BHE Grants Autonomy for Baruch To Become Effective July 1, 1968; Group Named To Aid in Transition

Saxe Speaks On Degrees

The matter of where Baruch School students will obtain their degrees "ought to be worked out quickly," said Chancellor of the Brooklyn center Emanuel Saxe. The issue has arisen as to whether Baruch students will have the option of receiving a City College degree in lieu of a degree from the Baruch College.

According to President R. Chandler, who met with the board's committee to study the question, several general problems were introduced with last night's actions of the B.H.E.:

- Plans must be made for a smooth transition of the Baruch School to the independent Baruch College.
- The establishment of the structure and related problems in beginning a new institution must be tackled, and
- A site is required for the Baruch College.

An overbearing problem involved in all the above issues will be communications and representation of different groups—B.H.E., students and faculty—on the various committees and policy making groups which exist or will be established.

In addition to this, the choosing of a president for the Baruch College will prove to be most crucial since he will guide the college during this most difficult stage of development. It is he who will make recommendations in consultation with President R. Chandler and Chancellor Albert Bowker for financial and administrative recommendations to the governing body of the college.

The Baruch School will end its first forty-eight year status as a business school of the City University and become the Bernard M. Baruch College eight months from now.

The decision came last night at a meeting of the Board of Higher Education, where it was made known that the College would go on to become an independent college.

A complete chronology of all the events leading up to the board's decision last night can be found on Page 4.

Hoxie Does Not Attend Hearing; Students Demonstrate at Board

Carrying placards reading, "Save the L.I.U., Brooklyn Center Now!" and "Why Are We Being Sold," fifty students and faculty members of Long Island University demonstrated in front of the Board of Higher Education last night.

"L.I.U. serves a unique purpose that no other university serves," commented Jay Dravich, president of the Baruch center's student government. He noted that the school provides a place for students with low admission scores who otherwise might not be able to get education. Mr. Dravich noted that if the City University were to take over L.I.U., the school should be kept as a unit maintaining the current admission standards.

A teacher in L.I.U.'s Department of Anthropology, Jon E., represents the fact that negotiations between the City University and L.I.U. were kept secret.

Chancellor of Long Island University R. Gordon Hoxie refused yesterday to appear in front of the New York State Joint Legislative Committee on Higher Education, now investigating the events leading up to the proposed sale of the university's Brooklyn campus to the City University.

The committee desired Chancellor Hoxie to explain a fourteen column page appearing in the New York Post detailing the last ten years of fiscal expenditures of the Brooklyn center. In a telegram sent to the campus. (Continued on Page 6)
January during intersession. These workshops are designed to help students enhance their leadership and group dynamics skills, providing them with valuable tools for personal and professional development.

In addition, the Student Council has initiated a blood drive initiative, which is scheduled to be held on the campus. The drive aims to collect blood donations from students and faculty members, showcasing the community's commitment to healthcare and supporting those in need.

Furthermore, the Campus Affairs Board has approved a motion to establish a Student Advisory Council. This council will include students from various organizations, allowing for diverse perspectives and input into campus policies and decisions. The goal is to ensure that students have a voice in shaping the university's future.

In conclusion, this term promises to be filled with opportunities for students to engage, learn, and contribute to their community. Whether through workshops, blood drives, or student councils, there is something for everyone to participate in and make a meaningful impact.
BC Faculty Group Set To Begin One Day 'Sympathy Boycott'

Today, 200 members of the Brooklyn College faculty will commence a twenty-four-hour strike in support of students now besieging the school in the aftermath of last week's protest against student council proposals to expand an existing student-run union. The federal government has ordered the school to halt the strike, arguing that the faculty members are acting in concert with students.

Students have been protesting the student council's proposals to expand the existing union, which has been criticized by some faculty members as being unfair and unrepresentative of the student body. The faculty is demanding a fairer and more democratic system of governance for the student body.

Fifteen Students Elected To Sigma Alpha Ranks

Fifteen students were elected to Sigma Alpha, the University's undergraduate honor-service society, at the group's annual meeting yesterday. The students were accepted after their names were submitted to the society's executive committee.

The student selected were: Waksman, Ralph Warren and Jon Nelson Olen '68, chancellor of the City College system, as well as members of the staff. The students were chosen from a list of nominees submitted by the college faculty.

Members of the now dissolved student council have been asked to present to the school's Board of Trustees a report on the council's activities during its existence.

The main part of the senator's speech was in support of the student council, arguing that it was necessary to continue the institution's existence.

A final example of government intervention was the arrest of the demonstrators who were protesting outside the university building. The demonstrators were protesting the university's decision to close its doors because of the protests.

The city of Washington responded to the protest by sending a police force to the university to ensure the safety of the students and faculty. The police force was composed of officers from the city's police department and the federal government.

The city of Washington also coordinated military forces from the United States and other countries to ensure the safety of the students and faculty. The military forces were composed of soldiers from the United States and other countries.

GENTLEMEN:

Were your spirits lifted on the morning of Sept. 29 when you came to school, expecting nothing and finding a sandwich man extolling a fraternity and the colorful halls of Baruch decorated with ballpoint pens? Were you in Miss Ferrer's lecture class the morning the balloons came down? Did Professor Martin and Bennewitz's comments on the ballpoint pens ring true?

