Once More...

We most earnestly request that all members of the Baruch College Day Session community—that is to say, students, faculty members and administrators—join in the City University-wide protest against budget cuts.

Recent history has adequately demonstrated the propensity of our City Fathers for radical surgery of the University budget. Each year, with increasing concern and mounting alarm, we have watched our colleges bleed. Reduced each year, with anger and nearly impotent rage, we have endured increasing classroom deficiencies, lower salaries for faculty and adjunct instructors who were the recipients of notices of non-renewal, due to budgetary contraints. In many schools, we have forgotten that the word “freeze” also means “ICY CHILL.”

Of course, the situation is desperate enough to call the situation intrudes. Of course, we do realize and fully appreciate the fiscal dilemma of the City of New York. Of course we are aware of the economics which must be made. However, we cannot accept the view that the City University of New York, let alone Bernard M. Baruch College, can accomplish its educational mission utilizing the limited funds now proposed by the Mayor, in the face of the largest freshman enrollment in the University’s history.

If it must come down to it, we are utter failures in discerning the logic in the continued construction of the Atlantic Terminal campus for Baruch College when that money is desperately needed just to keep the system itself alive. This, however, is the subject of another editorial.

We can only say this: The crisis is real. The fiscal situation is desperate. We know how we feel. And we had better act now.
