Over 100 Students Closed Out Of Accounting Course
By Steven Baum

One hundred and seven accounting students, mainly graduating seniors, were closed out of the evening section of an upper-level accounting course.

The course, Accounting 4365, TR59 (Tax Accounting Concepts, Business Tax, and Estate Income Taxes), is an elective, but accounting majors say that it is necessary to prepare for the Certified Public Accountant's Exam.

"If you don't take the course," said Juan Torres, a junior majoring in accounting, "then you'll have to learn the material by yourself." Torres said he did not even try to register for the course in his junior year because he knew he would not get in. "Conceivably, you could pass the exam, but everyone's not that gifted," said Torres.

The CPA exam is divided into four sections: auditing, tax, general practice and theory.

Electives Limited

In the rigidly prescribed curriculum of accounting, the only elective choice they have is between Accounting 4365 and Accounting 4330 (Accounting and Information Systems) a course that is relatively new to the accounting department.

Although there have been semesters in which numerous students were denied entrance into Accounting 4365, the numbers have never been nearly so large. According to Barbara M. Lambert, director of curricular guidance for the School of Business and Public Administration, "the problem is that student enrollment in evening classes is increasing. "Over 50 percent of those who are registered as full-time day students take some evening classes." Consequently, evening classes are becoming overloaded - something that inflated the number of students offering to register to 4365, TR53.

Because such a large number of students were unable to get into Accounting 4365, the Curricular Guidance Office increased the number of students in section TR58 by approximately 18 percent, according to Lambert. This allowed a few more students admission into the course. Meanwhile, as this class was being enlarged, all three sections of Accounting 4330 remained open.

"Error in planning" Several students said they registered for Accounting 4365, TR53, because they were the only elective class they could fit into their schedule. The evening section of Accounting 4330, the alternative to Accounting 4365, which is prescribed by the Accounting department, is in direct time conflict with both evening auditing courses. Accounting 5323 - Principles of Auditing, and Accounting 5324 - Advanced Auditing. This was an "error in planning" on the part of curricular guidance, Lambert said.

Since many accounting students made this complaint, Curricular Guidance convinced the Accounting Department to raise the limits in both sections of Accounting 4365, TR53 and the day section, RT13, by 10 seats in each class. The first 10 students were placed in the Accounting 4365 section of their choice, the next 10 were placed into either section strictly on a space available basis under the new limits.

Lambert said that this was a "bending of the new registration rules placed into effect for the Spring 1986 semester. According to a notice sent to all early registrants, "the course offerings by the School of Business and Public Administration for Spring 1986 reflects the..." (Continued on Page 4, Col. 4)

NEW ID CARDS WITH BIRTHDATE TO BE ISSUED
By Neeraj Vohra

All incoming students, freshman and transfer, will receive Baruch College IDs with their date of birth on the front, beginning with the Spring 1986 semester.

The new IDs are a result of the new alcohol policy approved late last semester by Joel Segall, president of Baruch College. The new policy requires students wishing alcoholic beverages at social functions to have a valid photo ID proving they are over twenty-one.

The entering freshmen and transfer students will automatically receive the new IDs, while students with the old IDs will have to go to the Registrar to get the new cards (see table on page 4).

"Cost saving" in short-run

According to Registrar Thomas P. McCarthy, the new procedure will not increase the cost of issuing new IDs. "In the short run, it's a cost saving measure," said McCarthy.

In the new procedure a prepared label is simply affixed next to the student's photograph and the whole card is laminated. In the past, the student's name and social security number had to be manually typed.

The labels have been generated by a computer using basic master files.

Ronald M. Aaron, associate dean of students, said that he believed within four or five years, all Baruch student IDs will have a date of birth on them. Aaron said it would take that long because not all students will exercise their option and exchange their old IDs for new ones.

There is no cost to the student as long as the old ID is returned. If the..." (Continued on Page 7, Col. 1)

CUNY student body." He said that the conference was well attended by a good "cross-section of students."

Other speakers at the conference included Steve McArlde, president of the college council of Albany; Joseph S. Murphy, chancellor of CUNY, the Rev. Tyrone Crider, director of admissions at Central State University, and Shuping Coogage, representing the African National Congress. All of the speakers focused or commented on the subject of apartheid in South Africa.

On Friday night, attendees at the conference were treated to a performance by the Ujama Black Theater on the subject of apartheid in South Africa.

Fred Rooney, a reporter from CUNY Law School and a member of the United Students for Better Government coalition, addresses the USS plenary session.

