While some raises are due to the teaching staffs, though about 100 of the persons effectuated an agreement to the end that any indigent students may be corrected.

Holman, Team Starred At Annual 'NYU' Rally

By Steve Mann

It's sports time again at Pauline Edwards Theatre, Thursday, when City College basketball fans and fanatics stage the annual Beat NYU Rally.

Bud Palmer, ace WPIX sportscaster, will MC the Rally, introducing Nat Holman, the basketball team to the gathered throng. Palmer sparked Princeton University and the New York Knickerbockers with jump shots before he turned from the basketball lanes to the air-waves.

President Gallagher

President Gallagher has discussed such renewal of the series between the intra-city foes. The Hall of Famers have taken 32 of the 41 games over the last four. The Rally is sponsored by the 45 Club and TICKER.

Grant College Large Bequest

The Baruch School has received $300,000 from the residuary estate of Mark Morton to create the "Morton Wollman Foundation," it was announced by President Gallagher. According to the terms of the agreement, the money will be invested in various undertakings, and the interest obtained from these investments will be used for the following purposes:

"To establish and maintain a chair or professorship," for the teaching of business and commerce, or to establish and maintain a department for research work with reference to commerce and business.

To give prizes to persons for achievement in the art of commerce; or to enable former students of the Baruch School to do graduate work in commercial science and commerce; or to found and maintain a scholarship program to enable worthy students to study commerce and business at the Baruch School.

Mr. Wollman, who died on July 11, 1924, stipulated in his will that a "Residuary Fund" be established, and the interest coming into this fund be paid to his brothers, since deceased, to do with as they like.

The brothers decided that on their death the money in this fund should go to the Baruch School because "our brother Morton's ambitions and activities were largely in and connected with commerce and banking, therefore we feel that his residuary estate should be devoted, in his name, to the advancement of the science of business and commerce."

Another fact which influenced them in giving the money to the Baruch School is that "The Baruch School has been and is so helpful to so many young men and women of very limited means to provide for useful and successful careers."

Cityite That Hills:

Cityite DisCOVERS "Uraninite"

* The old prospector's aim, "There's gold in them there hills," has taken on a new meaning—ask Bartholomew Barry Silvers.

The gold has become uranium, "there that hills" have become the home confines of New York state, and Barry Silvers has recovered some of the valuable ore. The discovery was made at August and was recently confirmed by the U.S. Department of Interior, Bureau of Mines and the American Museum of Natural History, where one of the samples is now on display.

Barry, a management production major, became interested in the uranium hunting business while in the army. He discovered uranium, similar to pitchblende, was found embedded in pegmatite, which is similar to granite, and contains more than twofifteenths. (This is good, according to those who should know.)

Barry's army experience included an appearance on Ed Sullivan's Toast of the Town in 1958 as a member of the Fort Monmouth drill team. He also played for the Fort's baseball team alongside such diamond stars as Carroll "Whistling" Ford, pitcher for the Yankees, and Mule Haas, formerly of the Philadelphia Phillies. Prior to his army days he was a student at Hunter College.

Barry, who revealed the location of his claim to prevent a modern "Yukon rush," now holds an option for the mineral rights—this is a satisfactory agreement between the mineral owner and property owner.

"If Geiger counters out after all, there's uranium in that out," Barry said.

Brooklyn Blasts City, 92-70; CCNY Slated To Face Rams

There is no joy at City College—the once mighty Beavers have lost again.

The Brooklyn College basketball team, once a perennial floor mat for the powerful Beavers, established its current supremacy, Friday evening over the City cagers by handing them their eleventh loss of the season, 92-70. The Beavers suffered additional humiliation last Tuesday night when Hunter topped them, 72-70, at the Hawk’s gym.

In the Friday night encounter, against the Kingsmen, Coach Nat Holman, who has used a different starting lineup in the last several games, to no avail, started with Sid Levy at center, Ralph Scheffian and George Jensen as forwards, and Joe Bennardo and Stan Friedman as guards. This combination worked out well for about 11 minutes of the first half. Then things began to happen.

Levy, who picked up three personal fouls in the first few minutes, was benched and saw limited action for the rest of the evening. With the score, 25-24, in favor of Brooklyn, and eight minutes to go in the first half, the Kingsmen went off of a 19-point tear while City pickered up at the scorers table in regard to Beaver timeouts, and some deadly shooting by Ira Schwartz, who scored 31 points, a Hunter record, put them their eleventh loss of the season, 92-70. The Beavers are Bob Silber and Lewis Bennardo, playing only six.

A fine display of shooting by both the Baruch Street basketball team its fourth victory of the season started the Columbia University junior varsity by a 6-0 count, Wednesday afternoon, and the Lions' court.

The Beavers took the lead and were never in serious danger as they rolled up 25-25 advantage at halftime.

Coach George "Red" Wa, Business Beavers proved to all business as they maintained their advantage throughout the second half despite several desperate efforts by the Lions to pull the game out in the final minutes.

The Beavers shot-handed, who look prettier and perform more diligently with an increasing number of City College rooters backing them, gave us these directions to the Fordham gym: Take the 1 to 149 Street and 3rd Avenue for the 3rd Avenue train to Fordham Road, or ride the IND “D” train West 149 Street and walk east on Fordham to 3rd Avenue. If you lost, hop in a cab and yell "Fordham University!" can’t miss it.
