BHE Affirms Statistics On Minority Groups

Estimates of the present Negro and Puerto Rican enrollment in The City University of New York were reaffirmed last week by the Board of Higher Education.

No previous estimates had been given by the Board's chairman on their admissions. The estimates were based on a survey of students and other officers of the colleges and that they gave them at this time because it had been reported on January 3 that 2% of the University's enrollment was of Negro and Puerto Rican students.

"On the estimates given me," Dr. Rosen said, "Negro and Puerto Rican students in student enrollments are comprised of Negro and Puerto Rican students who are enrolled in the University in their courses or college in the University's enrollment, day and evening sessions of the secondary and community colleges. This means that from 3,000 to 6,000 Negro and Puerto Rican students in the University at the undergraduate level. This is undoubtedly more than any other university in the country. "The percentage of Negro and Puerto Rican students in the day sessions of City College and Hunter College is in the 5% to 10% range, the probability being that it is closer to the higher range at City and somewhat less than that at Hunter. "At Brooklyn College and Queens College, the range in the day sessions is from 2% to 3%, but in the evening session at Brooklyn College, the percentage of Negro and Puerto Rican students is 10%, and at Queens College at night, it will be remembered that the pressures for admission at Brooklyn is low, but that at Hunter, 5% to 10%.

BHE Set for Keynote Speech At Mock Political Convention

Senator Kenneth Keating announced that he will deliver the keynote address at the Mock Republican Political Convention, April 30. "It would be a great pleasure to participate in your Convention," declared the Senator.

"Senator Keating's acceptance undoubtedly will highlight the Convention program," stated Harvey Kornberg '35, coordinator of the Convention.

"His views," Dr. Kornberg continued, "will have a definite effect on its outcome." With the acceptance of the Senator the final open date in the convention schedule has been filled.

At the first phase of the convention, March 24, the states were divided into eight committees to draw up the Republican platform.

The participation at the Platform Committee meetings, related Dr. Kornberg, "was excellent. Their work will result in a platform worthy to bear the Republican name.

Half of the states will serve on the Civil Rights, Foreign Policy, and Human Needs committees. At the meeting of the liberals, the platform committee and the chairmanship of the Civil Rights Committee. The first round was won by the liberals.

The Platform Committee subsequently will meet April 14 and 21 to discuss the policy that was defined at the committee meetings. At these two sessions the states will be allowed to criticize and add to the platform.

The following week, Professors Maurice Benenut (Econ.), Norbert Pajovic (Pol. Sci.), Daniel Parker (Pol. Sci.), and William Turner Levy (Eng.) and a member of the House Space Committee. He was the chairman of the Anti-trust Subcommittee and of the Subcommittee to Investigate the Department of Justice in the Eighty-third Congress.

Keating is the junior Senator from New York and is a member of the Judiciary Committee. He is presently deeply involved in the Civil Rights controversy taking place in the Senate. There is a chance that the bill will be discussed in the Judiciary Committee, Senators Keating and Jacob Javits (Rep.-N.Y.) are strong advocates of the civil rights bill.

Drs. Israel and Levy Claim WWICausedDisillusionment

Extreme disillusionment was one of the most important effects of the First World War both from a literary and a historical viewpoint. This was the opinion of Dr. Fred Israel (Hist.) and Dr. William Turner Levy (Eng.) in their lecture on World War I, sponsored by Sigma Alpha, March 26.

The "shattering of the idealist spirit" in the United States, noted Professor Israel, was a direct result of the realization by Americans at the close of the war that the world was not free, for democracy and that "the war had not created a better world."

"War literature," stated Professor Levy, went through several phases from "romanticism to realism to disillusionment with the war."

Characteristic of the first phase, and possibly, in the opinion of Dr. Levy, "the greatest name in World War I" was Rupert Brooke. He did not experience war and his poetry was "naive" and romantic, the instructor noted. However, "Dr. Levy's his heavy artillery and the machine guns soon destroyed the romanticism of war. Those who didn't kill physically had their outlook's distorted."

Meanwhile, noted Dr. Israel, "as the war casualties continued to grow in Europe, . . . America, glad to be isolated from the struggle, cheered a new dance step, "on parade". Gradually, the United States found itself a participant in the war. The real history of American participation in World War I, he continued, was the rapid transformation of the individualistic American economy into a practically socialist war-time economy. "America was transformed in nineteen months into an almost socialist state."

English Department to Have Recital by Mark Van Doren

Mark Van Doren, Pulitzer Prize winning poet, will read his works on April 16 at 10:45 in 416 S.C. Professor Van Doren is the Chancellor of the American Academy of Arts and Letters. His works include "The Auto-biography of Mark Van Doren," a play entitled "The Last Days of Lincoln," three novels, "The Transients," "Wrendale Calm," and "Pilia," and "Collected Poems" for which he received the Pulitzer Prize.

The program, sponsored by the English Department, will consist of Dr. Van Doren reading from his own poetry and commenting on it.

Afterwards, he will meet with members of the faculty, many of whom were his students while he served as professor at Columbia University for an informal, "round-table" discussion.

Now in his seventieth year, the Professor is married to novelist and critic Dorothy Van Doren. "The poet," noted Professor William Turner Levy (Eng.), "has influenced two generations of teachers in English."

"His particular approach to literature," Dr. Levy continued, "more appreciative than analytical, has been passed on to students" by instructors who studied under Professor Van Doren.
Poetry, Folksinging
Presented at Recital

A recital performance of the readings by the Poetry, Folksinging, and Reading, featuring three different programs performed by the Poetry Group, was given Thursday. The songs included songs by the Poetry Group, which included the "Pioneer Poets", "The Three Sisters", and "The Fourth Brother". The recital was attended by the students and faculty, and included the presentation of a collection of poems by the students. The recital was held in the auditorium of the university. The collection of poems included "The Pioneer Poets", "The Three Sisters", and "The Fourth Brother".

Narcotics

By Tom Nitka

The College's Student Council, in cooperation with the Student Council of the Priory, will be holding a Narcotics Conference today. The conference is to be held in the Priory Student Center from 6:00 to 9:00 P.M., with the theme, "The Current Status of Drug Abuse on City College's Campus and the Role of the Student Council in Its Prevention." The program consists of three parts: a presentation by Dr. J. M. J. Smith, associate professor of psychology and director of the Center for Alcohol Problems; a panel discussion on the role of the Student Council in preventing drug abuse; and a film, "The Hot Seat," produced by the New York City Board of Education. Dr. Smith will speak on the problem of drug abuse and the need for preventive measures. The panel, consisting of members of the Student Council, will discuss the role of the Student Council in preventing drug abuse. The film, "The Hot Seat," will be shown to highlight the issue of drug abuse on campus. The conference is open to all students and will provide an opportunity to learn about the current status of drug abuse on campus and the role of the Student Council in its prevention. The conference is sponsored by the Student Council of the Priory and the Student Council of City College.