Assemblyman Jose Serrano (D-Bronx). Serrano was the only one that attended. "We received enough of a positive response from their offices (that they would attend)," said Hart. "Students should know who we reached out to." Dinkins had made a confirmation to attend, but the conference was held right before his inauguration so he had to cancel at the last moment. "We have no absolute control over their attendance," said Hart.

"It is an excellent forum to invite speakers," according to Errol Coage, representing the African National Congress. "It is an excellent forum to invite speakers," he said. "We have no absolute control over their attendance," he said.

"The internal political dispute concerned a change in the by-laws that occurred at the April 28, 1985 plenary session of the USS. Several senators, including Joe Sellman, a Baruch senator from the Evening Student Assembly and Eli­jah Etheridge Muhammed, a sena­tor from the Borough of Manhat­tan Community College, contend that the by-laws were passed illegal­ly. The major effect of the by-law change was an extension of the term of the USS chair by five months from January to May. (Continued on Page 7, Col. 1)

Charter Defense

To The Editor:

Terry Morris proceeds from profound ignorance in his nationally syndicated column that Barbara Chow and the Government Center Coalition of New York are dupes of the Board of Trustees of the New York City University. The central thrust of his attack on the student governance movement is that the student government is not elected. This is not true. The student government was elected by the students of the college. The student governance movement is not a fabrication. It is the result of years of frustration and a genuine desire on the part of the students for a voice in the decision-making processes of the college. The student government is a reflection of the belief that the student voice should be heard in the corridors of a university's administration.

Moreover, the student government has been instrumental in bringing about many changes at the college. It has been responsible for the establishment of student-run media, the creation of a student center, and the implementation of a variety of student-serving programs. The student government has been a driving force in the development of a more democratic and participatory university system.

Terry Morris seems to believe that the student government is a threat to the administration. This is not true. The student government is not a threat to the administration. The student government is a reflection of the students' desire for a more participatory and democratic university system.

Terry Morris is not only ignorant of the student government's history but also of its impact on the college. old ID is returned, there is a $1 charge when the new card is picked up. According to McCarthy, the new card is approximately $1.25, not including labor.

The case of exchanging old IDs for new is handled by the Day Session Student Government and the Bernard M. Baruch College Association, Inc. Both Aaron and McCarthy expect the number of students exchanging IDs to be small. McCarthy stated that the number of students expected to exchange IDs would be small. McCarthy said the number "would be measured by how many student activities require an ID." According to Carl Aylrman, director of student activities, there will be required. ABaruch art student received a $25 award on Dec. 10 for designing an original poster for the security awareness campaign. McLaughlin said that a large percentage of crimes at Baruch is "pre-emptively attributable to someone who has been exposed to a criminal in the past." Students and faculty are invited to attend.

Interns Sought

For Summer '86

The Student Conservation Association is hiring entry level interns for the summer of 1986. The interns will be exposed to research, educational and practical experiences.

The internship, which publishes the bi-weekly "Environmental Newsletter," and the quarterly "Journal," will pay $300 a week (plus room and board) for their work on this national conservation service project.

There are internships available in the northeast, central, and southwest regions of the United States.

Great Blue, Route 308, 17 Lexington Ave. The deadline for applications is February 3.

Health Insurance Plans Available

Blue Cross/Blue Shield and the Colonial Prime Insurance Company are offering separate voluntary group health insurance plans to full-time Baruch College students.

Information about the Colonial Prime plan, which has a starting date of Feb. 1, is available from the Office of the Director of Student, Room 702, 45 Park Ave., New York.

The Blue Cross/Blue Shield plan has a starting date of Jan. 1, 1986, and can be obtained with Blue Cross/Blue Shield on Thursday, Feb. 20, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the library of 155 E. 24 St. Students should also have medical information at hand when they apply.

The Blue Cross/Blue Shield plan is only available to full-time students under the age of 26; the Colonial Prime plan has age restrictions but does not cover pre-existing conditions.

Participating In A Simulated Society

By Lorina Grant

A good number of Baruch students have been making and breaking the career rules of promoting young professionals, networking and dealing with marketing placement offices, and even accepting foreign offers from overseas companies. Those who have been successful often say that they started their careers in a more traditional way by working at their local placement offices.

After about eight weeks of lectures, the students are introduced to the game, which says Martin Edelstein, lecturer in sociology and anthropology, is designed to give students "first-hand experience in the dynamics of society." Last semester Edelstein and (Judco). Students who are not designated as communists governments for more than a week, are faced with a basically unestablished which they must participate as citizens and, dealing with marketing and media moguls which has the rules and regulations of the society. Simsoc is the game as a whole. But also as in real life, the rules of Simsoc sometimes need to be changed. Cowan, also in the context of society's welfare and more personal goals. Simsoc, Edelstein contends that "the benefit of the game depend on the student extending himself."

