A Letter From Alon Shark,
Chairman
University Student Senate

Students may lack a sense of belonging and adequacy of facilities locally and nationally. It is not unusual to see students sitting outside or walking around campus without engaging in any meaningful academic activities. Many students feel that they are not part of the university community, which can lead to a sense of alienation and disengagement.

New Policy
For "I" Grade

The Office of Curricular Affairs and the School of Business Administration and the School of Public Administration have introduced a new policy that allows students to receive an "I" grade in courses if they are enrolled in the fall or spring semesters. This policy is designed to accommodate students who may experience unforeseen circumstances that prevent them from completing their coursework. Under the new policy, students must receive permission from their academic advisors to carry an "I" grade in courses they have not completed. The "I" grade will be converted to a permanent "P" grade at the end of the next semester, provided the student's academic performance meets the requirements for passing. This policy is intended to provide flexibility and support to students while maintaining academic standards.

Qiafr is a person, an extremely representative group of the those chosen by the voters. It tells the College Community that students do not feel that government to sit. He can ask the Elections Committee to administration; even if it is taken lightly by the students. Government might change their minds.

The students who worked on the Elections Committee could be easily replaced by a tenth floor of the wing building because of ventilation problems. This could be taken. We'll see what we can do.

The Great Baruch Food Hassle

by William Bache

The last time I had a meal at the Student Center, the dish of blubulous clouds of smoke that came from the stove was a conviction in the area of first and second law of thermodynamics. In addition, I had to wait 15 minutes for my quarter to be replaced. In my opinion, this cannot be true because it's an absurdity.

The curious plastic surgery that the Baruch community well. Yet, what happened to the cafeteria? The place was deserted. It seems that the Student Body has lost all interest in the cafeteria. I think that if we want to improve the cafeteria, we should look for new ways to attract students.

At last... contraceptives

by Alexander Pressman

The current system of storing the student at the 10th floor cafeteria is a failure. It seems that students are not satisfied with the cafeteria. I think that we should look for new ways to attract students to the cafeteria.

Student Body Politic

by Michael Fishkin

You can choose A or B if the honest, dam.

I sometimes wonder why a few people are so competitive? I assume that the Student Body should be collective. If we have a collective, we will be able to work together and solve problems.

The Outsider

by Andrew Franklin

Why Are We here?

We must be trying something enormous. Perhaps a smart one. Maybe I've been too much of a smart one to do something... Well, it is not what is left, but... Well, we have to deal with the problems of the student body. The students themselves, I think, are the most important. They have the right to be heard.
