The Report
A Bi-Weekly Update

The Board of Trustees of The City University of New York has requested a $1.2 billion operating budget for CUNY's 1989-90 year.

Frederika Watson has been elected vice-president of the Day Session Student Council.

DSSG To Publish Newsletter

By BARBARA MEISNER

The Day Session Student Government, beginning on Nov. 15, will be issuing an independent newsletter, with the intention that it will "close the communication gap between students and student government," according to Frederika Watson, acting president.

The newsletter will be a monthly publication, and it will cost $250 dollars each issue to print. Watson and five other council members comprise the ad-hoc newsletter committee. This committee will coordinate the newsletter. Articles included in the publication will be written by council members. Individual committee will be able to describe their functions and what their present plans are, Watson said. Schedules for

Spoiled Food Found In Vending Machines

By HOLLY HITTMAN

Spoiled foods and drinks have been purchased from various vending machines throughout the buildings of Baruch, according to students who purchased these products.

Sherry Solmor said, "I bought a Hershey's chocolate bar in a vending machine on the third floor of the Student Center and the chocolate was old and had turned white, so I had to throw it away. It was really awful."

Gary Bernstein complained, "I put a dollar's worth of change into a machine for potato chips and the date on the package was expired."

Stefanie Winstelman said, "I went to the cafeteria at 23rd Street and I got a chocolate milk and it was sour. It (the container) was also very dirty."

The products in the vending machines at Baruch are supplied by Canteen Corp., a major vending corporation. Sam World, service supervisor of Canteen Corp., said that the milk is delivered directly to the machines and is good through midnight of the date on the carton. World said, "milk can be mishandled during delivery. This may be the reason for the spoiled milk. The candy, such as M&M's, has a 'best if used before' warning on the label."

According to World, when the temperature of chocolate rises above 80 degrees it turns white. He sympathizes with the consumer, "If I had a choice between white chocolate and brown chocolate, I'd want brown chocolate."

World stated that he would come to Baruch to examine a spoiled chocolate bar, but failed to show up.

According to the New York City Department of Health, there are no violations against Canteen. The corporation that controls franchise at Baruch is the Auxiliary.

Board Of Directors Approves DSSA And Club Budgets

By E. J. MILLS

On Tuesday, Nov. 1, the budget for the Day Session Student Assembly and the other 73 day student clubs received unanimous approval from the Board of Directors of the Baruch College Association, at its monthly meeting.

The current 12-member board, of which ten members were present at the Nov. 1 vote, is required, according to fiscal guidelines, to approve all operating budgets in which student activity fee revenue is involved.

At the Nov. 1 board meeting, a $78,679 additional allocation was made to the DSSA budget, bringing it to a total of $102,233 for the 1988-89 school year. The Day Session Student Government operating budget, was previously $83,713.

The day session student clubs received an additional $12,666.91 allocation, which brought the total monies allocated to all clubs to $194,701 for the 1988-89 school year.

The initial allocations for this school year were made by the board to the DSSA and the clubs at the board's May 1988 meeting. At a meeting this past October, the clubs received a $9,990 allocation to supplement their $12,800 outlay received last May.

During the board's Nov. 1 review of the Day Session Student Government operating budget, questions arose among the directors present about the "specificity" of the programs presented.

Daniel Cragg, treasurer of the board and the college controller, questioned whether the "lump sum" approach the DSSG leadership used in putting together their budget was appropriate. Throughout the meeting, Creange asked for clarification from Alinery Bosson, DSSG president and also a director, on the budget categories of "Senior Affairs, Legal Services, Awards, Survey, Public Relations."

Ainsley Bosson, asked such questions as preoccupied the board, with Associate Dean of Students Ronald M. Aaron's urging to require the DSSG to prepare and submit a schedule to the Student Services Accounting Unit and Karl Eilot, the board's chair, detailing how the DSSG intended to spend their desired allocation.

Glen Albright, a director and professor, inquired about the $1000 outlay for furniture, fixtures and equipment. Bosson explained that there was no specific intent yet to purchase any furniture for the DSSG office and that the outlay would remain as a contingency in case funds were needed.

Albright stated that it was "kind of unusual" to see that much money slated for such an "uncertainty." Albright said he, "could not imagine that much money being used for a slush fund."

Helen Laligie, DSSG treasurer, countered this assertion by informing the board that her office had intentions of using the $1,000 to purchase two anchor pads to secure the newly-acquired DSSG computer hardware and printer.

