Parties Gear Up For Election

By Michael Lashinsky

Richard Akuetty of the Baruch Independent Party (BIP), and Daniel Tony Walker of the United Students for Action Party (USA), candidates for the Day Session Student Government (DSSG) presidency, have started to prepare their platforms for the elections on May 6, 7 and 8.

In interviews during the week of April 15, Akuetty and Walker discussed why they feel they are qualified to be President, and what policies they would support if elected.

In stating why he should be elected President, Akuetty emphasized what he felt his accomplishments were in his two years in government as a member of council and then as executive vice president of DSSG. In discussing his work in council he said, “My main interest was Campus Affairs.” He was the chairman of Campus Affairs. “I tried to balance off the parties with cultural events,” said Akuetty, naming as examples bars and guest speakers as some of these events.

Akuetty named the Yelemiijara fundraising campaign, the formation of the Tutoring Committee funded by DSSG, and the establishment of unity between the members of the two parties in this year’s government as his main accomplishments. In reference to the Tutoring Committee Akuetty said, “It’s a massive program to set up from scratch, we wanted to address the mass academic problems at Baruch that previous governments didn’t address, we’ve tutored over 100 people so far. You start it out and iron out the kinks and try to perfect it. We eventually want to meet the needs of all students who need tutoring.”

Weiss Resigns as Chairman of Student Council

Condemns Akuetty, Sit and Appointees

By Michael Lashinsky

Jeffrey Weiss, the chairman of the Day Session Student Council resigned his position on April 3, citing his disagreement with several members of the DSSG executive branch, and the decision of Executive Vice President Michael Carucy to run for President.

Weiss said that “this resignation is my way of telling the students something is wrong with government.”

Weiss specifically cited Po Sit, president of the DSSG, Akue-
tty, and appointed Vice Presidents, Mitchell Kirshner, External Affairs; Joseph Robinson, Internal Affairs; and Neil Weiss, “academic Affairs, as being inactive.”

Sit said that he was under the impression that Weiss resigned for different reasons. “He was sick and was dropped by a professor in one class and he had to drop another,” said Sit. Akuetty said that Jeff has been out for most of the semester. When you’re out as much as he was you have a lot of trouble.

Sitting on the board along with the four executive board members are three council members, according to Connelly, “a balance between the executive board and the council.”

Former Chairperson Jeff Weiss was quoted in the newspaper saying, “it's a balance between the executive board and the council.”

Sit said that he called "three executive board meetings during the year" and that he couldn't call

On the Student Elections
The months of April and May bring the Day Session Student Government elections to Baruch. However, all too often the elections become a platform for hyperbole and name calling.

These type actions culminated in the issue of The Tickler, as Jeff Weiss, the Chairman of the Student Council, resigned and leveled criticism at Akettey, this year's Executive Vice-President and Po Sit, the President. Weiss accused Akettey and Sit of being inactive and failing to work with the council, which he termed hardworking. Akettey and Sit questioned whether this was the real reason why Weiss resigned, because Weiss has been out in a large part of the semester and had work to catch up on. The Tickler feels there is enough blame to go around.

Sit and Akettey have definitely failed to take an interest in working with the council this year. Things got so bad that one point, council sent a letter to Sit asking him to show up at the council meetings. The President, however, stated that he would only show up if the council members were not present.

The selling of The Tickler move raises questions as to what his motives were. Weiss was ill this semester and he was out for a lengthy time. However, he stated that he was resigning because of his dig out with many of the student government executive branch and Akettey's decision to get out. It appears that Weiss has not been up front in his reasons for resigning. In addition, if Weiss felt angry about the way the executive branch was working, why did he wait until April to make his stand? And why was Weiss not present when The Tickler was made available to the public?

Elections Politicking
To the Editor,
I would like to congratulate you and your staff on the outstanding job you have done in informing the student body on the current political conditions that faced both faculty and students at Baruch College. In one issue of The Tickler, you have done more to mention their problem than the entire student body has done in one year. Some of you may not know it, but if the Student Government wanted to really reflect this student loyalty it would be within their financial capacity to do so.

I think that these changes are necessary on the part of the president and the government. Students have been let down. Students know that the government has done its job, because they have let the current continue uncorrected. The problems that are now being referred to the administration of the school and the government are uncorrected.

If we are to continue to be a part of the administration of the school, we must correct these problems. Some of the problems include: The lack of proper facilities for students, the lack of proper facilities for students, the lack of proper facilities for students, and the lack of proper facilities for students. The problems that are now being referred to the administration of the school and the government are uncorrected.

If we are to continue to be a part of the administration of the school, we must correct these problems. Some of the problems include: The lack of proper facilities for students, the lack of proper facilities for students, the lack of proper facilities for students, and the lack of proper facilities for students. The problems that are now being referred to the administration of the school and the government are uncorrected.