"The student's personality affects how the player participates in the game and how much he will be accepted as a leader." Simsoc last semester, felt that "there is too much enthusiasm." That also believes that the game should be played in order to adopt society's personality, and said the personality of limited students in the game itself. While other students also wrote that Simsoc is "their way of coping through a situation without any other society's personality and political go hand to hand. One student who wanted to have a permit for politics and was willing to extend himself, ended up as a political director. The game is not limited by the rules, and a simple approach can result in some interesting proposals. Students who are not designated as leaders must seek employment within one of the seven basic groups. Students tend to bring their procedures and fears into the game and this may affect the outcome. Edelstein notes that for many people "there is an only and the unknown is a lot of ways. The Ticker seminar will be on the 9th of May. Each issue is $1.00. The Ticker is recognized around the world. In Search of The Perfect Cafeteria Food

The reporting for this article was done by Vicki Drake, Eric Fox, Michael Lashin-Fox, Michael Lindenberg, and Michael P. Yager. The article was written by Orest Mandzy.

The food we tried in the cafeterias was not up to par. It was not the type of food that one would expect in a cafeteria. It was, however, the type of food we had to eat.

Canteen Corp. has taken over the duties of providing food service to Baruch students. In this regard, there is much room for improvement. Orest Mandzy and the staff of The Ticker decided that it was time for an objective evaluation of the food products provided by Canteen Corp. to our consumption. We sampled five of our hungry writers and visited the cafeteria on the 10th floor of 17 Lexington Ave. upon arrival we saw that the entire cafeteria looked more like a filthy subway station than an eatery. Soda was spilled on the floor, wrappers were on the tables, and the few seats that were available were more receptive to roaches than to the derrieres of students.

Upon arrival we saw that the entire cafeteria looked more like a filthy subway station than an eatery. Soda was spilled on the floor, wrappers were on the tables, and the few seats that were available were more receptive to roaches than to the derrieres of students.

We didn’t actually see any hand-shelled oranges. The floor, tables, and all areas of the cafeteria were littered with cigarette ashes and butts. It is important to point out that in this cafeteria, there were only two machines that dealt with cigarettes and butts. It still seemed like a filthy subway station. We also saw that the entire cafeteria looked more like a filthy subway station than an eatery.

It is the tastiest pop corn that we have ever had. It is also a bargain. The price is right.

Our final say on Canteen Corp.’s cafeteria service is that if you want us to think of Canteen Corp. as a cafeteria, you are thinking of a deli that offers cleaner service, fresher food and a better variety.

We are sad to say it appears that again the students are paying the heavy diners. The price is right.

The astute student would be prudent in inquiring about the prices of the cafeteria. The prices are not high. The choice for this article is apparent. Canteen offers virtually no outside service. They, however, are responsible for maintaining a fresh supply of food in the vending machines and keeping the cafeteria clean. The former is done adequately. We did not see any food stains with resident food. The only thing that was adequate was the vending machines. The next time you decide to cut your savings or spend your money wisely, take it to the theater and enjoy. It’s far better than what most theaters offer, and it costs about half as much.

The “Peacock” Shows its Colors

By Martin Sklar

The 1985-86 television season is half over and, for the first time ever, NBC is, in a manner of speaking, on top. The network has developed three new hit shows, all of which deserve the epithet, "must-sees," for their innovative formats, compelling story lines, and high-quality production. The other networks have not yet achieved the same level of success, but they are close. ABC’s "Growing Pains" and "Riptide" against "Highway to Heaven" and "Dallas," and NBC’s "Miami Vice" and "Miami "are the only shows on television that have captured the hearts, funnybones, and minds of America as well as put to rest all criticism and speculation.

ABC’s "Miami Vice" has been a phenomenal success, with its high-tech crime drama set in Miami and featuring the characters of Vice Det. Thomas Magnum (Tom Selleck) and C.I. John James "J.J." Evers (John Hillerman). The show has been praised for its stylish production values, realistic depiction of Miami life, and for its clever writing and acting. The network is definitely playing for the entire season and is sure to be a ratings winner.

ABC has also been doing some more Wednesday night mini-series, featuring "The Facts of Life," "227," and "Golden Girls," all of which are very successful. NBC’s "Miami Vice" is a clear winner, with its high-quality production and compelling story lines. The network is definitely playing for the entire season and is sure to be a ratings winner.

