As classes begin this week City University’s 18 undergraduate colleges and its graduate school the effects of the $87 million budget reduction imposed by the city move from pencils and paper abstractions to the realities of day-to-day campus life.

The university’s 275,000 full and part-time students, up to 9,500 over last year, have paid an additional million more in fees and tuitions than last year. They are encountering reduced course offerings, and larger classes taught by fewer faculty.

On many campuses the first notable change was visible at registration as professors sat beside clerical desks usually manned by part-time hourly employees. Once students begin classes this week they will find that libraries are open less, that there are fewer blank reams on the shelves, and that their mail is reserved to same day pickup. Students accustomed to teaching assistant offices to spend time clerical staff are forced to rearrange their schedules and to allow adequate time for students to be notified. The new rules are now in effect on all campuses.

Concern for the future of the university is manifest on all campuses. City College, for instance reports that budget cuts and their effects on the college are virtually the only topics of conversation on campus. One of the areas of most immediate impact is that of the increased class size. Many of these part-time people are reportedly thinking of terminating their graduate studies because they have lost or expect to lose their job.

In the South Bronx, Hostos Community College was forced to eliminate 99 percent of its instructional and clerical part-time employees. Because of resulting shifts in full-time faculty rearranged their schedules to allow adequate time for students to be notified. The new rules are now in effect on all campuses.

The elimination of funds for part-time clerical staff has a double effect at City University colleges. Undergraduates who find themselves unemployed at the same time the entire administrative staff—responsible for record keeping, advising, circulation, planning, etc.—faces increased teaching load means less time for research, planning, meeting with individual students or developing new courses. An instructor teaching English composition, for example, will now have 150 papers to correct each week compared with 100 per week last semester.

Throughout the university, practice of having qualified administrators teach at least one course per semester—originally changed after last January’s $220 million budget reduction—is being continued.

No segment of the university community remains unaffected. On every campus programs and areas that have taken years to build have been terminated. At Brooklyn College internal funding has been withdrawn from the Institute of Italian-American Studies, Conte Southeast Asian Studies, the CUNY Fightback committee, called the “CUNY Fightback Committee of Baruch,” intends to organize with other similar committees formed for the same purpose at other CUNY colleges, including City, Manhattan, Brooklyn, and Queens.

Since only fourteen students attended the Baruch committee’s first meeting, the leaders realized that more concerned Baruch students are desperately needed to help in the fight against further budget cuts. The students are now being contacted to organize the students and provide regular meetings, that is, meetings for local area students, to be held by one third at New York City Community College and successful student center placement program.

These areas are now being contacted to organize the students and provide regular meetings. A surprise visitor to the meeting was Mr. Wronsky, Director of the Student Center, who asked if his job was in jeopardy because he had given sworn everything he claimed under oath. (A transcript of this testimony is printed in this issue). As a final question, Mr. Wronsky was asked if his job was in jeopardy because he had given this testimony, he replied “no.” The students hope Mr. Wronsky is correct and that he will be able to remain functioning as Director of the Student Center. After the testimony was completed, the meeting began to break up.

Before the majority of the students had left, however, student leaders passed around sheets of paper, on which the students put their names and addresses so that they could be contacted when and if another meeting was held to sign a charter for a Student Union.

The students lead in the student government leaders lay out their plans for the proposed organization.

The first meeting was a little disorganized, but the students quickly got down after Carlyle Thornhill, Treasurer of the Student Government, began to speak. The discussion turned into a series of allegations, as had the previous meetings, and not much was accomplished during the first half of the meeting.

A surprise visitor to the meeting was Dr. Roy R. Senour, Dean of Students, who has been the subject of much controversy in recent weeks, concerns his alleged inability to maintain a position of such high authority. Dr. Senour was allowed little chance to speak during this gathering, and when given the chance, he basically said the same things as in previous meetings: that he denied everything, that he would meet with a committee of students (excluding the leaders of the Student Government), and that he and his office had nothing to hide. Also at this meeting was Joe Suarez, past Associate Editor of this newspaper, who asked for an oath was given the right to speak to the students.

A committee of students concerned about the possibility of tuition fees to be charged at CUNY in the upcoming spring semester met in room 114 of the 24th Street building, Thursday, during the class. This committee called the “CUNY Fightback Committee of Baruch,” intends to organize with other similar committees formed for the same purpose at other CUNY colleges, including City, Manhattan, Brooklyn, and Queens.

Students, faculty, concerned individuals are encouraged to attend the next meeting of Baruch’s Student Center Planning Committee which will take place Thursday, October 1, in room 114 of the Campus building. People are needed to help distribute petitions, draw posters, write and/or, circulate anti-budget cut literature.

To contract the committee leaders, call Mark Rohrlich (922-1233) or Orlando Alonso (281-0737).

There will be a meeting of the various CUNY Fightback committees in order to organize, at 7:30, Thursday, October 2, at 129-W. 22nd Street, 9th floor. Also, there will be a meeting of the Student Center, for which a place only at nine o’clock, there will be a party to all members of the CUNY Fightback committee.

This is my first attempt at the school's yearbook. I want to express my gratitude to all the teachers, students, and even the administrators who have supported me. I hope this work will inspire others to pursue their dreams.

Being A Freshman

By Sue Woodbridge

At the beginning of my first day at Baruch, I thought it would be a smooth transition. However, as I started to navigate the campus, I realized how vast Baruch truly is. I remember feeling a bit overwhelmed, but I was able to make some new friends and settle in. It truly is a great experience to be a freshman at Baruch.

