reveal Nazi Flight from Hungary

An Uptown Hungarian student revealed to THE TICKER Wednesday, how a number of Nazis managed to cross the Hungarian border during the revolts and disguise themselves as Hungarian citizens.

Disregarding the conflicting reports in the metropolitan newspapers that the Nazis had played a part in initiating the struggle, the twenty-one-year-old Hungarian, who for security reasons will be referred to solely as Andrew, stated, "During the struggle, the Nazis in the escalation stage of mounting tension were given the option of escape. Among those who fled from Hungary were many who found it difficult to leave by other means. Some of these Nazis managed to flee across the border with other refugees and pass themselves off as Hungarians." Andrew continued to explain that "a number of the Nazis succeeded in arriving in the United States with the first group of entering Hungarian refugees. At Camp Kilmer, New Jersey, where the refugees are quartered, the Nazis distributed themselves among the new arrivals. The worst part," Andrew stated, "is that these undetected Nazis are now breaking up, leaving behind many who are still waiting to come here."

Revealing the secret that Andrew had learned, "It started at the university asserts," Andrew explained, "that the Nazis in the United States with the first group of entering Hungarian refugees. At Camp Kilmer, New Jersey, where the refugees are quartered, the Nazis distributed themselves among the new arrivals. The worst part," Andrew stated, "is that these undetected Nazis are now breaking up, leaving behind many who are still waiting to come here."

Accounting Group Asks CPA Standards Revision

By Gary J. Brown

In 1962, the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants issued its first standards bulletin for the profession. Since then, the institute has issued more than 800 of these standards, covering a wide range of topics from ethics to auditing.

However, the standards have not kept pace with technological changes in the profession. In fact, several members of the institute's accounting standards committee have called for the introduction of computerized standards. They argue that the current standards are outdated and need to be revised.

The standards committee has been working on a new set of standards, but it has faced resistance from some members of the profession. They argue that the new standards are too complex and will be difficult to implement.

But the group has坚持以口气 attractive arguments. They say that the new standards will improve the quality of the profession and make it more competitive.

Seminars have been held in various locations to educate members of the profession about the new standards. And the group has been working with the government to ensure that the new standards are implemented.

A Strange Fascination

By Richard Kwartler

Women have a strange fascination for many. Their differences from men and their ways of looking at things are particularly interesting to those who are not used to them. Yet, there are few people who truly understand others, women included. Here are some stories of women who have captured the hearts of men.

There are three types of women: those who don't understand men, those who understand them but feel superior, and those who are devoted to men. The first type is the type that most men hate, and the others who have to be rescued. The men in the second type are usually quite talented and understanding, and the others are the minority. The last type are the most appreciated.

Most of the stories in this book are about women, but there are also a few about men. The stories are from the perspective of the woman, and the names have been changed to protect the innocent.

The Baruchin has shown that he is not a man for public appearances, but he feels that his work deserves more recognition than it is getting. We should not forget the difficulty and risk he is taking.

On Commercialism

It is difficult to get Dr. Reilly's proposals through in basketball. It is even more difficult in an educational context. That is why the Baruchin has shown that he is not a man for public appearances. We should not forget the difficulty and risk he is taking.

Indeed, the situation rests on a multitude of values. If the editorial policy of the magazine, the copy andorman, and the annual budget are all questionable, then the entire institution is in danger. After all, the Baruchin was elected to be the President of the City University of New York. What is happening to the institution if we are not paying attention?

We Want More

It has been true, and is true, a long time since we were a university. We are working harder than ever to make sure that the students know that their education is as valuable as any other. We are working to make sure that we are making the most of our time, which is a waste of time.

Tootsie's downtown location was willed by William bulldog Turner Levy and bequeathed by the American Jewish Committee.

Mr. Levy, presiding the Brotherhood's business meeting, said his foundation to the group's interests. He related that he was inspired to create the center because he realized that he was inspired by the aims of the organization. He hoped to fill the gap in the social life of the students by providing a place where they could meet and discuss the problems of their lives.

Mr. Levy emphasized that the center would be a place for the students to express their views and that they would be encouraged to share their ideas.

The center would be open to all students, regardless of their beliefs, and would be operated by a group of students who would be elected by the membership.

When you want a basketball team to develop over the span of a season or a career, you want to see the team develop from position and posture, you want to feel it, too, because you wonder just what went on in that game, especially with the team's development.

