Open Hearings Held By Liberal Arts Group

The initial meeting of the Ad Hoc Committee for the Liberal Arts and Science held last Wednesday. The meeting's format marked a faculty effort to listen to students.

The meeting was open. The Committee received recollections from both student and faculty guests as to the required liberal arts "curriculum" of the freshman year. The discussion which ensued was a veritable free-for-all on ideas and plans.

- Prof. Joffen (German) reasoned that all courses must be eliminated; it is unfair to compel students to take such courses. Prof. Coe pushed for a super-saturated English course, a course which would make students fluent at the college level. While middle class English must be taught to those who have not cultivated Language, this is the language of textbooks.

Professor Wyshogrod (Phil), questioned the wisdom in allowing students to avoid the more general subjects of Language and Mathematics.

Dean Cohen supported the smorgasbord plan advocated by Tieler, Sibol, Wainisky (Stat), which provides for a freshman year free from requirements. Too often, Dean pointed out, the freshman year is a continuation of the last year in high school. Required courses crush inspiration; boredom follows. A first year of campus life must encourage student innovation. The

Atlantic Terminal Site To Be Cleared; Fort Greene Market To Move By 1970

The new Broklyn Campus for the Baruch College came a step closer to reality with the announcement of a new site for the Fort Greene Meat Market.

In making the announcement of the new location, Mayor Lindsay said it had been approved by the Site Selection Board "after many conferences and lengthy study." The site is bounded by Water, Fulton and Main Streets. It is estimated that the cost of the new market will be $31 million with this sum to be self-liquidating. According to Mayor Lindsay, the facilities will handle the distribution of $200 million in meat products annually.

It is anticipated that preliminary building plans will be completed in six months with construction scheduled to get under way immediately after. Occupancy is forecast for early 1970. The Fort Greene Market, nearly a century old, is part of the 88-acre "Federal Urban Renewal area in Brooklyn, bordered by Hanson Place, State and Pacific Streets, Clermont, Vanderbilt, Atlantic, Third and Fourth Avenue.

OBSERVATIONS TO SITE

At a hearing before the Site Selection Board, Brooklyn Councilwoman Mildred Rossen, and other critics of the tract, claimed that the site was not in the public interest.

She said that building a meat market in the backyard of the New York Heights would tend to drive some of the Heights residents out of town. O. P. Pearsall, of the Municipal Art Society, now for the "eye appeal exceptional feature in the proposal is a political—- the desire to make the market a mecca agreeable to the meat men as fast as possible."

Techniques of Policy Discussed At Educational Conference

A program to train both school board members and technicians of dealing with increasingly sensitive education policy questions and issues, is a full-sized cross-reference book at a conference held near New York City.

The New York Council of Jewish Organizations and Allied Services Committee, which is a division of the Council's educational department, has published a book titled "Techniques of Policy Discussed at Educational Conference."

The book contains case studies and discussions of educational policies and practices in various settings, including the classroom, the school board, and the community. It is intended to help school board members and technicians understand and address the challenges of contemporary education.

The book is available for purchase from the New York Council of Jewish Organizations and Allied Services, 55 Water Street, New York, NY 10041. Price: $20.00

Black Rabbi Lectures At Hillel Tells Of Jewish Uniqueness

At a time when many people feel that a schism has been created between the Black and Jewish communities, it is appropriate that Hillel included its forum series with the spiritual leader of the Black and Jewish community, Rabbi Matthew. The talk given by Rabbi W. A. Matthew, left many of the people in attendance feeling that our group has a responsibility to keep ourselves united. Rabbi Matthew expressed the sentiment that Black Jews from his own side Black Jew from his own side.

The Proposed New Student Council Charter

Article I: AUTHORIZATION

The Faculty of the Bernard M. Baruch College authorizes the forming of a new Student Council, which shall have all such extra-curricular activities, and to have such electrical and administrative functions as the Faculty may designate.

FUNCTIONS OF THE COUNCIL

The Student Council shall be responsible to the Student Body of the Bernard M. Baruch College, and shall serve as the representative body for all the students of the college, between the Student Body and the Faculty and Administration.