The DSSG currently owns an IBM OS/2 computer system which cost the 1987/88 DSSG administration over $3,400, according to Paul Mitchell, director of the Accounting Unit. The system is located in Laligie's office and is used for

WIPING OUT THE WASTE

Co-sponsorship. The idea was simple; three or more clubs could pool their money to sponsor an event, and the Day Session Student Government would provide matching funds. It would seem to be a win-win and proactive student government policy that benefited clubs and the students who attend co-sponsored club events. Nevertheless, co-sponsorship was abused by clubs hungry for money, and was a waste of the Day Session Student Council’s time.

The time is now ripe for the reformation of the co-sponsorship club. It is no longer a matter of a large share of assistance is first petition the Appeals Committee and then use the appeal money to increase the amount that the council would allow for co-sponsorship funds. Other clubs only lost their names to a co-sponsorship resolution as a favor to another club. They wouldn’t participate in the execution of the event because the allowed the true sponsoring club to comply with the “three or more clubs” rule in order to get more funding. The introduction of “Deluxe Co-Sponsorship” only compounded the problems.

Co-sponsorship kept the student council in a constant budgeting process and made any time left to govern scarce. Not only was the Co-Sponsorship Committee kept busy but the Appeals Committee was continually asked for more funds to co-sponsored events. The time spent, the allotment to the 26 co-sponsored events last year, could have been better spent tackling the problems left for this year’s council, such as teacher evaluation, and the issue of student involvement in college teacher selection committees.

The Ticker supports the dissolution of the Co-Sponsorship Committee. The true needs of the Baruch student are now being addressed.

NET WORTH — LIFE

The college is Baruch, the student population is over 15,000, and the Fall Blood Drive starts tomorrow. Once again, Baruch students will have the chance to show their indifference and apathy towards a worthy cause. Once again, approximately 200-300 students understand the importance and value of donating one pint of blood will make the time to save a person’s life. The Ticker commends those few students that tried to intelligently and unselfishly organize the blood drives. They are making. Unfortunately the majority of students, most of those who are business oriented, and live by the adage “time is money,” were neither aware of nor interested in the various clubs. This apathy is not always conscious. The time spent tackling the problems of the world is insignificant compared to the realization that a person’s life has been saved. Perhaps if Baruch offered a few shares of IBM for a pint of blood, the turnout would be different.

To the Editor:

Mr. Tinker, Mr. Tinker, I see just the same old stirrup and spurs,

There’s nothing new about this old horse and shoe.

The truth is we are still a nation of immigrants, a nation of race, a noble triumph against the ugliness of rhetoric and the disgust of their system of government. A man who says George Bush, George Bush, George Bush, while he has you on the hook, is the same as the man who sold the Manifest Destiny!

Pick an unknown in a dark room to someone who doesn’t know you are there. Remember Gravy Day? Remember the day when the President of the USA told us all that he would visit a new country for a day and the day he visited the White House with a sharp knife. Dear Reader,

This month's Focus on the Creative Arts is a special edition dedicated to exploring the diversity of talent on our campus. We highlight various clubs and organizations that cater to a wide range of interests, from music and theater to visual arts and creative writing.

In our feature article, "The Creative Arts Scene at Baruch," our reporter delves into the dynamics of campus clubs, discussing the challenges they face in maintaining funding and attracting members. We also spotlight the work of student organizations that are making a difference in their communities, such as the Baruch Campus Sustainability Group, which is leading initiatives to reduce our environmental impact.

Our arts and culture section showcases a range of events happening this month, from music concerts to film screenings. Make sure to check out the Calendar of Events for more details.

We hope you enjoy this edition of Focus on the Creative Arts. As always, we welcome your feedback and suggestions for future issues.

Sincerely,

The Editor

THE 1988 PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS

The Ticker Surveys Baruch Students For Their Opinions

Text and Photos
BY IRWIN SACKS

There is a distrurbing trend in America today. Many young people have not only abandoned the political process, but have become indifferent to the events which shape their lives. As a result of this apathy, it is difficult to discern the real issues in the current political climate. The candidates for president are running on empty promises and slogans, which fail to provide a clear vision for the future of the country.

In its continuing efforts to reach out to the students of Baruch College, The Ticker conducted a survey of student opinions on the presidential election. The results of the survey provide insight into the thinking of the young people who will be casting their votes in the upcoming election.

"I'm tired of politics," said one student. "I don't want to vote for either of the candidates. I'm not sure either of them can really do anything to make a difference."

"I don't like Dukakis's policy on criminals," said another student. "I think his ideas are too liberal and his philosophy is too far to the left."