City College played was probably its worst game of the season against Wagner of Manhattan and lost what could have been the making of the most spectacular comeback in the season's history.

After four years of working on the schedule, watching the top teams play in the Round of 32, the City College basketball team got itself in line for a bid to the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament. This bid was secured through maneuvers against Wagner, Adelphi, Brooklyn, Kings Point, Filander, the University of Carolina, and the University of Chicago.

The team lost to Columbia by a big score, to Brooklyn by seven points, to Rider by six, to Manhattan by four points in two engagements. Yet, the record is good. Team and St. Francis, and both teams and both schools have shown that the team's development is promising.

City College is eligible for the NCAA tournament. Both teams are eligible for the NCAA tournament. The National Collegiate Athletic Association invited the team to make a display of its talent.

But now it appears as if City College won't get a bid. It is true that the varsity contest at 6:30.

This week City College will close its basketball season with two of its most important games.

St. John's University of Brooklyn at the Martin Van Buren High School court. This week will be the squad's final tune-up before the New York University clash.

The game, originally scheduled for Decatur Gym, the Redmen's home court, was switched to the Queens floor because of the added seating capacity available.

St. John's, sporting a 12-7 record, is a well-rounded City College team. Their points led by a 6-10 sophomore, Alan Seiden, averaging 12.6 points per game. His back court mates, shared with Dick Dukett, a 19.3 per game scorer, are the flashes Seiden in scoring with a 12.2 average. Mike Patric, 4-9 center, and Bill Chry- stal are averaging 11.3 per game.

Levy Main Hope

Syd Levy, 6-9, will be the Beavers' best hope for victory over the rampaging Johnnies. Levy, averaging 17 points per game in the last seven games, is the hardest part of the Lavender schedule.

St. John's won last year's game, 77-69, and holds a 21-14 edge in the rivalry which started in 1914. City's last win came in 1964, when Merv Shorr led the Beavers to a 64-60 upset victory.

When the Beavers meet the New York University Violets, Tuesday night at the Fordham Gym, they will have a lot in common with the man who has been experienced sitting on a dynamite keg smoking a lit cigarette.

The powerful Beavers at any time may explode into one of the most lethal destructive powers around. They possess good height, fine ball handling, kills, shot-eye shooting, a strong defense, and in Cal Ramsey, .

With 6-4 Bob Brown and 6-4 "Gazoo-Kid" Ramsey at the forwards, 6-7 Don Knapp at center, six-footers Nidds and Johnny Bureck at the guards, the Violets have five starters that could star on any team. However, Ramsey, seems destined to break all existing NYU scoring and rebounding records and is a sure fire bet for All-American honors in 1958 and 1959.

Nidds is the defensive ace who has bottled up such All-American stars as Rod Hunsdon, Lenny Rosenbluth, and Guy Rodgers. Bureck turns the back to no one as an outsider shooter, and driver Knapp transfers from North Carolina, and Brown who was out last season with a bad leg, provide inside scoring power and strong rebounding.

Manhattan Edges Beavers

"I am worried about Rutgers," Beaver Coach Dave Polansky said before Saturday's game at New Brunswick. He had good reason too, as a capacity crowd saw Scarlet forward Dick Hirschfield toss in a fifteen-foot shot with two seconds left in overtime to give Rutgers its first victory over City since 1929, 64-62.

Marv Rose, who saw very little action, tried a desperation shot in the remaining second, but it rimmed the basket.

City, ahead by 12 points at one time, saw the lead rapidly diminish during the second half. Hustling all the time, the Jerseyites drew even on two free throws by Ralph Rayard, who was high scorer, with 24 points, with 40 seconds left in regulation time. Jim Mazzatrollo had previously missed a foul that would have sewn up the game, and with two seconds left in regulation time, Rose missed a jump.

Almost But Not Quite

In the overtime, Dutch Wermuth canned four points after Hirschfield's shot.

Tuesday night, the Beaver's almost the highly rated Manhattan College Jaspers, as a last minute drive fell short. They lost 62-58.

The Beavers were down seven points at the half, 40-33. They went into the second half on a high note, with the score tied in five points. When Syd Levy fouled out, and Marv Rose re- jured his leg the Lavender continued to battle, but were hard hit by a last minute "freeze" by the Jaspers.
