AFL-CIO Pledges Support

Facing the prospect that the City University of New York may have to cut all its operations in the 1967-70 school year for lack of sufficient state and city appropriations, a group of New York AFL-CIO has urged the Governor and legislative leaders to assure that funds are forthcoming to prevent the collapse of the city's major educational institutions.

Raymond R. Corbett, president of the more than two-million-member labor organization, in a letter addressed to Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, said, "As a representative of an organized labor force, you can be sure to find the means to meet this challenge to our city and state that is beyond the scope of a long-term solution."

The AFL-CIO estimated the state would have to raise $800 million in tax revenue many times over the same amount allocated during the coming year.

"To cut deep in this area," he wrote, "would be a pittance when compared to the cost of a prolonged strike.

"Therefore, we most earnestly recommend that this matter be given the most careful consideration. It is not possible to forecast the effect of a strike on the city's economic stability."