"I don't like Bush's policies either," said a third student. "I think his ideas are too conservative and his philosophy is too far to the right."

The survey results indicate that many students are disillusioned with both candidates and the political process in general. They are looking for a candidate who can bring about real change and make a difference in the lives of the American people.

In conclusion, it is clear that the presidential election is an important issue for the American people. The candidates must address the concerns of the young people who will be casting their votes in the upcoming election. The future of the country depends on the decisions made by the electorate.
When Baruch became an independent college in 1966, there was no philosophy department. In fact, there was only one philosophy teaching at the school. However, Mark S. Olin, who was hired as director of the department in 1969, helped the program grow and develop in the department he helped create.

Wyschogrod has devoted his career to philosophy to three areas as a scholar, a writer, and, as the director of the Institute for Jewish-Christian Relations of the American Jewish Congress, to fostering a greater understanding between the Jewish and Christian communities. He taught at City College and Baruch before coming to Baruch. When Baruch College was formed, he had the opportunity to return to City College, but chose to remain at Baruch.

"I liked the atmosphere and the collegiality. It was a chance to contribute in building a top-notch department," he explained.

Olin is often compared to Spinoza, among others, because of his writings on religion. Spinoza, a Dutch philosopher, was influential at universities in Germany and Switzerland. His writings in German and English include several books and hundreds of letters and book reviews. The philosophy of religion is a frequent subject.

Last month, the professor paused to reflect on his life and career.

"I'm not a philosopher," he said. "I think philosophy isn't always easy to understand. Philosophy is a hard science. It requires a lot of effort to work on it. It requires you to be able to understand the concepts."

"I think philosophy teaches clear thinking. It's a subject that's very important to the way people think."

In his youth, he was confronted with philosophical issues when the world around him radically changed. As a boy living in Germany in the 1930s, he saw the events that were shaping Germany, remarking that "It was impossible to escape." He left Germany in 1941 to study in the U.S. at the City College of New York. He was then drafted into the army and served in Europe, where he worked as a radar operator in the Army Air Corps.

"I think philosophy is very important to our lives," he said. "I think it's important to think about the world around us. It's important to understand how we see things."

Theater Preparations For Its Latest Production

By KATHLEEN MANNLY

The setting was a small black box theater, the audience was seated, and the performers were ready. The play was "Just Say No," a production by the Playwrights' Place, a New York City theater company. The audience was composed of students, faculty, and alumni of Brooklyn College, and the performance was part of the college's "Innovative Theater" series.

Attention: Accounting Majors

Representatives from the Office of the State Comptroller will visit Baruch College on Thursday, November 17, 1988, at 12:00 p.m., to talk to you about auditing and accounting career opportunities with their organization.

If you are a talented, motivated individual who is looking for a challenging profession in the auditing field, please plan to attend.

Vice-President George Bush Addresses New Yorkers At A Local High School

By FRANK REISS

The event was a rally for "Just Say No," a campaign against illegal drugs. The rally was held at Christ the King Regional High School in Queens, New York.

Kristallnacht 50 Years Later: A Legacy Of The Holocaust

The Zweig family, a Jewish family from Austria, was among the many families who were deported to concentration camps during the Kristallnacht pogrom in 1938. The family was eventually able to escape to the United States, where they were able to rebuild their lives.

In 1938, Nazi Germany launched a campaign of violence against the Jewish community known as Kristallnacht. The event marked the beginning of Nazi Germany's policy of systematic persecution of Jews, which eventually led to the Holocaust.

The New York Times

Dr. Joseph Goebbels, Hitler's propaganda minister, spoke at the rally in Brooklyn, New York. He called for a list of names to be submitted to the German Embassy in New York, which would be compiled and sent to the German government.

YOUTH AND THEATRE

By JERRY TAY

The Seventh Annual Young Playwrights Festival has come to an end. The event, which was sponsored by Shoreham School's student body, was another success for the young playwrights of the area. Young playwrights from around the country were able to express themselves through their work.

The most promising was Joseph Marc Sherman's 'Mother's Honeymoon.' The piece, which dealt with the consequences of a love affair, received overwhelming reviews from the audience. The play was well-received and is expected to have a long run in the area.

LADIES CONCLUDE FUN SEASON

By MICKY KRAMER

New York Knicks

The season, which started out incredibly well for the New York Knicks, has come to a close. The team, which was expected to finish in the middle of the NBA, ended up capturing the East Division title and reaching the NBA Finals. The Knicks' success was due in large part to the leadership of head coach Pat Riley, who has proven to be a master at motivating his team.

