Isaacs Supports Aid For Higher Education

By Dave Podoff

City Council Minority Leader Stanley Isaacs voted approval of various proposals for State aid to higher education, in a special interview with THE TICKER, Thursday.

Councilman Isaacs said, "I am strongly in favor of 7 or 8 million dollars, in State aid for construction of new buildings for teacher education, both at City College and Brooklyn College. He also said that the current State aid to teacher education should be continued.

Mr. Isaacs said that he was in favor of the State aid vote, but the community college lines. (In the Community College system, one-third by the State, one-third by the city and one-third by the students.) For the municipal colleges, he favored the City paying one-third and the State paying the remaining two-thirds.

He felt that the municipal colleges were unique in the fact that they are free and he hoped and wished that they could continue.

Mr. Isaacs thought that unless everyone fights for the various proposals of State aid, nothing will be accomplished. Isaacs also said that past-State bond issue for school construction should be spent for new buildings for teacher education. He also approved of State aid for studies in social work and other fields that could supply the city with more qualified teachers.

In the past week—several influential people, including Presidents of various colleges, voted over —voted over-whelmingly to support the "Youth March for Integrated Schools." The march will be held Saturday in Washington D.C.

The march will be led down Pennsylvania Avenue by Jackie Robinson, former second baseman of the Brooklyn Dodgers, and prominent football stars. Mr. Robinson has spoken at both Up-town City and Brooklyn College in an effort to stimulate interest among college students.

When the march in support of the Youth March was first presented, SC President Lerry Schiff said that if any representative of the Faculty Committee on Student Council was contrary to Council's charter, he could appeal his ruling. No rep-resentative of the Faculty views was beyond the bounds of the charter and no appeal was made.

In other business, Council approved a motion to revise its In-signium Committee. The revamped Committee will try to cut down on the number of informal meetings which some felt were unjust to the applicants. Last year's meeting lasted 45 hours.

Charity Drives Council also approved a charter amendment which would limit charity drives to those of an "educational or internal" nature. It was felt that non-educational charities were not in need of the student's contributions as were educational charities. This amendment, as are all student Council amendments, is subject to the approval of the Faculty Committee on Student Council.

Board of Higher Education Group Probes Bias Charge

A committee of six was appointed by the Board of Higher Education to investigate the anonymous charges of discrimination in faculty appointments at Queens College.

The committee was composed of six members: an appointment from the faculty, an appointment from the administration, an appointment from the students, and an appointment from the alumni.

The committee's task was to investigate the allegations of bias and discrimination in the hiring process at Queens College.

The committee's findings will be made public shortly, and the results will be presented to the faculty and administration.
The Veil of Secrecy

The Administrative Council has once again proved itself a symbol of the student organizations that would have no existence were it not for the active support of student organizations. It is difficult to determine the exact nature of the Administrative Council's role, as it is not a formal organization with a clearly defined structure. However, it appears to be a body that serves to protect the interests of student organizations and to ensure that they adhere to the policies and regulations set forth by the university administrators.

Unfortunately, we cannot completely exempt City College from the veil of secrecy that surrounds the Administrative Council. The Administrative Council is a group of influential people who are responsible for making decisions that affect the Student Organization Program. These decisions are made behind closed doors, and the reasons for these decisions are not always clear. This has led to a great deal of speculation and controversy among student organizations.

In addition, the Administrative Council is responsible for overseeing the Student Organization Program, which includes the funding of student organizations. This is a significant source of revenue for student organizations, and the Administrative Council has the power to allocate this funding in ways that are not always transparent.

The need for transparency in the Student Organization Program is apparent, and it is important that the Administrative Council be held accountable for its actions. This will require a greater level of involvement by the student organizations themselves, as well as increased scrutiny from the university administration.

Letters

To the Editor of THE TICKER:

The administrative council was very kind in giving us admission to the New York Times scholarship, however, I was sorry to find that we had not been selected for admission. Admission to the New York Times scholarship is a privilege for which many students apply, and it is disheartening to find that we have not been chosen.

However, I would like to express my gratitude to the Administrative Council for their kind considerations, and I hope that we may have the opportunity to apply for the scholarship in the future.

Sincerely yours,

March on Saturday

The responsibility of citizenship does not end with the casting of a vote. It is the responsibility of all of us to be aware of the issues that affect our lives. This is true in the classroom, where we are called upon to make decisions that have significant consequences.

This Saturday, students of all ages will take part in a massive march on Saturday's campus in an effort to show the community that students of the nation are aware of the drastic problem which faces our school system.

We urge each and every Baruchan to look around them and see that their problems are not unique. If they are, then it is too easy for us to be complacent and for our generation of American students down March 21.

City's three-year winning streak in Metropolitan League competition was snapped Saturday in Lewisohn Stadium by a fired-up Pratt Institute soccer team, 2-2. The City College team was tied by the "best team in Pratt history" according to Pratt coach Harry Kollar, who was anxious to develop his game and give some time in goal to his goalkeeper. "He had a strong voice and the ability to give a loud "Allagoo!""

The46 Club, the Baruch School's spirited cheerleading organization, will celebrate its 12th anniversary with a trip to Temple University in Philadelphia, November 1. The College's national soccer co-champions, will play the New York Agricultural and Technical Institute tomorrow at the Aggies' home in Farmingdale, Long Island. Coach Manny Rolnick said that his Aggies have "spirit that isn't bad; we hope to improve on our play this year." The team played three games—and lost all three. They were stopped by City College, 2-2; Hofstra, 3-2; and the Aggies, 5-1. The Aggies didn't fare too well in their league opener against Brooklyn Tech, 1-3. The only two wins were against Kings Point, 2-0, and Orange County Community College, 1-0. They are relying on a number of players to set them on the right track. Captain Charlie Kollar, a 22-year-old senior, was the only returner on the New York All-State team; Kollar is the goalie.

In addition to the veterans, the Aggies will be counting on Tony Viola, a 5-11, 195-pound senior who plays left half-back and Joe Katz, a strong 170-pound center-half-back.

"With Lewis and Ascher in there, we're in pretty good shape as far as the backboards are concerned," said Ascher. "Most likely we'll travel to such places as Boston, Chicago, Detroit, and Philadelphia to be target for the team." The coaches are confident and are aiming for the team win a close game from the Cadets, 3-2.
