Segall Discusses Baruch College

Issues

By DIANE LEPPKE

The following interview was conducted with President Joel Segall concerning Baruch College issues:

The Ticker: Do you and the administration have any plans to motivate students so they will shrink so over-registration is feasible?

Joel Segall: I think we do what is possible for us to do given our resources and given the level of our physical facilities. As you know, we are using private contributions to put on concerts and quartet resident and speakers. We've put on a couple of stage productions in the auditorium which was produced by a very different group of students.

We've put together a couple of projects that are going to be done in the fall and spring. We have an athletic program, which is run by the athletic department. We are trying to get the students involved. There are also not a lot of late night activities.

TT: When the auditorium was in shape, there were evening performances. There certainly were evening club meetings.

JS: Yes, the number of evening student clubs has been increasing over the past semester, but the space to hold evening club meetings is not available, according to Mark Spergel, director of evening student activities.

Spergel said that evening students can only hold meetings on Friday nights, but the college buildings were not available at 5:30 p.m. Also, the Student Center is not available because other clubs meet there at the same time.

"It is really inexcusable that all those buildings are empty on Friday night; the administration encourages them (evening students) to join clubs but don't provide them with the space," Spergel said.

Spergel went on to say that evening students are involved in school activities as much as they can be and should not have any obstacles in their way.

"My job," said Spergel, "is to open things up and for day and evening students to have equal access."

Spergel said that the obstacle he has run into has been the Office of Campus Planning. The Ticker left several messages for Marilyn Mikulsky, director of Campus Planning, but the calls were not returned.

Spergel has been at Baruch since the fall semester of 1983 when he was a Speech professor. He has recently been appointed acting director of evening student activities after Carol Robbins left on maternity leave. Spergel's plans for the upcoming semester are to maintain evening services and to add evening tutorial services.

Estelle Ross, Cultural Coordinator, Dies At 78

By TONI COLAVITO

Estelle Ross, cultural coordinator at the Student Center at Baruch, died on August 8, 1989 at the age of 78. Mrs. Ross suffered from Iritis Colitis and died in her sleep at home.

She began working fulltime at Baruch in September 1965 and for the past decade was working part-time. Among her duties were obtaining and distributing theater tickets for Broadway productions, organizing receptions and convocations for students.

"She really brought class to the entire organization," said Debra Bick-Duggan, assistant director of student activities.

Mrs. Ross was very conscious of what Baruch students could afford to pay for theater tickets and spent a great deal of time developing contacts all over New York City. She wanted to expose students to the arts and broaden their view of the world.

"She enjoyed what she was doing," reminisces Carl Aylman, director of student activities, "she liked working with students."

Mrs. Ross' colleagues fondly thought of her as a mother-figure to Baruch students. They thought of her as a mother-figure for the entire Student Center community. "She was a really beautiful person," said Aylman.

Mrs. Ross is survived by her husband and two children.

Budget Cuts Hit Baruch

BY DIANNE YARDON

The 1989-90 budget cuts have equally affected every department in each of the three Baruch College schools, according to Stephen Wertheimer, vice president for development.

The cuts have meant fewer hours for school supplies. Although no professors were actually dismissed, according to Wertheimer, the School of Business and Public Administration, the School of Liberal Arts and Sciences, and the School of Education and Educational Services have lost the ability to hire between 30-40 faculty members.

In the Spring of 1989, Governor Mario Cuomo and the New York Legislature increased the tuition fees. This prompted CUNY students to protest resulting in no tuition hike, but many budget cuts. Wertheimer said, "The students' support for adequate funding of the university or college is extremely important. The governor and Legislature are especially responsive to student concerns, and I hope students work closely with the City University Legislative Action Committee to lobby in Albany next semester for the next budget."

Wertheimer who is also the chairperson of CLAC, said he would be more than happy to meet with students and student leaders to work with them in their lobbying efforts.

Centerfold: Baruch on Bensonhurst
There is an old fable about a man who was offered $10 for that one day, but was promised $100 if he could wait until the next week. The man opted for the $10. The moral? Patience and foresight often pay off. However, if one only wants to grab what can be obtained immediately, then future benefits may be missed.

Baruch students are learning this lesson right now. Last summer, several students from the College of Education said they were losing out on potential opportunities because they had not been able to access the courses they needed at the University's main campus in Manhattan. As a result, the students were forced to take summer classes at other schools in order to complete their degrees on time.

