The Staff Of Ticker Mourns The Death Of Free Speech

The Senate of Day Session Student Government voted on Thursday, March 8, 1973 to cut Ticker's budget request from $17,603.01 to $11,852.36. This figure is still subject to an across-the-board cut of about 30 percent.

The Senate, acting as a committee since there was no quorum, felt that the Baruch community could get by with only eight-page issues of the student newspaper rather than the 12-page issues Ticker had asked for. When, however, the across-the-board cut goes into effect, it will reduce Ticker's total allocation to $8,300, based on a 30 percent cut.

The Fees Committee, on February 27, had passed Ticker's budget request on the condition that the students' only voice would give up $2,900 from its organizational account. This account, however, cannot be touched by Student Government since it is the possession of the House Plan Association, publishers of the formerly uncensored newspaper. The budget request was presented to the Senate which has the final say on allocations. After a long, heated debate, the Senate decided to leave the organizational account alone and cut Ticker's budget to $11,852.36, also eliminating the use of color. A suggestion was made to use the organizational account to cover any additional costs.

Ticker pointed out that the budget request was merely to cover printing costs. The organizational account was used to cover all other expenses, ranging from office supplies to emergency reserve funds.

What will be affected most as a result of this cut are columns and ads. Some, possibly all columns will be dropped. Ads submitted by Baruch organizations will either have to be smaller in size, rates may be raised, or a combination of the two. Ticker will appeal the Senate's decision, but nothing is expected to come of it. The demise of this only means of communication among students is considered by the staff as an act of censorship.

In its infinite wisdom, the Day Session Student Government saw fit to deny the students of Baruch of their only means of communication. At last Thursday's meeting, the Senate voted to reduce Ticker's budget to $11,852.36, also eliminating the use of color. This is truly an act of censorship.

According to the Day Session Constitution, Ticker is charged with the responsibility of electing the Editor, conducting the financial affairs, and regulating the publishing of its newspaper. Ticker's budget was $17,603.01. This covers only emergency issues or overrun. It is almost a third by the Students Government.

To Ticker's organizational account, the printing aspect of the paper. All the expenses are paid including office expenses, subscriptions, photography, typing expenses, telephone, postage, etc. Also, in the case of last semester's 30 percent across-the-board cut, any additional printing expenses are also paid by this account (emergencies issues or overrun). It is a result of this account that we do not have to go to student government to request money for any expenses, which would be in the area of $22,000.

The Senate of Day Session Student Government voted on Thursday, March 8, 1973 to cut Ticker's budget request from $17,603.01 to $11,852.36. This figure is still subject to an across-the-board cut of about 30 percent.

DRAFT COUNSELING

"It came and it went. The 1973 Draft Lottery is now a part of the past. But the results could determine your future. While inductions have ceased, they could resume in the near future. We therefore urge all those with numbers below 50 to prepare their cases if they may qualify for any deferments. If you have any questions or would like to know your rights then come to the Student Draft Counseling Office, 307-A, Student Center.

NOTE: Lower classmen and women needed to be trained as draft counselors.
