Budget Talks Highlight Senate Meeting

by Rob Minnard

After two previous meetings devoted to passing club budgets, the Senate again failed to complete this piece of business at its meeting on Wednesday, November 9.

The majority of the budgets submitted by Baruch organizations, which had already been approved by the Fees Committee, were passed. Those clubs, however, that for one reason or another needed representation and had none, such as the German Club and Yavneh, were tabled until today’s meeting.

The meeting began late because a quorum was not reached until almost a half hour after the meeting’s 5 P.M. scheduled start. Due to secretary Roberto Rodriguez’s absence, the minutes from the previous meeting were not ready and their reading was thereby eliminated.

WBMB’s budget was the first to be acted on. General manager Steve Kahn, with two members of his staff, explained that the radio station wants to buy equipment, all of it portable, for expansion into the Freshman Center and the Main Building cafeterias. After a half-hour discussion, the budget was passed.

The longest debate of the night, a full hour, was devoted to the Lamport Leaders Workshop. Freddie Greenblatt, representing the organization, asked for additional funds to provide scholarships for members of P.R.I.D.E. who, by prior agreement, would participate in the Lamport Leaders Workshop rather than conduct their own, the latter of which could be more costly to Student Government in the long run. At this point several questions were brought up about the screening process used for admission to Lamport Leaders. After much debate, the Senate voted to give the club $3000 of the more than $5000 they had asked for.

On a similar note, Susan Schultz of the Baruch Hotline asked for an additional $240 to send her organization’s members to the Lamport Leaders Workshop. The Senate thought this was unfair and, in a motion proposed by Geary Greenidge, voted to eliminate scholarships for all clubs.

In other action, the Senate passed the budgets of the Law Society, as is; History Society, as is; Sociology, unanimously after they cut their own budget; Education Society, after the Senate made some cuts; Theatron, as is, with $118 exempted from the across-the-board cut; Boosters, less $15 for decorations; West Indian Club, $250 held in reserve; Psychology Society, as is; and finally Student Government itself, as is.

There is no student input in the contract negotiations between the Board of Higher Education and the Professional Staff Congress. The University Student Senate, the representative body of the students of City University, has been barred from any direct participation in the bargaining process.

The Senate has submitted thirty-six demands, basic to the development of student services on the campus to both the Board and the Congress. Accompanying these demands were both a twenty-four-page brief setting down a rationale for student participation, and a demand that a student observer be present at negotiations to make sure that student interests would be considered in bargaining.

In response, the Board has said that it has no objections to the presence of a student observer. However, the Congress has said that in its opinion students have nothing to do with the contract and therefore should have no part in the bargaining.

The Congress has supported its position by stating that in the past, the Senate has opposed the Congress. No mention has been made of the fact that the Senate has recently supported the Congress on two key issues: the imposition of class-size restrictions, and the establishment of a policy to announce reasons for the

Inter session Registration Definite

"Student Government accepts the fact that we cannot have registration any other time except inter session," said Linda Matula, Chairman of Day Session Student Government, at a meeting last Friday, November 10th, in President Wingfield’s conference room.

The meeting consisted of several administrators telling two students why registration could not be held December 4-14 as originally scheduled. The two students were Ms. Matula and Robert Barrett, Editor-in-Chief, Ticker; also invited but not present was Pauline Black, President of Evening Session Student Government. The Administrators were Vice-President Bernard Mintz, who chaired the meeting; President Wingfield; Dean of Faculties William Monat; Dean Brown of the School of Liberal Arts; Dr. Fallin of the School of Business; M. Lewis Temare, Registrar; and Mr. Rosenbloom of the Computer Center.

The decision to reschedule the inter session registration was based on "good and sufficient reasons," stated Vice-President Mintz. He said, the decision was not a unilateral one made by the registrar or anyone else, but came from a set of conditions. Mintz said that the Registrar's office is "totally and completely understaffed." The office just moved from part-time to full-time help and all of the staff will not be available until November 28. These people have to be trained, and that is needed. A similar condition exists in the
TICKER Attends ACP Convention

Thursday afternoon, November 2, after the last breakfast had been served, the Hotel St. Regis Convention Center was filled with enthusiastic delegates preparing to set off to hear the public relations agencies of the country’s leading newspapers and newsweeklies. Among them were John H. Haskins, publisher of the Houston Post; John L. Haskins, publisher of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch; and Hyman Geller, publisher of the New York Daily News.