What Baruch is currently facing is far worse than the minimal tuition increase that would have occurred. Each department in every college of the three schools has been affected by the cuts, which amounts to fewer courses and supplies. Our school has also lost the financial ability to hire between 30-40 new faculty members.

Ironically, despite the vocal protests last spring, the tuition will undoubtedly have to be increased. The reasons for this are in the near future. We have been hearing the same refrain from us and students alike: in order to keep up with the ever-rising costs of living and education, we must have more leverage when the time came to make tuition cuts. As it stands now, we won the first battle and the legislature may very well feel that’s all they owe us.

Next semester, the governor will be making up a new budget that will directly affect the 1990-91 Academic Year. Hopefully, students will not simply think of the “here and now,” and will put some thought into the future consequences of their actions. As we are now finding out, last semester’s apparent victory was nothing more than a loss in disguise.

The Baruch administrators are hypocrites. They encourage the evening students to participate in school activities, yet they will not provide them with the rooms that are necessary to hold club meetings. Meetings are not as many evening students as there are classes. At night, they must hold their club meetings on Friday nights only. It is hard to make up for that. As it stands now, we won the first battle and the legislature may very well feel that’s all they owe us.

A new semester will start, and the students are being deprived of taking part in the college culture. Because of having classes at night, they must hold their club meetings on Friday nights only. It is hard for them to keep up with the ever-rising costs of living and education, we must have more leverage when the time came to make tuition cuts. As it stands now, we won the first battle and the legislature may very well feel that’s all they owe us.

REALISTICALLY SPEAKING
The Stolen Race

What should a graduating senior in the African-American Studies program do with his/her major? This is the question that faces me as I prepare to exit from the program. What is the meaning of the term "African-American Studies"? What is the role of the faculty in the program? What is the purpose of the program itself? And, most importantly, what should a student pursue after completing the program?

One of the main objectives of the African-American Studies program is to provide students with a better understanding of African-American history, culture, and society. This understanding is crucial for students who want to be successful in the workforce and in their personal lives. The program also provides students with the knowledge and skills necessary to become effective leaders in their communities.

The program is designed to be inclusive, with courses offered in a variety of disciplines. Students can choose to major in African-American Studies or to minor in the field. The program also offers students the opportunity to pursue dual majors in African-American Studies and another discipline.

African-American Studies is a multidisciplinary field that draws on a wide range of disciplines, including history, sociology, politics, economics, and literature. The program provides students with the opportunity to explore these diverse fields and to develop their critical thinking skills.

The program is also designed to be flexible, with courses offered at different levels. Students can take introductory courses to gain a basic understanding of African-American history and culture, or they can take advanced courses to delve deeper into specific topics.

In conclusion, African-American Studies is a vital field of study that provides students with valuable knowledge and skills. The program is designed to be inclusive and flexible, with courses offered at different levels. Students who pursue a degree in African-American Studies will be well-prepared to succeed in the workforce and in their personal lives.

QUESTION:

As you are aware, the Bensonhurst incident has caused a great deal of controversy in New York. Given the fact that one of the young men indicted (Pasquale Raucchi) was a Baruch student, do you think that it affects the Baruch community? If so how?

SOPHOMORE

I think that it definitely affects the Baruch community. Most students know of the incident even if they do not know the fact that one of the young men was a Baruch student. It definitely affects the community as a whole and it has caused a lot of tension and fear.

LORI STAZZONE

SENIOR

I don't think that it affects the Baruch community. Most students don't even know about the incident, as it was not widely publicized in the college. It is more of a personal tragedy to those who were involved.

LUZ A. SONNINO

SENIOR

It is unfortunate that one of our students was involved in such an event, but I don't think that it should affect the whole school. In fact, I think that emphasizing the incident will only serve to polarize the community.

ANDREW BACCHI

SENIOR

I feel that it definitely affects the Baruch community. This is not a situation that should be ignored. However, I believe that it is more of a personal tragedy to those involved and not necessarily to the whole community.

Confrontation at USSA Conference

Over 60 student leaders of City University of New York attended the 19th Annual Conference of the United Student Union at the University of California in Berkeley, California. At the beginning of the conference, one USSA organizer attempted to introduce a motion to abolish the reservations.