More Illicit CIA Operations

By Steve Kahan

It’s a premise that has the intrigue of a novel by James Grady, the author of “The Fugitive”. They’re CIA agents, but they’re not 술. They are agents who are being targeted by the shadowy figure of National Security Agency (NSA). And the plot is to be revealed in a way that will leave you breathless.

The story begins in 1973, when the NSA, which has been monitoring the communications of the CIA, discovers that the agency is using illegal methods to spy on foreign leaders. In response, the NSA decides to target the people in the CIA who are responsible for these actions.

But the CIA is not going to sit back and take this lying down. They decide to counterattack, and the result is a series of plot twists that will leave you guessing until the very end.

The cast is led by Robert Redford, who plays the CIA agent who is being targeted. He is joined by Faye Dunaway, who plays his wife, and William Atherton, who plays the agency’s director.

The film is directed by Sydney Pollack, who has a long history of working with the stars of this film. He directed “The French Connection” and “浓” and has already worked with both Redford and Dunaway.

The film is set to open on April 30, 1981, and is expected to be a major hit.

Yankees Lost the Season

By Richard Warren

The margin between the winning and losing teams was not nearly as large as the public has been led to believe. For the twenty-four years, the Yankees have been in the American League pennant race in late September. In most cases, they have been on the outside looking in. But this year, they finally made it. They won the American League East Division and then proceeded to lose the American League Championship Series (ALCS) to the Chicago White Sox in five games. The Series was only the second time in the history of Major League Baseball that a division winner was defeated in the ALCS.

The Yankees stumbled in the early part of the season, finishing in fourth place in the AL East with a 72-90 record. But they turned it around in the second half of the season, finishing with a record of 95-67 and finishing in first place.

The Yankees faced the Chicago White Sox in the ALCS, and the series was evenly matched. The White Sox had a record of 82-78, and the Yankees had a record of 95-67. The series was played in Chicago, and the Yankees won two of the first three games.

The Yankees won the first game of the series, 7-2, on September 26, and the White Sox won the second game, 5-4, on September 27.

The Yankees won the third game, 11-7, on September 28, and the White Sox won the fourth game, 10-6, on September 29.

The Yankees won the fifth and final game, 7-5, on September 30, and the series ended.

The Yankees will now move on to the World Series, where they will face the Los Angeles Dodgers. The Dodgers have a record of 112-50, and they are coming off a championship season. The Series will be played in Los Angeles, and the Yankees will play the first game on October 1.

The Rise and Fall of the Rangers

By Mary Beckwith

The Rangers have been one of the most exciting teams in the National Hockey League (NHL) for the past few years. They have made it to the Stanley Cup Final three times in the past five years, and they have won the Cup once.

But this year, the Rangers have struggled. They finished the regular season with a record of 43-31-16, which was good enough to win the Atlantic Division, but not good enough to win the Presidents' Trophy, which is given to the team with the best overall record in the league.

The Rangers have faced many challenges this season. They have had to deal with injuries to several key players, including goalie Mike Liut, who missed 16 games with a shoulder injury. They have also had to deal with a slow start to the season, which caused them to fall behind in the standings.

Despite these challenges, the Rangers have shown that they have the potential to be a great team. They have a young and talented group of players, and they have the ability to be a force in the playoffs.

The Rangers will now move on to the first round of the playoffs, and they will face the New York Islanders. The Islanders have a record of 46-29-13, and they have been one of the best teams in the league all season. The series will be played in New York, and the Rangers will play the first game on April 1.

SOCCEr AND THE SCHEDULE

The return of right-striker star new coach Ingmar Sardinia provides a boost for the team. The combination of Sardinia, who has scored 12 goals in 20 games, and star midfielder John Arne Riise has given the team some much-needed offensive punch. The team's defense has also been improved, with goalkeeper Bjarne Bertram and centerback Håkan Sahlqvist playing well.

SOUL STIRRING IMPRESSION

_by John Conan_

A new look, a new attitude. Fond years ago, Arnold Schwarzenegger was just another bodybuilder, working out hard, eating well, and competing in contests. But today, he is one of the world's highest paid bodybuilders. Arnold was not always that way. He began his career as a bodybuilder at age 17, but it was not until he was 20 that he began to win the big competitions. In 1975, he won his first Mr. Olympia title. Since then, he has won it eight more times.

Arnold's success is due to his dedication and discipline. He follows a strict training routine and a strict diet. He trains six days a week, and each workout includes exercises for every muscle group. His diet is very high in protein and low in fat. He eats six small meals a day, and his meals are high in protein and low in carbohydrates.

Arnold is also a very determined person. When he lost a competition, he didn't stop. He continued to train and eat properly, and he continued to win. He is a true champion, and he has proven that with his hard work and dedication, anything is possible.

CROSS COUNTRY and the schedule

With five of the eight runners who set the promeney records in two races over half mile, 138 of the 499 runners for the opening meet of the season were in attendance. What are Arnold's views of bodybuilding?

Arnold believes that bodybuilding is a sport, not just a hobby. He says that bodybuilding is a way of life, and he encourages others to adopt the same attitude. He says that bodybuilding is not just about getting in shape, but about becoming the best version of oneself. He encourages others to set goals and work hard to achieve them.

Arnold's success is due to his dedication and discipline. He follows a strict training routine and a strict diet. He trains six days a week, and each workout includes exercises for every muscle group. His diet is very high in protein and low in fat. He eats six small meals a day, and his meals are high in protein and low in carbohydrates.

Arnold is also a very determined person. When he lost a competition, he didn't stop. He continued to train and eat properly, and he continued to win. He is a true champion, and he has proven that with his hard work and dedication, anything is possible.
