Baruchian Appointed Counseling Psychologist

Dr. Vincent Bryan, the new Assistant Professor, the Department of Student Personnel Services, will serve the college as a counseling psychologist.

During the first two years of his undergraduate studies, Dr. Bryan, a native of the Baruch College campus, spent much time helping students understand their personal problems and the problems of others. He also worked with young people because he feels they are responsive both to their own needs and the necessity for social change.

Dr. Bryan emphasized that while young people tend to label professionals who deal with the mind as "headhuggers," in actual practice the impact of therapy almost inevitably expands the mind.

Dr. Bryan serves as a staff psychologist in the Department of Psychology at the Bennington College of the City University and at the Stuyvesant Polyclinic Hospital.

He co-authored the book "The Middle-Class Negro in the White Man's World," which was published in 1967.

Commenting on Colloquium, Dr. Bryan thought it was an excellent idea to bring the faculty and students together and break each that the other was human.

He feels there is an effort at Baruch on the part of the students to make each other feel that the other was human.

Faculty, Student Leaders and students were able to experience each other as human beings rather than as professor or upper classmen, he noted.

Dr. Bryan resides in New York City. He is married and the father of four children.

New CUNY Deputy

Dr. Seymour C. Byman, was today named Deputy Chancellor of the City University of New York in an administrative move that will permit CUNY Chancellor Albert H. Bowker to devote his full time to the activities of the accelerated open admissions' goal, set by the Board of Higher Education last month.

The action, authorized by the Board's Executive Committee, followed a report by Dr. Byman which declared that a policy of instituting CUNY admission to all qualified New York City high school graduates in the fall of 1970 "is feasible but will require substantial effort on the part of the university community as well as student decision makers."

Michael Karash Named As New Lexicon Editor

The new year is not even ripe but behind closed doors many people are already working on new Lexicon. The yearbook staff, headed by editor-chief, Michael Karash, has been busy all summer and promises that Lexicon 1970 will be better than the photograph album of 1969.

Lexicon in the past has lacked the "liberal arts" touch but with the arrival of students majoring in English and in the Arts the situation must be changed. The words and pictures will represent life at Baruch College.

Mr. Karash pledges his creative genius as well as many unique innovations to this years Lexicon by including foldouts and color.

In order to start fresh, the first thing to be done is to paint the Lexicon office. The Lexicon and Boosters are sponsoring a painting in order to familiarize the freshmen with the book. With interested students' help we want to redecorate the Lexicon office to cover the defects of the past.

It is feasible for all students to participate in the creation of Lexicon 1970 and also to buy it once it is printed.

The hard working staff of Lexicon 1970 now consists of Michael Karash and Edward Kaplan, who are students who certainly are capable of completing the book alone.

The selection is very likely and anyone interested in getting their picture in the yearbook must provide a free copy of the completed book in order to get in touch with Lexicon 1970 in room 315 of the Student Center.

Colloquium 1969

To the Kerhonkson campus of the Baruch College in the heart of the Catskill Mountains came nearly 600 freshmen accompanied by the class of 79 student leaders and 73 faculty, Sunday, September 7 after an uneventful bus trip.

Following dinner, the Dean of Students, David Newton, welcomed the class and outlined the activities for the remainder of the orientation program. The various Deans of Baruch College and other honored officials of CUNY were introduced. President Weaver addressed the assembly, and President and Dean Newton stressed that the class of 79 is the first of its kind at Baruch and that each and every student should enter the college with pride and anticipation of four enlightening and fulfilling years.

Group discussions provided answers for freshmen queries, followed by recreation. Both the indoor and outdoor pools were in use, as was the ice skating rink (indoor of course). A teen band and a regular band helped everyone unwind. A midnight snack and then "expectation hour" for the freshmen ended the first day of Colloquium 1969.

On September 3-6. The entire antiquated system complicated by the fact that freshmen were admitted as B.A. candidates. This meant that more liberal arts courses were offered and there just didn’t seem to be enough sections for everybody.

The first time in Baruch’s history, entrance requirements were changed. The minimum was increased to an A average in high school, the College Board minimum of 850 was increased to 900, the minimum was increased to B average in four subjects, and the College Board minimum of 1800 was increased to 2200.