ABC has also been doing some more Monday night mini-series, featuring "The Facts of Life," "227," and "Golden Girls," all of which are very successful. NBC’s "Miami Vice" is a clear winner, with its high-quality production and compelling story lines. The network is definitely playing for the entire season and is sure to be a ratings winner.

Men's Volleyball Team Loses Twice

By Orest Mandzy

The Baruch College men's volleyball team lost its second game of the season on Jan. 27, when it lost to Columbia University by the score of 3-0.

The loss came three days after their opening day loss to Lehman College. The score of that game was 3-1. Mauricio Correa, Baruch's coach, attributed the loss to the fact that his team had only practiced a few times together before the games. He said, "I really think we have the talent. There was no time to get the intangibles going. The intangibles being team spirit."

In the first match of the game against Columbia, Baruch fell to an early deficit, 5-1, before Correa called time-out in order to talk to his team. Shortly thereafter, a few errors on the part of Columbia's players and fine spikes by Baruch's Stanley "Scoby" Barbier and Gerard Kamperven tied the score at eight. Columbia, however, made fewer mistakes and played a more cohesive match, which is usually reason for a win. Baruch lost the first match, 15-11.

Baruch took the early lead in the second match of this best-of-five game, 3-0. Using an apparent strategy of faking the spike and volleying the ball over the net to an area void of Columbia defenders, Baruch scored successfully three times before Columbia scored once.

Confusion on the part of Baruch's players, however, led to Columbia's quick comeback. They took the lead, 8-3. Again, Baruch came up with a moment of brilliant play and tied the match up at nine. However, Columbia outplayed Baruch in the match and won, 15-12.

The third match was a rout of Baruch by Columbia. Before Baruch scored once, Columbia had scored five times. It appeared as though the Baruch players were more concerned about going home on the #1 train than about playing volleyball. Columbia took advantage of their lackadaisical play and defeated Baruch handily, 15-2.

Victor Pajares, one of the team's two primary setters, said that he was disappointed with how the team gave up in the last match. Correa said, "A team has to go through some hardship together... then each player could stick up for each other."

It was apparent that Baruch was capable of beating Columbia, yet just played too inconsistently. The few moments of brilliant play were overshadowed by longer periods of inconsistent and sloppy play. A primary factor in the outcome of the game was that Baruch's players didn't always know where their teammates were on the court. Columbia, on the other hand, played like a well-oiled machine; always aware of what each individual on the court was doing and where he was doing it.

If what Correa says is true — "You have your confidence when you've gone through hardships together" — then Baruch should gain their team confidence very soon, after losing to Lehman and Columbia.

Basketball team Loses Seventh in a Row

By Mark Levine

The Baruch basketball team lost to Lehman College, 74-68, at Lehman College on Jan. 24. The Statesmen now hold a 4-12 record, and are 2-7 in the CUNY standings.

Despite the team's position, Coach Ray Rankin is not upset with his team. He said, "We have had periods of brilliance and games in which we played good teams and just can't get over the hump; it's just a question of getting a break."

The Lehman game was another tough one to swallow. With 10 minutes left in the first half, Baruch had a 16-15 lead, but in the next eight minutes, Lehman outscored Baruch 22-12 to take the lead, 38-27. This was then Baruch's biggest lead of the half. However, Baruch managed to close to within five at 40-35 due to the play of 6' 2" forward Sam Safa and 6' 3" forward Fred Davis, who averages 14.7 points per game, finished with 15 to lead all Baruch scorers in this game. Safa, who averages 13.3 points per game, chipped in 12 in addition to playing good defense.

Going into the second half, Baruch had reason to be optimistic. They cut an 11 point deficit to five and were playing well despite the fact that guard Ernest Nixon, who is Baruch's leading scorer with 20 ppg, was sidelined with an injury along with guard-forward Terrence Lacewell who averages 12 ppg.

Midway through the second half, Lehman built a 9-1 lead with 3:00 left in the game and eventually took the contest 74-68.

What hurt Baruch the most was Fred Davis' fouled-out late in the game. Rankin said, "When he was fouled out we lost our inside game and you can't win without an inside game. That was the key."

Lehman assistant coach Pete Pozner was quite pleased with his team's performance. He said, "We came out with games losing to N.Y.U. and Millersville, a Division II power in Pennsylvania. Losing to those teams helped to get us ready for Baruch, but the big key in the game was the play of freshman center Dorian Graham who grabbed 12 rebounds. We're looking forward to finishing in the conference and going into the CUNY tournament we feel we can compete with anyone in the conference."