The Knicks' season started off with a bang, as they knocked off the defending champion Chicago Bulls in the first round of the playoffs. The team then went on to beat the Boston Celtics in the Eastern Conference semifinals, and finally the Chicago Bulls in the Finals. The Knicks' success was due in large part to the leadership of head coach Pat Riley, who has proven to be a master at motivating his team.

The Baruch Women's Tennis team was coming off a tough win vs. Hunter College to raise their record to 11-0 when the City University of New York Athletic Conference (CUNYAC) Tournament came around on Sunday Oct. 23, 1988. The tournament was played at the United States Tennis Center in Flushing, Queens amidst horrendous playing conditions. For starters it was cold. Most of the spectators and press were bundled up. The sun wouldn't stay up, but it was the severe swirling wind which made conditions almost unbearable for over eight hours. As Jackie Secaira put it, "It was very stressful playing under these conditions."

The tournament was played in the same way as the Hudson Valley Tournament was played a week earlier (within each ranking - #1, #2, and #3). All of Baruch's players advanced to the singles finals. Number 1 Catherine Assimacopoulos "played" through her match against her John Jay opponent. Hard-hitting Sue Brooks used a strong serve to pound her opponent, and Alexis Alland barely had time to warm up in destroying her CCNY opponent 6-0, 6-0. It took Alland longer to comment on her match than play it. "I'm really happy, my opponent wasn't too good. She kept on lobbing and I thrive on lobbers." Oragin Loesvidhya didn't have it that easy. A very tired Loesvidhya played a long and tough match against a very large player from the College of Staten Island (CSI). She beat her 7-5, 6-4.

Secaira had a little easier time in beating her opponent but Karyn Cohen, who seems to thrive on playing in tight games, beat her opponent 6-4, 6-3. Cohen said, "The girl was a ping-pong player, so I played ping-pong with her."

The stage was therefore set for the singles finals. Assimacopoulos took the first set and looked as if she would take the match, but her opponent came back, took the second set in a tiebreaker and then went on to win the match. Loesvidhya didn't get a chance to rest up after her tough semi-final match. She was hoping for an easier time in the finals. It was not to be as the energyless Loesvidhya lost the first set 2-6. But some water and rooting from teammates helped her regain her composure to shut down her Hunter rival in the next two sets. While resting, Loesvidhya commented on her win, "I'm very excited. I didn't know if I'd win because I didn't play well in the semi-finals."

Once again Cohen struggled. This time against a tough CSI opponent. Cohen lost the first set 4-6, but her backhand was on target in taking a 5-0 lead to start the second set. However, her opponent roared back, forced a tiebreaker and eventually won the match.

Secaira was forced into a second set tiebreaker and the same result occurred. After losing badly in the first set, Secaira battled back in the second set but lost in the tiebreaker.

Brooks continued on her hot pace in disposing of her John Jay opponent 6-3, 6-0. On her victory Brooks modestly joked, "I am a goddess!"

Alland also won her final match 6-4, 6-2.

In the doubles semi-finals, the combination of Assimacopoulos and Loesvidhya easily defeated their CSI opponents 6-1, 3-6. Loesvidhya admitted that she finally had an easy match. "It was good to have an easy match. It helped us prepare for the doubles finals."

In the finals matches, Assimacopoulos and Loesvidhya, in a long and hard match, just ran out of gas and lost to the #1-2 pair from Hunter 2-6, 6-4, 6-3. Assimacopoulos and Loesvidhya both shared the same sentiments on their match. "It was a very tough match. We were very tired but didn't do our best."

Brooks and Alland, whose game started during daylight and finished under the lights, played their match in front of many fans, since it was the last match of the day. The fans were treated to an entertaining match that turned into a marathon. After winning the first set 7-5, they had a chance to win in the second set, but Hunter hung tough and won the set 7-5. Brooks and Alland were pumped up and were determined to win as they used their hard hitting and good serves to win the third set 6-4. The Hunter pair stayed back and lobbed the ball, playing a very tentative match.

When the totals were added up, Baruch won the tournament with 19 points. Hunter squeaked into second set with 10 points while CSI finished with nine.

For Baruch it was a sweet win. It showed that their 11-0 record and Hudson Valley Tournament win was no fluke. It was not an easy day. It was long. It was tiring. It was cold. And it was windy. But Baruch emerged as the champions.

A very happy coach Bill Eng summed it up best saying, "We lost a few battles, but we won the war!"
