The University Student Senate, representing the 266,000 students of CUNY, and the Professional Staff Congress, the faculty union, have begun a continuing program of active resistance against proposed reductions in the University's 1975-76 fiscal budget, 10% of which increase in fees and grants—a blow to the University's principle of Equal Opportunity for all students. The University Student Senate announced its opposition to the budget cuts and called for a massive demonstration on City Hall Plaza, New York City. The rally was held in response to a series of controversial budget cuts that the Senate has condemned as a threat to the University's educational mission. The rally was attended by thousands of students, faculty, and alumni who joined in the protest against the budget cuts.

The rally was organized by the Student Relations Society, a student-led group that has been at the forefront of the budget crisis. The rally was scheduled for Wednesday, May 20, 1975, and was expected to draw a large crowd of supporters from across the University. The rally was held in response to the University's announcement that it would cut funding for the University's humanities programs, including music and the arts. The rally was organized to protest the budget cuts and to demand that the University reverse its decision.

...in the country only thing that was new was the sound of the plow. The remaining of the country, the familiar scenes, the familiar faces, the familiar sounds, the familiar scents, were all the same. The only thing that was different was the sound of the plow. As a matter of fact, the sound of the plow was the only thing that was different. It was a pleasant sound, a reassuring sound, a comforting sound. It was the sound of the plow that made the country feel at home, feel safe, feel secure. It was the sound of the plow that made the country feel as if it were a place of peace, a place of tranquility, a place of serenity.

Bill Hills

The following story will start to make the country feel as if it were a place of peace, a place of tranquility, a place of serenity.

Once a man was driving through the country when he saw a plow in the field. The man was surprised because he had never seen a plow in the country before. He was wondering what the plow was doing there when he noticed a young boy standing next to the plow. The boy was watching the man as he drove past.

The man asked the boy what he was doing there.

"I'm plowing the field," the boy replied.

"But you're a child," the man said.

"Yes, I'm a child," the boy said, "but I'm plowing the field."

Guide To A Safe And Healthy Vacation

By Richard Rodgers

For many people, summer vacation means a break from the stress of daily life, a chance to relax and enjoy some leisure time. But for others, it can be a time of anxiety and worry, especially if they are unsure about how to protect themselves from illness or injury during their travels.

In this article, we will cover some important aspects of bio-medicine and health care that you should keep in mind while planning your vacation. We will discuss topics such as preventing travel-related illnesses, dealing with minor injuries, and understanding the unique challenges that come with international travel.

1. Preventing Travel-Related Illnesses

- Vaccinations: Make sure you are up-to-date on all necessary vaccinations for your destination. This includes vaccines for diseases such as typhoid fever, hepatitis A and B, polio, and yellow fever, depending on the country you are visiting.
- Malaria prophylaxis: If you are traveling to areas where malaria is prevalent, consider taking antimalarial medications as prescribed by your doctor.
- Good hygiene: Wash your hands frequently with soap and water, especially after using the bathroom, eating, or handling food.

2. Dealing with Minor Injuries

- First aid kit: Pack a basic first aid kit containing bandages, antiseptic wipes, and pain relievers.
- Ice packs: For injuries such as sprains or strains, use an ice pack to reduce swelling and pain.
- Pain management: Over-the-counter pain relievers like ibuprofen or acetaminophen can help with minor pain and discomfort.

3. Understanding International Travel

- International travel can be a unique experience, but it also presents some challenges. Be aware of cultural differences and respect local customs.
- Language barriers: Consider learning some basic phrases in the local language to communicate more effectively.
- Financial considerations: Be mindful of your budget, especially when it comes to travel expenses.

By following these guidelines, you can help ensure a safe and healthy vacation. Remember to stay informed and prepared, and enjoy your time away from home!
The 81st Blow!

"If you cannot end the war but you can end the war-making, then kill yourself," said President Roosevelt.

Thirty years ago, President Roosevelt said this. But he did not mean it literally. He meant it to mean that if you cannot end the war but you can end the war-making, then kill yourself.

To mark the 81st anniversary of this event, the citizens of New York City held a ceremony to commemorate it. The ceremony consisted of a parade, a speech by the mayor, and a moment of silence.

Here is the text from the mayor's speech:

"Today we remember the 81st blow of the war. A blow that was dealt on the night of June 8, 1941. A blow that was dealt by the United States on the German war machine.

"This blow was delivered in the form of an embargo on the sale of arms to the Axis powers. An embargo that was necessary to prevent the Axis powers from continuing their war efforts.

"Today we remember this blow and we honor those who made it possible. The men and women who worked tirelessly to bring about this embargo. The men and women who knew that the only way to end the war was to stop the war-making.

"Today we remember the 81st blow of the war and we remember that it was not enough. We must continue to work towards the end of all wars. We must continue to work towards a world where peace is not just a dream but a reality.

"Thank you."