Don't forget Alpha Epsilon Pi was responsible.

We felt and still feel that this harmless prank was well-conceived and quite within the spirit of collegiate activity. Many didn't agree, we were punished — our smoker, planned for Sept. 29, was postponed until October 27.

Will you help us prove that one should not suffer for originality and daring.

Come — listen to us! Each of the brothers of AEPi has pride. This stems from belonging to a high-quality existing group. Do you want some pride? Alpha Epsilon Pi.

AEPi, the "Fun Fraternity."
Activities Comm. Sigma presented a motion before the Department that the Department would no longer accept the secular presidents, the editors-in-chief of the Ticker and the Collegian, and would only accept the presidents of the religious organizations.

FDU's Late Rally Nips City Booters

By LARRY BROOKS

The City College soccer team, displaying an offense in game only, was defeated by highly-favored Fairleigh Dickinson, 2-1, Saturday as the visitors scored twice in the last five minutes.

The loss was the Beavers' third in five games, in which they have amassed only four tallies. They have two wins and one tie, with their Metropolitan mark standing at 0-3-1. Fairleigh's league record is 3-0.

There was little action exchanged between the foes as several pushing battles took place all over the field. Scarcely kept off the ball, the Fairleigh bench could be heard from every seat in Lewisohn Stadium.

The booters took the lead in the first quarter on a goal by Donnino Hamelos which was set up by Mike DiBono. After dribbling deep into Fairleigh territory, Hamelos who let fly with a low shot from the right side. The skimmer hit the right post and the outstanding efforts of the day.

Run, Run, Run

By MARC BLOOM

To some, running is a pointless form of athletic exercise that merely tires the body and warms the mind. It is a mode of physical punishment that breeds harmful results on and off the track. It is not a sport, they claim, but an exertion with some sort of peculiar psychological implications.

But to others - the ones who race at varied distances and the coaches who aid them - it is a way of life. They are devoted representatives of all sexes and of all ages from every nook and corner of the globe. Running, to them, is living. It is a fierce attempt to move at a quicker tempo than others who seek to move quicker than they, although simplified, is the main reason for competitive running.

"It is impossible to comprehend or identify the innumerable cross-currents of social influences, racial traditions, frustrations, beliefs, aggressions, impulses, fears and insecurities that may motivate men to competitive running," explains Fred Wilt.

There is seldom a single casual motive that can be isolated as exclusively responsible. More often than not, racing success is directly related to intensity of motivation.

The most primitive form of athletic endeavor regarded as a sport, running is as old as man and has existed on the competitive plateau since the days of the ancient Greeks. From a simple chore that followers knew virtually nothing about, running has been transformed into an extremely scientific and intricate sport.

But none can possibly master it. Such a task is literally impossible because, to do so, one would have to be a robot working on the mechanical principles of a computerized machine. Its participants, of course, are human beings. They possess bodies that are subject to shortcomings as a result of the intense exertions and the participant's body functions in a particular manner.

And it is his constant objective to train and condition that body to the point where he can white running, combat those shortcomings and achieve optimal success.

Witt, having been a competitor for more than a decade, knows full well the plight of the runner. A (Continued on Page 11)

City Loses Tri-Meet

"Ferrara is improving but the rest of the team is going backwards.

In those words Coach Francisco Carrasquillo upset the outcome of Saturday's triangular cross-country meet at Van Cortland Park in the Bronx. The Booters scored 73 points and were defeated by Central Connecticut (28) and Iona (51).

Andy Ferrara was the topic of Castro's abbreviated evaluation of a meet in which only one of his runners placed among the first ten finishers. The 19-year-old sophomore captured eighth-place in 28 minutes 58 seconds. The five-mile race was won by Paul Swenson of Central Connecticut in 26:52.

There is now an opportunity for a lucky Baruch student to win an easy $50. There are ample opportunities for Baruch students to participate in football games, which will probably be played on Nov. 20 in Central Park. All entries should be submitted to any of the editors in the Ticker Office (108 S.C.). They face New York University which can field one of the top teams anywhere.

Four Squads Advance In IMB Cage Tournament

Holy Day Causes Short Schedule

By DAVID ALPER

The Intramural Basketball Tournament entered its second week of action Thursday as four more teams advanced into the second round.

Two games - Bullet-Carpenters Union and Jete-Electric Knights box were postponed because several of their cagers were observing the Jewish holy day. The contests will be played at a later date.

In the winners' circles this week were the Pagan, which romped to a 12-point win over the Electric Goofers; Caro. Guard Alpha which toppled Sigma Alpha; and the Carolan Guard Alpha which upset the Spartans, 26-24; the Celtics which defeated the Carolan Guard "Bravo" (second team), 22-16; and Epsilon Phi Alpha which toppled Sigma Alpha.

Half of the second round was completed Thursday as the Pagan took on the booters; the Booters met Sigma Alpha; the Booters met Sparta; the Caro. Guard "Bravo" met Sigma Alpha; and the Caro. Guard "Bravo" met the Celtic. (Continued on Page 11)
