The four municipal colleges Brooklyn, City, Hunter and Queens—have their own presidents and enjoy almost complete autonomy, at present.

If Dr. Tead's proposals were adopted, the aggregate enrollment of the city university would exceed 75,000, thereby making it the largest school in the nation. At present New York University, with an enrollment slightly below 60,000, is the largest.

In his report, Dr. Tead asserted that the responsibilities concerned with public higher education in New York were not now in the hands of any single individual. He said that he has tried to keep up with the many activities, but they have tended to be the points of a blown chairman.

"It is clear," continued Dr. Tead, "that they have now reached a magnitude and variety which make it impossible for them to be efficiently handled in the absence of a full-time salaried executive whose duties would be those of over-all internal coordination, finance, public relations and guidance of the development of new facilities, resources and relationships.

"There is just more administration of a highly important nature to be done than we are now equipped to do," concluded Dr. Tead.

Four Game Trip Ends
With Loyola Encounter

By Ralph Rehmet

The City College basketball team finishes its four-game road trip when it encounters Loyola of Chicago in the windy City, Saturday, and then returns to New York to play Fordham at the 69th Regiment Armory Monday night.

Loyola is an unpredictable team that may give the Beavers some trouble, especially on the Chicago court. So far this season they have been playing hot-and-cold ball, lately cold.

Last week they took a 23-point beating from Holy Cross.

It's hard to graduation—the whole starting five of last year is gone—the new coach, Johnny Jordan built his current five around Nick Klaas and Dee Hansen.

Nina is a rugged, 6-3, forward who turns saucy shots from any point outside the Hill have lacked consistency and have only flashed their top form in a few games. Their 13-6 record shows wins over such as Villanova, Muhlenberg Army and Brooklyn College.

Leading the Rams is Bill Carlson, big 6-8 junior who beat all of the highly touted Met soph centers. Roman, Bob Zawolski and Mel Seeman, when he opposed them last year. He was slow getting into shape but has his top form in recent encounters.

Another strong man on the Rams is Fred Christ, regarded by many as one of the top Met players.

Beavers Crush Crusaders...

thrown up by the Holy Cross Crusaders, the Beavers could only gasp a gut-wrenching field goal by Eddie Roman as they trailed 8-6.

Roman with two sets and Layne with a hook held the margin even as the Cross countered with a hanger, a set and two fouls to make the score 11-12 after eight minutes of frantic up-and-down play.

Compelling field goals by Dave Nangle and Ronnie Nadel made the score 17-14 at the ten-minute mark. Three foul shots, a Crusader basket by Jim Dilling and a set by Hofmstroem tied the score for the second time at the thirteen-minute mark.

Brodie.

As Lavender was played before the game started, the basketballers showed they knew their alma mater when they heard it.
