Next Term’s Council

We wish the best of luck to those Student Council candidates running for the spring election. We feel that the selection of officers for the coming term is of utmost importance. The council will soon be charged with the task of selecting the new Student Body President. During the past several terms the quality of council leadership has been rather poor. We feel that any candidate seeking this office must have the respect of the administration and the student body.

Among the important functions facing the Student Council next year are the selection of a President and a Platform. Matters such as curriculums, library expansion, and soccer should also be considered. The council members must work together more closely than they have in the past to accomplish the larger problems facing the school.

We wish every candidate good luck in the elections. We hope that the council members elected this spring will be aware of their responsibilities and will work diligently to fulfill them.

Business vs. Arts?

The question of whether students should choose a business major or an arts major is one that has been debated in the past. Students are faced with the decision of choosing a major that will provide them with the most opportunities for employment. While business majors often have a higher earning potential, arts majors may be better prepared for certain types of work.

The decision ultimately comes down to what the student values more. Some students may prioritize earning potential, while others may prioritize personal fulfillment and creativity. It is important for students to consider their long-term goals and values when making this decision.

Power Politics Preside Over Mock Convention

The mock convention was held over the weekend as a preview for the upcoming national convention. The convention was divided into two main sections: the Democratic and the Republican parties.

The Democratic Party selected Richard Nixon as their candidate. The Republican Party selected John F. Kennedy. The convention was held in a mock environment, with the candidates giving speeches and debates.

The Democratic delegates were led by New York Senator Al Smith, who was the party’s presidential candidate. The Republican delegates were led by New Jersey Governor Christian Foster, who was the party’s vice-presidential candidate.

The convention was filled with political maneuvering and backstabbing. The delegates from the two parties were bitter rivals, and the convention was marked by constant bickering and debate.

The final vote was close, with Nixon winning by a narrow margin. The convention was held in a gymnasium on campus, with thousands of students and faculty in attendance.

The mock convention was a great success, and it provided an excellent preview of the upcoming real convention. The students and faculty were enthusiastic and engaged, and the event was a great success.
