G-dol Sees Enrollment Crisis; School Seeks Novel Solutions

The current enrollment crisis was called "a real crisis" yesterday by Dr. Joan G-dol (Chairman-Hist.)

Dr. G-dol noted that the only method to solve the problem of expanding the College's enrollment and to meet the expected surge in enrollment "is to think of some radical new ideas on how to save space.

Her first suggestion was to remove some courses from the curriculum in order to make more room for new students. She said, "The present enrollment crisis is so serious that we cannot afford to keep adding space for new classes without making changes in our curriculum." This would be of a vast help to the students.

In addition, G-dol proposed that the school might consider offering courses in smaller sections or laboratories, where students could be placed in closer contact with their instructors.

G-dol also suggested that the school might consider offering distance education programs, such as correspondence courses or televised classes, to accommodate more students.

Another idea she mentioned was the possibility of merging some classes or departments to reduce the number of courses offered. She said, "This would allow us to offer more courses without adding more space."
Why Not?

I sure hope you make a plan for you, the student body, to enjoy the last hours of spring. In the past, when an idler would come along, a fellow would be called in to give him a little push. Now, I think the student body should be called in to give him the push, especially during the last hours of spring. It's a great hour to enjoy some good music and good company. It's also a great hour to enjoy some good food and good drink. It's a great hour to enjoy some good sun and some good air. It's a great hour to enjoy some good books and some good ideas. It's a great hour to enjoy some good sports.

The Student Council will sponsor a special session on "The Student Council," starting at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Center. The session will be open to all students, and the discussion will cover the activities of the Student Council during the past year, as well as the plans for the coming year. The session will be moderated by the president of the Student Council, and the discussion will be guided by the questions and suggestions of the audience.

Hail to the School

As we have done many times in the past, the Physical Science Club will hold its annual picnics and parties in the school's beautiful grounds. The club will provide a barbecue, and the students are encouraged to bring their own food and drinks. The picnic will begin at 2 p.m., and the party will continue until 6 p.m.

Student Council

The Student Council will meet at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Center. The council will discuss the plans for the upcoming year, and the members will elect new officers. The council will also discuss the budget for the coming year, and the members will vote on the allocation of funds. The council will also discuss the policies and procedures for the upcoming year, and the members will vote on the adoption of new policies and procedures.

For example, some faculties of the Student Council have proposed to hold meetings on campus, while others have proposed to hold meetings in the city. The council will also discuss the plans for the coming year, and the members will vote on the adoption of new plans.

Letters

The student body is invited to submit letters to the Editor of THE TICKER. The letters should be submitted by 4 p.m. on Tuesday, April 6, for publication in the next issue of THE TICKER.

St. Joe Frustrates Beavers, Lavender Fencers Go Down

By JOHN RISESTAFF

The City College fencers went down to dismal defeat against an undermanned team from Joseph's College (15-3). All afternoon, the Beavers were frustrated, as the women successfully carried their thrusts.

Miss Priscilla Prouty, captain of the St. Joe team, warmed up the girls before the match to warm up for the Beaver sabre team, which usually suffers many touches. The girls

The director of the match, Hyman Reptor, had to give repeated warnings to the Beavers to refrain from using unnecessary bodily contact. These warnings were for the most part disregarded. Even though the Beavers lost the match, most of the team did not register excessive disappointment.

Betty Bust, St. Joe's sabre, did remarkably well in the competitions. She won all three of her bouts, using her weapon to great advantage to deter the vicious attacks which were mounted against her by the impetuous Beavers.

Thelma Trampecki was a big disappointment to St. Joe's, losing all of her bouts. Miss Trampecki played aggressively and feisty, which caused her to spend most of the afternoon flat on her back. Coach Prouty admonished Thelma for her poor playing. C. E. C. Coach Ed Lavender had reported Thelma plays very well, and has great potential. Coach Ed Lavender was impressed with the performance of his team. He commented, "St. Joseph's is a tough opponent and they seem to have something we boys lack, though I can't exactly put my finger on it."

One of the contributing factors to the St. Joseph's victory was the excellent scouting job done by their manager, Sally Sutter. Sally Sutter spent most of the week before the match with various Beaver fencers, learning all she could about their techniques and teaching them some.

The Beaver, in a gesture of unprecedented sportsmanship, offered to celebrate their St. Joseph's victory with the St. Joe fencers in a nearby tavern. As night fell on Wingate gym, both teams walked out arm in arm in a spirit of camaraderie.

Beaver Captain George Webster often talked the "Coliseum" because it was built by the Beaver Indians under the direction of the Romans in 157 B.C. gets a new home.

For the first time since its construction, there will be additions to the City College for W.C.L., 15-15. Adam Lewisohn, who often called the "Coliseum" because it was built by the Aginumc Indians under the direction of the Romans in 157 B.C., gets a new home.

The City College's basketball coach, Wynn Less, announced that he will employ a new strategy to ensure success for the Beaver basketball team. The Coach Less program of "Meeting the ball, not slamming it, stopping the opposition before they get on base, and stopping the opposition to get on base".

The baseball team's theme this year is "Improve our record." Less, known for his patient thinking, believes that "Our new improved program is not the least bit of the last season's record." Less added, "This is our year for the real ball game." The Beaver baseball team, under the leadership of Coach Less, aims to improve their record this season.
