Eleven Baruchians Elected to Collegiate 'Who's Who'

Eleven Baruch School students will be listed in the edition of "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities," published each year by the Department of Student Life. The five upper seniors elected are Jerome Greenberg, Harvey Isaacs, Donald Jacobson, and Nathan. The six lower seniors listed are Bob Becker, Dalch, Paula Goodman, and Kwakler, Ilia Rau and Audrey Weinberg, "quotenewly and for the first time." The $10 fee for the year, which is to be paid in advance, includes a year "Who's Who" asks college and university, is used to select number of students who have "outstanding scholarship, leadership potential, and citizenship future promise." In addition to these attributes, the scholarship emphasis on participation in extracurricular activities.

CCNY Report Surveys Migration of Industries

A City College report issued last week asserted that public and private agencies in New York have not done enough to "sell" the city as an industrial center and prevent the migration of factories to other states. The $43 per-page report, based on a three-year survey of location problems, was issued as the first of a series of seventeen reports on metropolitan problems by the College's New York Area Research Council. The Council is headed by Professor Oscar I. Jan-ner, Director of the Division of Graduate Studies in the College of Liberal Arts and Science, and is funded by a large amount of the City's Department of Economic Development.

The report said that although New York is as much an industrial center as it is a commercial, financial and cultural center, public agencies in the metropolitan area and particularly in the city, are not sufficiently sympathetic to and conscious of manufacturing industry as a vital force in preserving the community as a viable one.

Contrasting the lack of "industrial promotion" with local public and private agencies with the aggressiveness shown by other cities in other parts of the country, Dr. Griffin's report concluded that efforts "to induce

Mercury' Labeled Vulgar
By Publications Committee

The Advisory Committee on College Publications, a board established to restrict "Mercury," has condemned the last four issues of the humor magazine as "full and unrelenting in the extreme, interspersed with vulgar offense to common decency and good taste, and frequently pornographic."

The Committee also recommended that the College's authorities "consider the possibility of hearing . . . to afford opportunity to any persons who may wish to discuss the standards and perform of "Mercury" to do so." The Committee believed that the burden of proof rests with those who wish to continue "Mercury," which apparently only to bring discredit to the College and to the publication.

Frank Behrens and Saul Soffer, student editors of "Mercury," in a prepared statement, objected to the "ill-conceived use of the sweeping terms and expressions as 'decency and good taste and the making of the public" and, by this standard, the editors, who by this standard must justify their every action to all who question them; this is clearly a breach of all the tenets of American and British freedom and independence. Perhaps the students who wish to continue "Mercury," which appears to consider the plaintiff innocent until proven guilty."

The Board will hold a special meeting in the Uptown Center during the week of January 20. Professor William T. Levy, faculty advisor to "Mercury" at the Baruch School, refused to make any comment on this situation, stating that he wished to save all his ammunition for the hearings. Professor Gallagher did not speculate on the possible outcomes of the hearings. He said that "the future is open, and no one can predict it."

Graduates of City Invade Television

A survey of the television field reveals that City College has produced the largest batch of talent of any similar school in the nation. This mass of talent is known as "Charydale," a name that was inspired by the Casa of St. Charydly cut their hair to resemble the style of the popular actor, Tyrone Power.

The first official meeting of the club consisted of three members interested in furthering a cause in the theater. The club, formed in a temporary refuge from the thoughtless censorship of the old Beefsteak Club, will probably be known as the "Thirty Club." The "Thirty Club" is usually the name of a club composed of three men. Thomas Brennan, of the legal department, Dr. Benjamin Fine, of the administration, and Fred Hedges, who is doing editing work of the New York Times, are the founders. One fine evening a few months after the organization of the club, Dr. Fine resigned prior to a College humor magazine, the "Killing Star," which was published in November 1955 to recapture the lead, 131-11. The school year has been pretty eventful for sports. Edward S. Doherty, the varsity basketball team's point guard, had a chance to win many contests free of charge. The most important news, however, came November 20th. The team also earned second place in the Eastern Intercollegiate Soccer Conference. Not Quite

If you're not familiar with the term "cap," it means that you're living too close to a newspaper you can't read. The term refers to the yearbook for the University of Chicago. This year, the yearbook won't be published until the spring. It's not in my best columns. I'm only a leg man anyhow, and the Chicago is more of a leg man than my best columns. City Must Be 'Up' For Dickinson Tilt

Coach Dave Polansky's Dickinson College University Friday night at Wingate Hall, Up.

The Beavers will meet Fairleigh Dickinson College frosh December 21 at Brooklyn College's 6-7 court. A season match before the varsity tussle, The "Baby Beavers" loss, 72-69.

City was only one point behind at half-time, 29-28, but as the second period started, the Kingsmen moved into a five-point lead. The teams traded baskets until two field goals by Wel, the winners, and one by Al Lieber brought the Lavender neophytes to within one point, 49-48.

The game continued close with Barry Klanly and Lieber pumping in baskets for the Lavender, while Bochner sparked for Brooklyn.

Student-Faculty Hassle Set For Gymnasium Tomorrow

Any basketballs you hear banging off the walls of the TICKER office or the Intra-Mural Board office are only practice shots being taken by the various students preparing for the Student-Faculty game tomorrow in Hansen Hall at 12:15.

The students will be short in height this year. Tallest players are Harvey Isaac, 6-1, and Shelly Brand, 6-0. Others on the squad are Larry Greenberg, Stew Kampelmacher, Richie Kwartler, Steve Mann, Lou Rose and Sam Schiff. Kwartler and Mann are the co-captains.

For the faculty, Sam "the Man" Randholt, Jerry "Blood" Klot, Dr. "Hurry-up" Henderson, Yustin "Slap 'em Down" Strutis, and Andrew "Lolli-Pop" Lavender have accepted invitations, so far.

Marv Rose and Syd Levy, both of the varsity basketball team, will also play.

The faculty has won the last six encounters. Last year's score was 62-46. Jerry Klot was awarded a trophy for his outstanding ability and spirit. The year before the faculty defeated the students 56-41. Klot was the difference in the game, too, scoring fifteen points.

Steve Mann says "This year will be different. We know Klot likes to play hanger so we're going to station one of our men on him this game.

"If that doesn't work," Kwartler says, "we'll put two men on Klot. The back with the rest of the team. They're no good any way."

The faculty says "We'll show those students we haven't been taking Geritol for nothing. We're gonna win!"

It has been rumored that the students will use a new weapon this year: one player on the shoulders of another, in order to compensate for the lack of height.

The students' reply to this charge: "Pure rumor, pure rumor, that's all."
