Uptown Referendum Called 'Valueless' By Gallagher
A student referendum at Uptown City to have the College withdraw from the federal aid program was labeled "valueless" by President Buell G. Gallagher, Tuesday.

The referendum asks withdrawal from the 1968 National Defense Education Act until the loyalty oath and disclaimer affidavit sections of the Act are removed.

Dr. Gallagher said that the signing of the loyalty oath and disclaimer affidavit in one referendum was "confusing to the voter.

"For this reason," the President continued, "I believe the referendum is valueless and I will reject it.

President Gallagher emphasized that the College's participation in the federal program is "under protest." He reiterated that "I thought the disclaimer affidavit was unnecessary and ineffective.

Although stating that the College will do everything in its power to get the disclaimer affidavit repealed, the President pointed out that the program is "valueless" to the student body.

The President also questioned whether the College has a right to impose an oath on an individual who is in need of aid.

The President added that "I do not regard it as wise for large numbers of college students to withdraw from the federal program. Congress may feel the money is not needed and will abandon the program.

When asked whether the loyalty oath section should be repealed, Dr. Gallagher replied: "An oath of allegiance is no more unnecessary than telling your wife that you love her."

Dr. Gallagher added that if the College would withdraw from the program in protest of the positive loyalty oath, it would result in misinterpretation of the character of the student body.

President Buell G. Gallagher
Dr. Gallagher specifically noted that "150 students would not be at the College were it not for the aid program in protest of the positive loyalty oath."

City Drops Fourth Straight;
Slaughtered by LIU, 73-58

By Larry Orinco

In the second half the Blackbirds outdistanced the Beavers to speed them on to defeat in the Borough's 73-58 trouncing of City.

In the second half the Beaver defense, constantly pressing, forced the Blackbirds into a parade of misses. Guy Marcel, a second teamer, and Marty Groveman were in and out of the game, and each complained of the foul calls.

The lack of rebounding strength was caused by the early Failing