A continuation started when the People of Color Caucus proposed an amendment to the constitution of the USSA Central Region. The amendment proposed to add the following: "All USSA members shall have the right to be members of any USSA organizational units that have taken place elsewhere. We are not immune from this."

Financial Aid Applications

Cornelia J. Foley, president of New York State Higher Education Services Corporation, is happy that a new financial aid program for people of color. This is to help them in the UPS corner. After negotiations with the California legislature (People of Color), the USSA proposed to provide financial aid for the UPS membership. The vote was almost unanimously in favor of the proposal. Foley also noted that many people-institutional units will make some or all of the nation's financial aid requests if student financial aid is expanded. Students are advised to investigate their eligibility for financial aid even if they have already paid for their studies, because they will receive refunds if they qualify. In addition, the USSA has estimated that 43 percent of the $1.7 billion in student aid available this year will be to the people of color. FULLY Guaranteed Loans. More than $625 million is expected to be borrowed in student loans (formerly called Guaranteed Student Loans). Over 600,000 such loans are currently outstanding, and the majority of these loans are being repaid by students.

Laguna, one of the world's largest natural aquariums, is located on the west side of the city and open to the public. The facility was designed by a team of experts who aimed to recreate a tropical marine environment. The facility is a popular destination for tourists and is known for its diverse array of marine life. Visitors can observe a wide range of species, including reef dwellers, pelagics, and deep-sea creatures. The aquarium features large tanks and interactive exhibits that provide educational insights into marine biology. Visitors can explore the different sections of the aquarium, each dedicated to specific marine habitats, such as coral reefs, open oceans, and deep-sea environments. The aquarium also offers guided tours and workshops for those interested in learning more about marine conservation. Visitors can purchase tickets online or at the entrance, and hours of operation vary depending on the season. Laguna is a testament to the importance of preserving marine biodiversity and promotes awareness of our ocean's delicate ecosystem. For more information, visit the Laguna website or contact the facility directly.

TOUR OF THE TWELVE INCH
KEVIN DAMES

This is not a concept album, written because it has no story. This is, before it is, and not actually planted. There are more "little girls" in the family, (Annette Hall says), small truths that the world is going to defeat into any full-blown commentary, yet interesting enough to comment on.

Philly's got more records than about (oh no, I have to say it) crossover. We keep the Kids and outlaw the Mash-Marky-Mash-End-Clash-Chilton.

But we're going to do a two song tribute to the African-American unless that creation jazz's popularity seems to parallel the rise of its creators-African-Americans.

This ignorance is nothing else, jazz surely is African- American.

As well::

Dear Old Eddie has done the Michael Jackson thing, the Prince thing and the Arsenio Hall thing, small blurbs that would or not, actually planned. These are a lot of because I was that people and countries abroad don't necessarily understand. However, Aretha has always had difficulty singing, too!, Bobby Brown is more exciting (and they say they aren't talking about Michael). This is why are we keeping the Kids and outlaw the Mash-Marky-Mash-End-Clash-Chilton.

What we're going to do is take the African-American unless that creation jazz's popularity seems to parallel the rise of its creators-African-Americans. DISNEY - MGM THEME PARK NO MICKEY MOUSE AFFAIR

by LISA CERMAK

The downpour of Walt Disney World all started in October on 1971, when Walt Disney himself opened 407-acre Disney-MGM Studios, The Magic Kingdom opened. The Magic Kingdom houses seven lands: Adventureland, Liberty Square, Frontierland, Tom Sawyer Island, Fantasyland, Mickey's Country Club, and Tomorrowland. The Magic Kingdom continues to expand today. The theme park opened on October 1, 1982, eleven years after the opening of the Magic Kingdom. The Enchanted Forest gets you into the M criticized, but the Magic Kingdom can still compete with other theme parks.

Dining

The restaurants are located in the Theme Park are of the stadium, with a clip in the Theatre. The second rung on the Disney hierarchy is the "MGM Prime Time Cafe," and "The Brown Derby." The Cafe located next to the Looney Tunes Animation Studio, with a tearoom serving salads and sandwiches. The Brown Derby is located in a classic 1930's style building, and serves a variety of American cuisine.

The Backstage Tour

The second half of this is what Walt Disney originally intended Disney World to be. You are able to bring the fun of the 50s and 60s, but also to see what goes on behind the scenes. This is not only for the fans of Disney, but also for those who are interested in the history of Hollywood.