In the coming weeks, we will celebrate the triumph of justice over iniquity, of humanity over political ideologies in an atmosphere of global elation. While President Reagan, in a gesture of recognition, will choose to highlight all those of the United Nations who have contributed to the liberation of the people of the world from the yoke of Communism, we shall remember that at this time, the spirit of the world is concerned about our destiny and that the world is concerned about our destiny.

Good Tickler
To the Editor,
This was another great edition of The Tickler. As usual, the Tickler was well done. The satirical depiction of Baruch's enrollment situation was too good. Using humor to humanize such a serious issue is something we need more of today.

The Tickler is published every seven a semester. All work with the exception of top reporting is contributed by CUNY BA students. We welcome all contributions and criteria that are typed and signed. We are located in the 5th Floor Mailroom, mailing address at 257 E 25th Street, New York, N.Y. 10010. (212) 720-7360.

Vietnam: the war that put us in our place
By Tom Lantos
April 30th is the 100th anniversary of the end of the Vietnam War. It is a time to reflect on the lessons that we learned from our nation’s history.

We were all affected by the Vietnam War. We learned that the war was not just a military conflict, but also a struggle for freedom and democracy. We also learned that the war was not just a military conflict, but also a struggle for freedom and democracy. We also learned that the war was not just a military conflict, but also a struggle for freedom and democracy.

The war was not just a military conflict, but also a struggle for freedom and democracy. We also learned that the war was not just a military conflict, but also a struggle for freedom and democracy. We also learned that the war was not just a military conflict, but also a struggle for freedom and democracy.

As we look back at the Vietnam War, we can see that the lessons we learned are still relevant today. We can see that the lessons we learned are still relevant today. We can see that the lessons we learned are still relevant today. We can see that the lessons we learned are still relevant today.

We can see that the lessons we learned are still relevant today. We can see that the lessons we learned are still relevant today. We can see that the lessons we learned are still relevant today. We can see that the lessons we learned are still relevant today.

New Major at Baruch The CUNY Board of Trustees is expected to approve a resolution going ahead with a program of citywide studies in the four fields being considered at Baruch College. Students, who choose this new minor can concentrate in one of four fields: humanities, business administration, corporate communications, and business journalism. The students will be able to choose a minor in one of these fields, and the curriculum would include at least 27 credits.

Libary Hour Expansion The success of the experimental Sunday Library hours last semester has prompted a second trial run scheduled for the last four weeks before the Memorial Day weekend, according to Stephen E. Riddle, chief librarian. The one-hour period last fall from 1-3 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 6th, and 16th saw a total of 270 library users per week, 76.4% of whom were students. This was an average of 160 every Sunday, according to Bildoll.

Baruch Hosts Symposium on Music Videos and Their Effect

By Ma F. Lin

Music videos have spurred a new and rapidly developing industry, as evidenced not only by friends asking each other if they've seen Madonna's latest video, but also by the subject of a symposium presented here at Baruch College. On Tuesday, Professor Richard J. Viano of the Department of Music, who served as moderator, presented the video, which was shot in 1984 and 1985, and directed by Bruce, to the students. Professor Viano introduced the video producer, Irving Azoff, and the video director, Bruce. The video was shot in New York City and features a young couple, a man and a woman, who are interviewed by a television reporter. The video is a collection of different scenes that show the couple's relationship and their reactions to various events in their lives. The video is a mix of music, images, and storytelling, and it was designed to be viewed in a single sitting. The video was presented here at Baruch College as part of a symposium on music videos.

The symposium was presented by the music industry and the Baruch College Department of Music. The symposium was attended by music industry professionals, students, and faculty members. The symposium was held in the Ocean Room of the Baruch College Center. The symposium was entitled "Music Videos: An Emerging Form of Popular Culture." The American first prize winner was Majopi Pela, she sang "The Way We Were," without any musical accompaniment. She was awarded a $100.00 gift certificate to Macy's, was praised by Bick after Bick, a brother and sister act, by Binnom. Alfred played the saxophone and Sabrina played the piano. "Jesus is Love" was the melody played. The second prize winner was Alfred Binnom, who was the first prize winner of the show. Each judge announced one winner and presented them with their prize. Judge Bick wrote an analysis of the act and said, "I was very surprised to win because they like audiences tired me."

Amy won a $200.00 gift certificate to Macy's, which was awarded by Bick. Amy was a senior, was competing in the Choral Lute and was accom­panied on the piano by her father. Although there were only three winners announced that evening, there were plenty of other talented people on stage. There were dancers, singers, comedians, magicians, and entertainers. The third prize winner was Mayella Borringer, the assistant director of Student Activities and Student Center, and Vanessa Binnom, the right manager of the Office of Student Activities. The Talent Show was on for three hours. There was magic in between each act. The winners were announced at the end of the show. Each judge announced one winner and presented them with their prize.

