OSWALD, ATTICA PROTEST HELD IN FRONT OF BARUCH

By Bruce Schwartz

Thousands of black, white radicals, and Puerto Rican youth picketed and chanted in front of the George Washington Hotel as State Corrections Commissioner Russell Oswald was inside receiving an award.

These youth were supplemented by students pouring out of the Mabel Dean Vocational High School, and from Baruch College. Cheers and clenched fists greeted a group of protesters marching in front of the George Washington Hotel. TWO NEW CLUBS FORMED

The Radical Free Market Club, under the guidance of the Economics Department’s new head, Prof. Walter Block, wants to stress its beliefs on free enterprise.

The club’s two founders are a free market system; no government control except protection from invasion, etc. Legalization of all drugs (drugs should be sold like any other product thereby decreasing the crime rate while giving the profits to merchants); and the abolition of the draft. To the RFMs way of thinking, there would be a volunteer army which would have a competitive pay scale like any private corporation.

They also feel that if a person is old enough, he should be old enough to own property at 18. RPM believes that income tax is illegal and should be removed. Prof. Jeffrey Rurs of the Social Science Department, “so why not use it?”

As reported in last week’s TICHER, a unique experiment will be conducted with the new theatre workshop at Baruch. Everything will revolve around the participants’ free time. The stage is alive with activity, and the Baruch College is a busy place.

ASSASSIN OF YOUTH: POT THROUGH THE AGES

CREDIT: ALEX APSTOLIDES / ALTERNATIVE FEATURES SERVICE

The old legend that Gunther Warnecke used only to smoke the weight equivalent of a gallon of wine through Mario's beloved whiskey is true. A recent study has confirmed that the legend was true, as well as the discovery of an ancient manuscript from the Nazca region in Peru, that may be the source of the many stories thatattributed to the Chinese emperor, Han Wang. This story was the first news that the Chinese emperor, Han Wang, used to smoke the weight equivalent of a gallon of wine through Mario's beloved whiskey.

The manuscript, written in the ancient Chinese language, describes the emperor's daily routine and his preference for the drink. The text mentions that the emperor was known for his love of wine and his preference for smoking it through a special device. The device was made of a long, thin tube that allowed him to smoke the wine without having to drink it.

In the manuscript, the emperor is also described as a great lover of music, and is said to have been known for his ability to play the sword and the violin. The manuscript also mentions that the emperor was a great admirer of the arts, and is said to have commissioned many works of art, including paintings and sculptures.

The manuscript was discovered by a group of archeologists who were conducting an excavation in the Nazca region of Peru. The group was searching for ancient relics when they stumbled upon the manuscript, which was written on a thin strip of parchment.

The manuscript is now housed in the National Museum of Archaeology in Peru, and is open to the public for viewing. It is believed to be one of the most important discoveries in the history of Chinese art and history, and is expected to attract a large number of visitors in the coming months.
