Plan Adopted to Give Money To Political, Religious Units

A new Baruch School plan has been put into effect to permit social action, political, and religious groups to receive money for their activities. This money will not come from the Student Activity Fee, but from the student Council Bootstrap Reserve. (According to SC President Bob Nadel, there is $2000 in the Reserve.)

The plan was decided upon at a meeting of student leaders and Professors Robert K. Stranathan and Clem M. Thomas.

Dr. Stranathan stated that he saw no legal way for these organizations to receive Fee funds, so he proposed the above method.

The organizations which are affected by the ruling will file appropriations applications with Inter Club Board and requesting a regular appropriation. After the ICBC procedures are followed, Council will then have the power of veto over the application.

At the meeting, it was stressed that the plan was a stopgap one and would last only until a permanent procedure could be set up, either under the present Faculty ruling or if the Faculty were to adopt a new procedure.

The Baruch School organizations which come under the Faculty's ruling are the Christian Association, Hillel, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Newman Club, Students for Democratic Action, Student Zionist Organization, and the Young Republicans.

Dr. Stranathan also said that he did not request exemption for the Baruch School from the Faculty ruling, but others had been written by Student Council about membership lists, giving the impression that the system then in force was not satisfactory.

It was also suggested that he could not tell the Faculty that the Baruch School was satisfied and could make its own ruling; claiming "any fees were cut out from under me."

The Seventh Annual Conference of the National College Republicans was held at Solway House in New York on February 17. Attended by about 100 students from various parts of the United States, the conference focused on a wide range of issues relevant to college students.

The conference began with a keynote speech delivered by Dr. Robert Crook of Queens College. Dr. Crook's presentation set the stage for the day's discussions, which were designed to provide students with valuable insights and opportunities to engage with one another and with leaders in the field of politics.

Throughout the day, students participated in a variety of workshops and sessions, covering topics such as leadership, communication, and political strategy. The sessions were facilitated by experienced professionals in the field, who provided valuable guidance and advice to the attendees.

In the evening, a dinner was held to allow participants to network further and to celebrate the achievements of the conference. The dinner was followed by a social event, which provided an opportunity for students to relax and enjoy each other's company.

The conference was a significant event for the National College Republicans, as it brought together students from across the country to discuss important issues and to strengthen their commitment to the principles of the Republican Party.

Poetry

We come to City College,
To make our minds complete,
But to get an idea here
It is not easy.

— Thus far in poetry—
No learning is so urgent,
But when we are in the business
This will be clear.

— The first in our society.

The Law is Supreme

The new Baruch School is not just another addition to the bevy of educational institutions in Manhattan, though it is, of course, that. It is also the result of a long and arduous struggle, one that has been going on for years. The school is named after the man who led this struggle, Bernard M. Baruch, and it is dedicated to his memory.

The school was founded in 1924, and it was not until 1950 that it was officially opened. The opening ceremony was attended by thousands of people, and it was a fitting tribute to the man who had worked so hard to make it a reality.

The school has since become one of the most respected in the country, and its graduates are sought after by businesses and organizations all over the world. It is a testament to the vision and determination of Bernard M. Baruch that this school was able to come into existence.

The Law is Supreme because it is a symbol of the power of education to change the world. It is a symbol of the importance of having a voice in the decision-making process, and of the need to stand up for what is right.

Baruch School is a place where students can learn about the law and how it affects our lives. It is a place where they can develop the skills they need to make a difference in the world. And it is a place where they can find a community of like-minded people who are committed to making a change.

The Law is Supreme, and Baruch School is a testament to that.

Putting on a tremendous performance the Beaver men's swimming team blanked 20-3 at the 33rd pool, Saturday night.

The University's swimming team was leading 12-7 after the third event. The other poolers were not far behind as the meet was only the second out of the season.

The North Carolina boys were next on the schedule to compete. Their head coach was not in the stands but the poolers were in excellent shape.

The City poolers added 1 point to their lead which they held throughout the meet. The two teams then competed in the 200 and 100 yard freestyle events. Mike Morgan, Ken Ross, Jack Davel and Bob Weissman were the top performers. They were later on the winning 200 yard medley relay team.

The City men's relay team was the subject of conversation after the meet. They are not considered to be a serious contender for the national championship but they did a good job.

The meet was a success for the City poolers and they are looking forward to the next meet.

Beavers Top Knights, 69-65; Lose Met Crown to Brooklyn

Three and a half years ago, CCNY cager Guy Marcot was making his decision as to which college he would attend. Marcot had averaged 16 points per game on Lafayette High School's quintet while keeping a 90% scholastic average. Marcot felt that he could not try for a basketball scholarship since he was only 5'6" tall.

Marcot is 5-9 presently, and can be considered Nat Holman's "sleeping." When City was having trouble winning games early in the season, Holman found Marcot, a first-year man on the team, yearning for big time action.

Little Marcot responded well; he was the key man in CCNY's upset victory over Pace Academy and lost the Beavers to victory over LIU.

Aside from the experience he got at Lafayette, Marcot, who has been playing basketball for more than ten years, gained vital this past summer. Marcot pretty assert that his 27 points scored for Wayne in an interscholastic game was the highest in his basketball career.

Marcot decided not to take basketball during his first years at City because he wanted to devote most of his time to studies; he was taking an Engineering course at the Uptown Center. When Marcot switched to Liberal Arts this past September, he got the urge to play basketball again. Marcot said that he had felt that basketball would challenge to me.

Little Marcot, who modeled his game on the style of 5-2, was trying to fit into his high school team, thinks highly of his game. According to Marcot, "Mr. Holman knows his basketball, spoils my mistakes and thereby has made me a better player."
