Senate Sets Fees Committee
Fees Guidelines Approved

The Day Session Student Government last week established its Fees Committee under the chairmanship of Treasurer Carlyle Thornhill. In an action which surprised veteran observers the nomination of Ms. Alma Brundage, the chief of much debate and initial rejection by the Senate last week, was approved almost without dissent.

The remaining five members of the Committee are:
* Ms. Alice Blanchet
* Mr. Jake Jutkowitz whose nomination was approved at the first meeting of the Senate over two weeks ago.
* Mr. Horace Mahar
* Ms. Nancy Ng
* Mr. Joseph Perez

The initial debate over the candidates lasted over one hour. Mr. Thornhill defended his choices on the grounds that the six represented diverse ethnic backgrounds and that none of the six was heavily involved with any one student organization on campus.

Senator George Kamboursis (Senior-Business) charged that little consideration had been given to the expertise of the nominees following an admission by Ms. Ng that she was relatively, new to student government.

Mr. Thornhill angrily replied that Ms. Ng along with the other members of the Committee possessed "as much experience in fees as two-thirds of those present here have experience in student government."

The Senate’s action culminates a two-week debate over the fitness of the nominees, their appearance before the Senate and their ethnic background.

In other action the Senate approved fifteen guidelines for student activity appropriation. The guidelines were drawn up by Mr. Thornhill in his capacity as Treasurer.

Some of the more significant guidelines are:
1. No consideration will be given to a budget which total exceeds $3,000.00.
2. All TICKER advertisements approved by the Fees Committee shall be paid for by the student government.
3. Following the decision of the Fees Committee, any appeals to restore cuts may not exceed the total of the original request.
4. Appeals Committee decisions will not affect the budget of organizations which did not appeal.
5. The Senate will simply vote to accept or reject the report of the Fees Committee.

Each semester eight dollars (the Student Activity Fee) of every student’s $60 consolidated fee is given to the appropriate student government to allocate. Depending on the number of fee-paying students, this figure for Student Activity Fees represents three to more than $50,000 last Spring alone over $90,000 for this Fall. It was seen to be a large amount, but there are many student organizations vying for their share of the pie.

- Traditionally a large piece is cut to support WMBC, TICKER, and Lexicon (the yearbook) before the remainder is divided up. In recent years our elected student government has chosen to delegate the authority to allocate fees to the Day Session Student Government Treasurer in his appointment (approved by the Senate). This body is called the Fees Committee.
- Theoretically the Fees Committee hears the budgets only of the student activity organizations. The Charter Committee, a standing committee of the Senate, decides whether to grant a charter to a student organization on the basis of its constitution and purpose. A minimum membership of ten students is required. According to Board of Higher Education Bylaws, no group with a program against a particular race or religion can be chartered. Student organizations are not allowed to discriminate in their membership criteria on the basis of race, religion, or sex.
- Last year the division of the pie was criticized by some as unfair and racially biased. This Fall the Treasurer Carlyle Thornhill has appointed a racial mix to the Fees Committee, perhaps in anticipation of similar criticism.

The Fees Committee has already met and as TICKER went to press approximately 30 student organizations had presented their appropriation requests.

It has been reported to TICKER that it is the intention of Mr. Thornhill and his colleagues to conclude this phase of their operation by the end of this week.

TICKER has been meeting in the North Lounge located on the second floor of the Student Center.

5 CBEOC Start In City

When a person is out of a job—or faces a future of low-paying, dead-end jobs—he or she needs help.

City University's five new Computer Based Educational Opportunity Centers (CBEOC) are designed to provide that help by getting individuals into the right career training-and educational programs to unskilled adults, out-of-school young people, veterans, and the physically handicapped.

The Centers, located in Manhattan, the Bronx, and Brooklyn, are now in operation and are taking referrals from community agencies as well as serving any interested individual who wishes to avail himself of the free services.

CBEOC's goal is to match the right person with the right career by letting individuals know about educational programs currently available across the city. The Center's courses of study include all career and educational programs offered by CUNY, by metropolitan area private colleges and universities, and by commercially-operated, post-secondary school programs.

In addition to those counseling services, testing, tutoring, and some remedial education are provided by the Centers. CBEOC also helps clients obtain general high school equivalency diplomas. The main CBEOC center for Manhattan is at the City University's Office of Admission Services at 101 West 31st Street at Avenue of the Americas (Telephone 790-4652).

CBEOC Director Nathan Johns was formerly director of the Board of Trade of New York's Industrial Education Center. He has also been director of the New York State Hospitals Corporation central training staff and director of the Rochester Job Corps Center. The lead coordinator at the OSB Center is Barbara Hackett.

SAT Data Compared

With the release by the College Entrance Examination Board of the results of the 1975 & 1976 SAT's, we are able to compare the performance of students at William Paterson College and the nation as a whole, as well as with their peers in the Middle States region. The National Information Center for Higher Education Planning (NICHEP) has published several studies on the SAT's, which provide a basis for comparison. The SAT's consist of two parts: the verbal section and the mathematics section. The verbal section consists of 400 questions, and the mathematics section consists of 400 questions. The total SAT score is the sum of the verbal and mathematics scores.

The scores for the SAT are reported on a scale of 200 to 800, with 400 being the minimum score. The average SAT score for the nation in 1975 was 445. Students who score above 500 in the SAT are considered to be above average, and students who score below 200 are considered to be below average. Students who score between 200 and 400 are considered to be average. The average SAT score for the nation in 1975 was 445. The administration became aware of a number of cases in which students were not being helped adequately in their problems. In these cases, the administration decided to take action to improve the situation. The administration began by conducting a survey of the faculty to determine what changes were needed. The survey was administered to all members of the faculty, and the results were tabulated to determine the percentage of students who were satisfied with the help they were receiving. The survey revealed that a significant number of students were not satisfied with the help they were receiving. The administration then took steps to improve the situation, including providing additional training for the faculty and offering more support services for the students.

Before the Law

Before the Law stands a doorkeeper. To this doorkeeper, others come seeking admission. He opens the door, and some of the students, who are admitted, break in and kill the rest. But the doorkeeper is never seen. Some engineers have pointed out that the door is open, and that the gate is open. Gradually the gate is opened, and the doorkeeper is seen. The gate stands open, and the doorkeeper steps to one side. The community, which is a concept in the past, is在一旁. And the only remaining in the past is an admission.
