Student Council Creates Interim Government

Current Setup Revamped; Petitions Available Today

Student Council, seeing an urgency for early planning, completely revised its organizational structure Thursday in the hope of tightening the problems that it expects to generate when it takes over the next Baruch College.

The new setup for the members of the executive board will have the president and vice president of each class held by May 1. Petitions for these posts are available today outside room 101, S.C.

The president of Council will be the chief executive. He will chair both the council and executive board meetings and will represent the body between meetings.

In order to qualify for president, one must have been a member of council, or a dean of council, for two semesters, and be a junior or senior.

The vice president of planning and development will be the only council member not to have membership on the executive board. He must also be a junior or senior.

The financial officer, the president of finance affairs, and the student body will be at least a sponsor of social affairs, according to the new rules.

New officers will be sworn in Friday morning.

To see this office, one must be at least a sophomore. Also, one must have served at least one semester in the position of president or treasurer of the campus affairs committee.

Fremer Runs For Position

Harold Fremer ’68 is running for the position of vice president of student council, saying he feels that the current style of student council is not working for the good of the students.

The Ticker, the student newspaper of Baruch College, is printed by the student body and is available by subscription only.

Sorrow Over the Assassination: Is Expressed by Administration

In the wake of Mr. Berger's murder, students at the school of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s death, several faculty members were asked to express their sentiments. On Friday afternoon, the faculty were virtually silent, but the distinguished scientists and scholars who constitute the faculty were unable to express their sentiments in any significant manner.

Luther King would know very well. He always understood that being a manager was a very difficult task. He knew that he was faced with many difficult decisions, and he was always ready to make a decision. He always knew what he was doing, and he always knew what he was thinking. He was always ready to take a stand, and he was always ready to accept the consequences of his decisions.

There was a simple example of the wisdom of one Wise. Which makes us wonder whether we can ever understand the wisdom of our students. The students are always ready to take a stand, and they are always ready to accept the consequences of their decisions.
After Approval by BHE

The Board of Higher Education approved last week the appointment of the assistant director, Anna Buelles Metzke, as associate dean of the Graduate School.

The appointment is subject to the approval of the Board of Regents, who are expected to act in early May.

Ms. Metzke, who has served as assistant director since 1963, is known for her dedication to the college and her ability to work effectively with faculty and students.

The appointment will take effect immediately, and Ms. Metzke will assume her new duties in the fall term.

Tragedy in Memphis

The world was struck with tragedy Thursday night when Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn. The death of the civil rights hero occurred near the Lorraine Motel, where he was staying while in the city. The cause of death was reported to be a bullet wound to the head. King had been leading a civil rights march earlier in the day and was scheduled to speak at a rally later in the evening. The murder shocked the nation and sparked outrage.

Otis Capers from Bev Horner

Dr. King must become a flaming torch that will light the way for millions of Americans who are still searching for justice and equality. His legacy will live on to inspire those who follow in his footsteps. His death is a loss to the civil rights movement and to the world at large.

Improvements Are There

The first impress is that we should continue to support the nation's civil rights movement. By doing so, we can achieve progress and move towards a more just society. While there is still much work to be done, we must remain committed to the goal of equality for all.

One significant aspect of the new government is the creation of the Freshman Intern Program. This program will provide students with valuable experience and training in various aspects of the Council. It is a crucial step towards ensuring that the Council remains a vibrant and dynamic organization.

Vote Today

Another Student Council election will be held today. Only one position remains in the council, and a student must take an active part in their student government. Voting is essential for students to have a voice in their school's governance.

One interesting feature about the plan was the inclusion of bookkeepers. It was decided that these individuals would be responsible for managing the Council's finances. This was a crucial step towards ensuring that the Council remained financially stable.

A Tragic Lesson

Dr. King's death is a stark reminder of the dangers of racism and hatred. It is a tragic lesson that we must learn from and work to prevent in the future. We must all come together to fight against discrimination and promote understanding.

Atlanta, Georgia.

Dear Mrs. King:

We were shocked and dismayed at the murder of your husband, the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. . . .

We express our deepest sympathy to you at this very sad and trying time . . .

Your husband devoted himself to the betterment of mankind throughout his life . . .

His pledge to non-violence was a proof of his deep respect for his fellow human beings . . .

His leadership and guidance will surely be missed by all Americans . . .

We can only hope that his work will be continued and he shall not have died in vain . . .

Respectfully yours for the cause of peace and brotherhood,

Violets Rip City Nine In Baseball Lidlifter

By PHIL WAXBERG

Too much N.Y.U. hitting, too much N.Y.U. pitching, and too much of N.Y.U.'s fabulous center-fielder, Jim Cardasis, was the story of City College on the short end of the scoreboard.

Cardasis was a one-man wrecking crew. In six appearances at the plate he collected four hits, including a towering 410-foot home run, a walk, drove in four runs and scored twice.

When N.Y.U. was having his big day, the N.Y.U. mound corps was having a day of it. Elsewhere, "The Man," as he is affectionately known, combined to limit the Beavers to six hits while striking out five and forcing N.Y.U. to score two runs in the first of Cardasis', homer and two singles.

Netmen Win

The Beavers were generally ineffective both in the field and at the plate. Six errors by Lavender fielders aided N.Y.U.'s cause and only five of the twelve N.Y.U. runs were earned. Bernie Martin and Fred Schliller collected two hits each but the rest of the team was, for the most part, ineffective from the plate.

Before the Start

The Beavers lost thirteen men on base with their only run coming when Poris was hit by a pitch in a bases loaded situation.

There were two bright spots:

The Pirates, like the Giants, always seem to have enough to win. Bunning, notwithstanding, the Pirates will finish sixth.

The Cubs, Braves and Dodgers seem to be a notch ahead of these two and a notch below the top two.

The rising Cubs should slip to fifth despite the fact that they will be a better baseball team they were last year.

The dissension torn Braves should challenge for the flag, much thorough the genius of Walter Alston. L. A. for third.

The National League - the superior league - has been nearly impossible to figure since the mid-1950's.

The American League - a study in mediocrity in 1967 - should be jumbled again.

Despite a new environment and genuine improvement, the Oakland Athletics should finish in the basement.

The Gil Hodges-less Senators will slide down a bit though they really have not gotten worse. Such is the face of baseball clubs. Washington is ninth.

So we come to the Yankees. Should their big men recapture their glory days and the pitching holds up, this team could "Red Sox" to a high position. However, this prudent columnist pegs them seventh.

The pitching-rich Indians come from the Giant-Pirate mold. The Indians for seventh.

The Boston Red Sox's impossible dream is over. It will be a lot easier for them to finish tenth than to repeat. The likelihood is that they will do neither. Boston for sixth.

The Angels, a club which has beaten the expansion woes, should finish a strong fifth.

Detroit, a club which had the best personnel in the league a year ago, does not now. They should wind up fourth.

As three teams remain, the clarity with I see the picture is frightening: I see one team being better than the other two.

The Orioles and Twins should finish third and second respectively, although the White Sox.

Baltimore, trying to come back, has the best player in the American League in Frank Robinson and the Twins are generally solid. But I don't believe either can match Chicago.

The Chisox, with an unbelievable pitching staff, have bolstered their attack with the additions of Tommy Davis, Luis Aparicio and Russ Snyder. Should the pitching falter, Eddie Stanky will take care of the rest.

So the Reds will meet the White Sox. Okay?

Idiot.