The convention was opened with a keynote address by John R. Macatee, president of the Associated Press, who spoke on the theme of “Public Relations in the Age of the Power of the Press.” Macatee stressed the importance of public relations in today’s fast-paced world and highlighted the role of newspapers in shaping public opinion.

Throughout the convention, there were numerous workshops and seminars on a wide range of topics, including media relations, crisis communication, and community relations. The sessions were attended by a wide variety of delegates, including editors, publishers, and public relations practitioners.

On Friday afternoon, the convention continued with a special session on “The Role of Public Relations in the Age of Social Media.” The session featured a panel of experts who discussed the challenges and opportunities presented by social media in the field of public relations.

During the closing session, President Clyde J. Wingfield of the Baruch College Foreign Trade Society, announced that next year Chicago is due to be host of the convention. The convention ended with a banquet and dance featuring the Ohio Express, a popular rock band of the time.

The convention was well attended, with approximately 1200 delegates from colleges’ newspapers, who had come to Buffalo, N.Y., to hear the latest developments in the field of public relations.

John Lee Hooker, Detrok Special

John Lee Hooker has been an important part of the Detroit blues scene since the late forties. The songs on this album were cut for Atlantic, the songs are taken from two sessions, one in late 1949 and one from late 1953:

Blind Willie McTefi was a true twelve-string guitar wizard. His fingerpicking style on the awkward eight-beat-boggies, in shuffle as well as rhumba time, have been used on countless records. This is a collection of his most important blues galootines—Blind Willie McTelfi's hotdogs, courtesy of Nathan's were *

On November 6 the Public Relations Society of America held a luncheon meeting in the Waldorf=Astoria, New York City. The meeting was attended by President Nixon with a hotdog and, after a break, it was announced that the next convention is usually the best and one of the kind of sad yet happy scene left after a half hour. Franklin Trade Society Visits U.S. Customs House

By Alan Leventhal

Twenty-two public relations and advertising students from the University of Illinois at Chicago visited the U.S. Customs House last Monday. The students were there as part of a trip to New York City to visit various public relations and advertising agencies.

The trip was organized by Professor Longhair of the University of Illinois, who is responsible for the "instant" movement in the field of public relations. After a break, during which the students had the opportunity to tour the Customs House, the students were taken to a dinner at a nearby restaurant.

The trip was considered a success by all involved. The students were able to gain a better understanding of the role of the government in public relations and advertising, and were able to network with professionals in the field.

Mr. Collier:

There is no lack, there are only those who lack imagination. Every man and woman who wishes to write should consider the possibilities of letters and their potential impact.

M. Collier:

When deciding what to write, it is important to consider the possible outcomes. One should be mindful of the audience and the purpose of the letter. It is also important to be honest and genuine in one's communication.

212 Meets The Dean

By Alice Manuerman

A recent meeting of the COA (Committee of the Overall) was held last week to discuss the problems faced by students in the 212 building. The major concern was the overcrowding and the lack of facilities. Students are faced with the problem of finding a place to study and work, and the lack of space is making it difficult for them to participate in extracurricular activities.

Another issue is the lack of opportunities for students to express their opinions. The COA is working to address these issues by planning to meet regularly with the Dean to discuss these problems and work towards finding solutions.

In the world of distinguished scholars, what would you do if you weren't there? Wouldn't you miss this reading? Wouldn't you miss this reading for the Mam BaBQat5:00poeI? A group is Harvey Rosenholtz's Barkus) for the express purpose of helping Baruch students with their projects. The Barkus students are interested in par-ticipating. One possible solution to the problem is procuring a place to meet. Wit-he the 212 staff feel that a week-end workshop could be helpful for students interested in par-ticipating. Baruch students would agree that the workshop would increase the learning experience.

Students Barred

From setting any college Commis-sion, the Senate has voted to bar the faculty from the Senate support. It produced no resolution or final action.

Both the Board and the Com-mission have been criticized by the Senate students. But the Senate is the number one critic of the Board and the Commis-sion. There is no Senate support in this case.