The functions of the Student Council shall be:

A. To coordinate and supervise extra-curricular activities (subject to the responsibilities and powers vested in the Faculty by the Board of Trustees, or Higher Education), according to the following regulation and constitution. Extra-curricular activities shall be either student services or Student Council activities.

B. To cooperate with the Faculty where joint student-Faculty-governed programs are in effect.

C. To represent the school in inter-college student governing functions.

D. To discuss, consider, and act on each affairs which shall affect the Student Body.

E. To be the recognized voice of the Student Body of the Bernard M. Baruch College of the City University of New York.

F. To select representatives to the faculty council.
SCHOOL

We condemn the City University Construction Fund and all of its members for their failure to provide the Baruch community with adequate housing. They have not only failed to meet the current needs of the Baruch community, but have consistently missed their deadlines. This failure is not due to the lack of funds, as the Baruch administration has consistently received large amounts of funding.

Unfortunately, since that time, Dr. Weaver has been unavailable to the students and the general public. He has not met with student leaders or attended any of the community events. This lack of communication is unacceptable and must be addressed.

We believe that the Baruch administration must take immediate action to provide the necessary funds for the construction of the new building. The Baruch administration must also ensure that the construction process is transparent and that the students are included in the decision-making process.

We urge the Baruch administration to take action to address this issue and to provide the necessary funds for the construction of the new building. We also call on the City University to support the Baruch administration in its efforts.

We are committed to ensuring that our voices are heard and that the needs of the Baruch community are met.

Curriculum Irrelevant

Claims Columbia Dean

In his book "Curriculum Irrelevant," the University curriculum can be shown to be a failure. This is claimed by Jacques Barres in his new book along with other educational critics which he believes are aiming at the real problems concerning higher education.

"Our education is a sham," says Barres. "We are taught that the curriculum is the most important thing in any institution. But in reality, it's not. The curriculum is just a way to control the students."

Barres' book is a critique of the traditional four-year curriculum. He argues that this system is outdated and fails to prepare students for the real world.

"The curriculum is a tool of control," says Barres. "It's used to keep students in line and prevent them from thinking for themselves."

Barres' book has caused a stir among university administrators. Some have called for a revision of the curriculum, while others have dismissed it as too extreme.

"I don't think Barres' ideas are practical," said one university administrator. "The curriculum is too complex to change in one fell swoop."

Others have taken a more positive view. "I think Barres has a point," said another administrator. "The curriculum is in desperate need of reform."

Despite the criticism, Barres' book has been well-received by many students. "I think it's time we started thinking about a new kind of education," said one student. "We can't keep doing things the same way if we want to create a better society."

Human Rights Discussed In Allen Speech To HRS

The duties and functions of the N.Y.C. Commission on Human Rights was the subject of a discussion delivered by Mrs. Geraldine Allen, Social Workers, Thursday. The speaker attracted a casual crowd of about thirty which comprised the coeds from the women's dormitories, the executive director of the Commission on Human Rights, graduated from Howard University and is a part-time radio commentator. Mrs. Allen was the first of a series of speakers to discuss the topic, and her speech was well received.

Gentlemen:

The Students and Faculty of the Bernard M. Baruch College have "existed" for the past 15 years in inadequate, substandard facilities. These deplorable conditions, in an Academic Community, can no longer be tolerated.

Your action in failing to approve the funds needed to acquire the RCA building for the Baruch College, is a dereliction of your duty to the future students of Baruch.

The special mission of the Baruch College, to meet the problems of our urban Society, makes our need of additional facilities all the more pressing and your failure to act all the more criminal.

The letterhead of the City University Construction Fund states "The City University Construction Fund Supports The Educational Purposes of the City University By Providing Facilities For The City Colleges."

With this noble purpose, the Fund has both the moral and the legal responsibility to provide adequate space for the Baruch College.

The accreditation of the Baruch College, and of the entire City University, may be in jeopardy because of the unconscionable facilities that we "live" in. The Middle States Accreditation Teams report, for the past 12 years, have attacked Baruch's physical plant. Their latest report discusses the failure to meet interim space acquisition plans, and demands that no new programs be initiated until the space problem is no longer a factor.

Sincerely,
