Blood Drive
Set Today
In Lounges
By Dawne Dillon

The Blood Bank, co-sponsored semi-annually by Student Council, Alpha Phi Omega, and the Inter-Fraternity Council, accepted donations in the Oak and Marble Lounges from 10-3 today.

Paul Zarrett, chairman of the Council Blood Bank Committee, announced that all donations will be one of the best drives, "based upon which has more participants or houseplan with the most participants.

"Judging from the challenge Hunt '64 and various other fraternity time offers, I believe this evening will be one of the best drives," declared Mr. Zarrett. Two trophies will be given away. The trophies will be given to the fraternity or houseplan with the most participants and to either Central House or the Inter-Fraternity Council, depending upon which has more participants.

Polaroid cameras will be used to take photographs as the students are donating blood. All donors will receive their pictures free.

"The accepted donors will proceed into the Oak Lounge where tables will be set up for the actual blood donation. Afterwards, refreshments contributed by the School cafeteria will be served by Boosters."

Surprise! Gregory Concert Held Last Saturday Night

The Dick Gregory concert, originally scheduled for Saturday, was held instead last Saturday night.

Advance of the date of Inter-Fraternity Council's concert involved an error on the part of Mr. Gregory's agent in obligating him to two contracts at the Baruch School and one at another theater, both scheduled for the same evening.

Lawrence Handelsman '65, treasurer of I. F. C., revealed that he had received a contract from the agent, had Daniel Baumgarten '64, president of I. F. C. and Professor Keesey, faculty advisor, seen it, and returned it to the agent.

"I was not present when the contract was given to the agent, who states that he had mentioned the error to Mr. Gregory for another engagement."

After consultation with the agent, Mr. Gregory agreed to cancel his arrangements with the Baruch School; his comparative drawbacks were considered by Mr. Handelsman and Mr. Gregory and a change in plans agreed. Last Saturday was the only date that Mr. Gregory and I. F. C. could come to agreement on because of the Theatre presentations.

Donald Fried '65, as I. F. C. representative, informed THE TICKER.

Economic Changes:
Berle Lecture Scheduled March 19

"Changing Conceptions and Theories" in the American political economy will be discussed by Adolph A. Berle, professor of law at Columbia University, March 19 at noon, in 45.

The lecture will feature Professor Berle's contention that during the last thirty years there have been fundamental changes in certain presently held or formerly held economic concepts.

The contention that the meaning of "capital" has undergone a change in the minds of political economists, which has been expressed by Professor Berle, was criticized by Professor Robert Weintraub, chairman of the Department of Economics. He stated that the traditional meaning of this concept is still valid.

The "free market," declared Professor Berle, is no longer a natural condition. He claimed that governmental organization going back as far as the first amendment was not passive, but played a role in determining the condition of the economy.

Professor Thomas Karis, chairman of the Political Science Department, declared that there is "very wide public acceptance of the responsibility of the government to take every possible measure to prevent another depression as in the thirties. Full employment has become a national policy."

He added that governmental control and regulation that was imposed until recently did not have these objectives.

Dean David Newton referred to the lecture as an opportunity for an added exposure and enriched program which hopefully will be food for the intellectual life of the students.

Professor Bernard Bellush, sub-chairman of the History Department, will introduce the lecture with the Economics and Political Science Departments, Student Council, and THE TICKER.

Professor Adolph A. Berle, for regulations of the kind that Dr. Berle discussed is not new, but has existed as long as our government. He declared that governmental organization going back as far as the first amendment was not passive, but played a role in determining the condition of the economy.

"I cannot see how any student at the Baruch School can learn anything from this extremely competent man."

Many Close Contests Put Hoopsters’ Record At 8-10 for the Season

By Jeff Palca

One conclusion can be reached now that the basketball season is over: City College's opponents, once again, could not consider the Lavender a soft spot on their schedules. This is a result of the 1962-63 season, in which the team compiled an 8-10 record in a rebuilding year. Many games were close, with the outcome in doubt until the final minutes. Only a three-game losing streak toward the end of the season would limit the Lavender to 8-10. The team was not considered a threat by their opponents. The first time took place when the team played against N.C.A. University, winning 49-47.

Scoring with a fourteen-year average, the team managed to stay competitive in the second half of the season. However, the team faced several challenges, such as a significant injury to a key player. The team's strategy was to focus on defense and use their quickness to force turnovers. The team's defense kept opponents from scoring effectively, leading to several close games.

Goldberg and Wyles: Have a Lot In Common

By Jeff Palca

Jerry Goldberg and John Wyles, star basketball players from City College, have plenty in common. They are both 6-10 seniors, with Goldberg hailing from Brooklyn and Wyles from Manhattan. The two have spent most of their lives playing basketball, with Goldberg competing in the New York City High School Basketball League and Wyles playing in the United States Olympic Trials.

 Goldberg's father, a former professional basketball player, introduced him to the game at a young age. Wyles, on the other hand, grew up watching his father play in the NBA. The two players have been roommates since they entered City College, and they share a passion for the sport.

Both players are active members of the team, with Goldberg serving as captain and Wyles as a key player. Their dedication and teamwork have contributed to the team's success, with Goldberg averaging 16.5 points per game and Wyles scoring 15.2 points per game.

Every Beaver basketball buff remembers one contest as his favorite. Perhaps it was the one in which he scored 30 or more points, or the game where his team came back from a deficit to win. But for Jerry Zuckerman, the game against City College remains a memory that he will never forget. Zuckerman, a former star player for the Beaver team, scored a then-career-high 29 points in that game.

Zuckerman's performance was a testament to his skill and determination. He had been recruited by several other teams, but he chose City College because of its strong academic program and its history of producing excellent basketball players. Zuckerman's legacy continues to inspire current and future players, as he remains one of the most successful Beaver basketball players of all time.