Theatre at Baruch...

Since Baruch is a business school, there are not nearly enough cultural events that take place during the school year. One of the few was the recent production of Where's Charley? Premiered jointly by the Drama Department and the Repertory Theater at Baruch College. The production was entitled "Where's Charley?" presented by Baruch College and the Repertory Theater. Baruch is a leading producer in the New York City area, and is the only school to produce such a show.

"Where's Charley?" is a musical play that takes place in a restaurant during the week and in a bar during the weekend. The play is set in New York City, and it is a romantic comedy about a man who is constantly being chased by a woman who he is trying to escape from. The woman is played by a popular Broadway actress, and the man is played by a noted actor who has appeared in many other productions.

The play's incredible, witty dialogue is the highlight of the performance. The characters are well-developed, and the plot is well-paced. The acting is excellent, and the set design is clever. The play is a must-see for anyone who enjoys a good musical comedy.

Focus: Eric Clapton's Back

Eric Clapton's latest album is a personal triumph. It's a work of art that he describes as "a medley," a box of tricks opened wide. It's an album that defies categorization—a mixture of blues, jazz, funk, reggae, and rock, all wrapped up in a single, cohesive package.

The album, produced by Phil Collins, features a mix of Clapton's original songs and covers, each with its own unique sound. From the opening track "I Can't Stand It," it's clear that Clapton is confident in his ability to handle any style of music.

Clapton's guitar playing is as smooth and seamless as ever, with a touch of jazz that adds a new layer of depth to his sound. His vocals are also on point, with a soulful quality that draws you in.

The album is a testament to Clapton's versatility, and it's clear that he's still the master of his craft. His ability to blend different genres together is a true testament to his musical genius.

Clapton's dedication to his craft is evident in every note he plays. He's a true musician, and this album is a reflection of that.

The majority of the songs on the record are covers, including a medley of songs that Clapton has performed on his previous albums. This is a testament to his ability to reinvent classic songs and make them his own.

Clapton's latest album is a must-listen for any music lover, and it's a true testament to his musical genius.
On October 1, 1932, in the third game of the World Series, the Chicago Cubs’ Charlie Root threw two quick strikes past the most famous baseball player who ever lived. And then the giant Yankee they called “Babe” raised his right arm and pointed to the farthest part of Wrigley Field. Seconds later, Root’s pitch was skyrocketed over that same wall for one of the most famous homeruns in baseball history— and another chapter in the Babe Ruth legend.

Last year, when we stormed into government in one of the most dramatic elections in Baruch’s history, we did so with the promise that we would address problems ignored by previous governments. For 7 years, as almost 1 of 2 students dropped out before 4 years while budget cutbacks forced the school to reduce funding for tutoring and other much needed programs, past student governments did nothing. As large percentages of students, as high as 50%, in some cases failed courses such as Math 2005, Accounting 1101 and Finance 2600, still the previous student governments did nothing.

Last year, we promised that with your support, student governments inactivity on academic issues would stop. In one year, we’ve been able to do what past governments could not do in almost a decade — use your student activity fees to help you pass courses, graduate in 4 years and land a job. In just our first year, we’ve become the first student government to implement a free, student-run tutoring program. Today, if you need help in any class, you can get it without delay — free of charge. And if you’re doing great in a course, we’ll pay you to help someone who’s not doing so hot. So far, we’ve helped over 100 students. Next year we’ll expand it and help many more.

In addition to implementing programs on our own, we’ve also worked closely with the administration to address other problems, because we realize that a better college requires strong cooperation between students and administrators. By speaking in front of the Board of Trustees of CUNY, we were able to draw attention to and force a change in the unfair method of grading English courses at Baruch. In the past if you were doing passing work in an English course you’d automatically receive an “F” if you failed the WAT test. Imagine — all semester long you’ve been doing “A” work and because of one test, you receive an “F.” Starting next year, that will change. Instead of an “F,” you’ll get an “R” so that although you’ll still have to repeat the course, your GPA, at least, won’t be affected.

We’ve also worked with the administration to find a professional, reliable vendor who won’t default on payments like the last one did. Next year, we’ll work with the administration to tackle other problems, such as the inadequate number of personnel in the career placement center, and the poor state of our lounges. These are just a few of the things we’ve done in just one year. We’ve also expanded free legal services to handle cases that carry over past the academic year. In the past, if your case went on after school closed, you had to pay the rest of the expenses. This year, you won’t — we will, because we realize that your problems don’t end just because school does. In the days to follow, you’ll be hearing lots more about what we’ve done and what we plan to do. We’ve got a lot to say because we’re proud of what we’ve been able to accomplish. With your support again, we’ll do even more next year. WE PROMISE.