"From the Inside Out" is your ticket to the secrets of the world famous "Disney-MGM Studios." The tour begins with a visit to the sound stage where "The Great Movie Ride" is located. The tour continues with stops at the "Working Stage," the "涎tage Set," and the "Props and Sets." The tour ends with a visit to the "Walt Disney's Office." You will learn about the history of Disney, as well as the secrets of the studio.

The Landmark

As you walk across the lagoon, or ride the Disney's own monorail into the Magic Kingdom, you will be greeted by the iconic 180-foot-tall Space Mountain. When you finish the ride, you may be asked to leave the park, but your experience is not over. You will be able to experience the "Disney's Hollywood Brown Derby," the "Disney's Hollywood Brown Derby Soda Shop," and the "Disney's Hollywood Brown Derby Pie Shop."

Ken O'Brien: A vital cog, who must stay healthy

The bright spot of the Giant defense is the Monday Night Game. Ken O'Brien's passing game is a major factor in the Giants' success. They have a solid running game and a strong defense. A good game tonight could mean they are back in contention for the NFC East title.

JETS/GIANTS

The New York Jets have some promising young talent. Tight end Mickey Shuler is a threat in the passing game. Wide receiver Ken O'Brien should be cleared to play, due to his injury.

The New York Giants have a strong offense, but their defense is questionable. They have a solid running game, but their passing game is questionable. They need to improve their defense to compete with the better teams in the NFC East.

TALE OF THE WHALE

On the run last season, the "O" line did a decent job, paving the way for Ken O'Brien. The Giants have a strong running game, but their passing game is questionable. They need to improve their defense to compete with the better teams in the NFC East.

THE JETS:

After an eleventh-hour victory over the Giants, they fell short of the playoffs in 1988. It would have been interesting to see how they would have fared in the playoffs. The introduction of new coach Bill Parcells and the addition of several key players could make the Giants a contender in the NFC East this year.

'88 "Team of the Year" Tries to Repeat as CUNY CHAMPS

By STEVEN SCHEER

It was the final game of the year, with the season hanging in the balance. For the Giants, a win against the Jets would lock up first place. A loss would send them home for the season. For the Jets, a victory would give them a winning season.

A loss could mean coach Joe Walton's exit.

It came down to the final minute of the game. When Al Toon caught Ken O'Brien's pass in the end zone, the Expressions on the players' faces told the whole story. The Jets had squashed the Giants.

1989 Preview:

THE GIANTS:
The Giants are looking to regroup after barely missing the playoffs last season. One of the things the Jets do is protect the cornerbacks. Giant QB's were forced to eat dirt (a league leading) 60 times last year. Blame it on the offensive line. The Giants picked up a couple of big linemen in the draft, but both need work. That means expect last year's squad again this year. Poor Phil! Actually, even with the O Line giving up 60 sacks, Quarterback Phil Simms still completed a very respectable 55% of his passes. With a healthy Simms and mediocre O line, the Giants have a chance.

But who is Simms going to go deep to? Receivers Phil McConkey and Stacy Robinson are gone, which leaves only four: Stephen Baker, Mark Ingram and Odesa Turner, all of whom are entering their third season and sixth year man Lionel Manuel.

Simms also has tight ends Zeke Mowatt and Mark Bavaro, both of whom have good potential, but still need time to learn the system.

On paper the team looks pretty solid, not deep, but solid. However, there is a major problem. It appears that some players will not make all of the games. Asimacopoulos has classes on Mondays and Wednesdays which means that she is lost for games on those days. Ditto for Lejtman and Thompson. Loesvidhya will be lost on Fridays and weekends due to classes.

What does this all mean? It means that players will have to play under different seedings. It seems unlikely that Asimacopoulos and Loesvidhya will attend the same matches and Brooks' season is still up in the air. Cohen may be forced to play at number one or two, and the freshman may be called into action sooner than expected.

This will no doubt be a season that will give Coach Eng some gray hairs, unless a miracle happens and everybody shows up to games and the first-year players play well.

Due to the uncertainty of the players, the doubles partnerships have not yet been made.

What does Coach Eng have to say about the upcoming season, which begins on Sept. 13 at (Division I team) St. Francis? "We have good players, but the bottom players don't have the experience like last year... depth was the difference last year."

After St. Francis, the home opener will be on Sept. 15 against an improved Ramapo College.

Nobody said it was easy being number one!