This guy thought he was something special, but my attitude had been so bad that I worked through it at my job at a hardware store. The atmosphere was so tense that I couldn't concentrate on my work. I thought I had to do something to change it, so we went out to dinner. It was a disaster. We kept fighting about the smallest things. I was so frustrated that I decided to go for a walk in the park. I was thinking about my life and what I wanted to do. Then I realized that I couldn't go on like this. I needed a break. So I decided to take a vacation. I was so excited about the idea, but then I realized that I had no money. I was stuck. I asked my friends for advice, but they all said the same thing: "You need to save up some money." I was so discouraged that I just gave up.

After classes I worked part time collecting mail for the Post Office;

"OK Charlie, here they come.....bring in a bunch of those number 4 clouds!"

Every weekend we drove up to the mountains. As we drove the scenery was beautiful. The trees were turning red, and the weather was just right. We spent most of our time hiking and fishing. It was so peaceful. We returned home and relaxed. I decided to make my own clothes, and was really happy making my own clothes. I was so excited about it, I decided to make a dress for my friend's wedding. I spent all my money on fabric. It was a disaster. My friend was so disappointed, and I was so mad at myself.

My Summer

I was engaged---and since my summer job took me away from home for three weeks, I had no chance to think about the wedding. After three weeks I returned to my job and the wedding.

"Look, I'm completely sold out. You can put in an order that it will take between 6 and 7 years, so why don't you take the savings and stop seeing my daughter?"

At last, my vacation is over (not because of long work days, sleeping to the country, etc.), and picked is about to arrive. I can look forward to my first rest and relaxation my first (4.14.69)

A FOCUS ON THE ADMINISTRATION

A question arose last week which caused me to undertake research resulting in the report. The question called for a tracing of the consolidated fee from the pocket of the student to its actual allocation purpose. In the past, the fee has, rather moneysystematcally, imputed forty dollars from every student each term. Expressed in rounded figures, it is estimated that these fees rise to the tune of $150,000 (from a study session New York City residents alone). This year in accordance with Ohio State University and Sarah Lawrence College, whose tuition and fees were imputed some five hundred dollars, respectively, Baruch College announced a fifty per cent increase in its rather modest amount. Just for the record that is proportionally the highest rise of all colleges and universities that underwent tuition and fees hikes.

This fee boost led me to the office of the Business Manager located at the 24th Street Center on the fourth floor. There under the supervision of the Dean of Administration, Lester J. Rosen, I discovered Mr. Aaron Sklar whose title reads Business Manager of the Business Office.

Mr. Sklar pointed out to me the functions and responsibilities of his office.

The final item we spoke of was precisely what had prompted my seeking out Mr. Sklar originally. The Office of the Business Manager is responsible for the collection of all fees. Always questioned him as to what functions do not include policy making and that he is at all times directly responsible to Dean Rosen.

One main function of his office is to assist the President with the formation and control of the budget. The school accounting, purchasing of equipment, and reporting on college welfare and pension plans fall to this office. Two interesting functions, the office's responsibility involving the bookstore and the payroll which are broken down into weekly, biweekly, and monthly assessments. The Business Manager also plays a role in planning certain campus facilities.

Always questioned him as to what functions do not include policy making and that he is at all times directly responsible to Dean Rosen.

The $60 Bursar's Fee is broken down into four allocations: $8 is intended as a student activities fee, $10 goes toward the maintenance of the Student Center, and $2 towards student athletics. The remaining $40 is deposited in the Fee Income Account which has been given the misleading title of the City University Construction Fund. This fund controlled by CUNY, is fed by the consolidated fees of evening session and non-matriculated students as well as day session students. Also the non-residents of NYC who attend Baruch contribute $200 tuition which is deposited in the Consolidated Fee Fund.

Baruch College enters its second year of independence with anxiety and uncertainty as marks on the upcoming athletic year. In its maiden year, over $150,000 was spent on expenses of games and coaching fees for Black and Puerto Rican students. The Administration has approved them, they will be forwarded to the faculty and voted upon.

It is expected that the major committee will recommend the formation of a committee to effect greater minority group representation on the College facility. This committee, if formed, will be representative of the College community.

The recommendations are expected to endorse previous Board of Higher Education policies with regard to Black, Puerto Rican and Urban Studies and supplemental orientation programs for minority group students.

The committee is believed to have discussed the granting of credit for remedial work courses.

The Committee is expected to endorse open enrollment and the necessary funding measures, for open enrollment and consequent programs.

The recommendations are believed to have touched upon the topic of the establishment of a well-organized student athletic organization.
