Police Prevail Over Protest

By Eric Loyola

Three students were arrested and five others were injured.

The eleven-hour cancellations of people who had volunteered to attempt the lockout caused Thornhill to retreat from students from other schools. But Baruch students were still unable to achieve all of their aims. "We wanted to take the Student Center but we didn't have enough people because the people from Tech had to go take their school tonight," Thornhill says. "And that's why some of them are in the hospital... they clashed with the cops.

A delegation of students met with acting President Joyce Brown and Vice President Samuel Johnson at about 3:45 a.m. in the unit auditorium, which served to conceal the identities of the students with Thornhill.

Search Committee Selects Five Candidates For Baruch Presidency

By Hilary Coulton

The Presidential Search Committee has released the names of five candidates for the presidency of Baruch College.

The candidates will be making visits to Baruch's campus starting either the last week in April or the first week in May. According to Carmen Pedro, coordinator of the Baruch search committee, the candidates will be interviewed on campus by a total of five committees, each made up of administrators, department chairs, faculty, administration representatives, or students. Wilson Stimson, president of the Daily Student Government, says, "We tried to make it the (student committee) have campuses since the student body." It will be made up of a total of 15 students; eight day and four graduate students. As yet, the students have not been selected.

Student Threatens Religious Speaker

By Eric Loyola

On Thursday, March 28, a student threatened a representative of Jews for Jesus who had been invited to speak by Baruch's Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, saying: "I'd like to kill you..." The threat took place in an exchange between the representative and the student during a presentation on the role of Christ in the Passover:

"Jews for Jesus?" the student asked.

"Yeah, that's right," Steve Davis, a member of Jews for Jesus, answered with a British accent. "Passover is the first asked again, seeking more than just a commemoration of the Jewish holiday. It is meant to be a Jew wants to live his life as a Jew. It teaches a raw nerve when people try to convert us," says Bernard Gevirtzman, formerly the advisor to the Jewish Council, which has but only recently merged with Hillel to consolidate Baruch's Jewish student body, president, the vice chancellor for religious affairs and the chair of the faculty senate before she calls the police. Somerville, speaking for the students at the rally that ensued after the aborted takeover, said, "We were upset that Joyce Brown had called in the cops. An assemblage of the damage includes a cracked front window, the result of the arrested mayhem which characterized the last hours of the protest. At least 37 students involved in protests, which have spread to New York City colleges and universities, have been suspended.

Presidential Candidates Square Off in Debate

The following is a transcript of the debate between the candidates for the presidency of the Bernard M. Baruch College Student Government. The debate was sponsored by The Ticker and WBBM, the campus radio station of Baruch College.

Alumni Service Award
The Honorable Richard A. Goldberg '51
Judge of the Supreme Court, State of New York

Outstanding Achievement Awards
Robert A. Friedman '67

Levanda Davis: Hello. My name is Levanda Davis. I'm running for president of the USA party. I would like to provide better services for Baruch students, especially for the students who are not very active. For instance, I'll make a proposal to improve the food in the cafeteria. By improving the food, many students may feel more comfortable joining the USA party. We also have to have an open-door policy to make sure that all students are welcome. I, as a senator, have always been responsive to the needs of the students. I'm here to represent the students, and I'll make sure that the students are heard.

Robert Friedman: My name is Robert Friedman. I'm running for president of the DSSG. I'm in favor of keeping the student government small and efficient. I think that the student government should be able to function without the help of the city. We should be able to make our own decisions and run our own affairs. The student government should be able to provide more services to the students without the help of the city. We should be able to make our own decisions and run our own affairs.

Delandro Wilson: I'm running for president of the Baruch Students for Action (BSA) party. I would like to provide better services for Baruch students. I would like to provide more activities for the students to participate in. I would like to provide more opportunities for the students to be involved in the school. I would like to provide more opportunities for the students to be involved in the school.

First of all, I think our party wants to forge a stronger interdependence between the various student organizations. We believe that there is a need for increased cooperation and coordination among the various student groups in order to promote the interests of the students. In the current political climate, we believe that it is important for the student government to provide a forum for discussion and debate on issues that affect the students. We believe that the student government should be able to represent the interests of the students and provide a voice for the students in decision-making processes.

Do not hallucinate.
increases. I have been noticeable about tuition increases. I have been looking at the issues.

S.S.: How can you explain the bureaucracy of Baruch. But I do have four years to spend here. And I think I have the qualities and leadership ability.

A.M.: I've been to several of the meetings, and I basically saw them arguing over the structure of the party. One of the things we're looking at is the accountability of the staff. If we don't have accountability, we're going to have problems. What we want to know is what happens? Students look at it, and they think, "What's going on?" What do we want? We want to have a say in what's going on. We don't want to be told what's going on. We want to be part of the decision-making process.

L.D.: I do not want to run for council. I do not want to be a candidate. I do not want to be a leader. I do not want to be involved. I do not want to be a part of the administration. I do not want to be a part of the government. I am here to work with the government, to share ideas as well as my own ideas.

Palladium Concert Doesn't Add Up

What cost students $17,000, featured unknown enterrainers. What was supposed to be a celebration of the Super Jam '91, the Palladium concert sponsored by the University, thought the Palladium concert would not be a wise investment. They spent hours in the cold, while it was going on, members of the DSSG idly stood by the West 10th Ave. entrance, not letting other students in or out.

The DSSG, however, had its own agenda. For the past few years, the DSSG had been trying to get the administration to open the Palladium to all students, not just those who were part of the music, department. The DSSG had been denied this request several times, but it persisted.

The DSSG had also been concerned about the cost of the concert. In the future, the DSSG should exercise control over the events that are held on campus.

Outraged!

To the Editor:

I am outraged at the prices that were charged for the tickets to The Fantasticks, a musical that was performed in the Steinhardt building.

The tickets were expensive, and many students felt that they were not worth the price. The DSSG had proposed that the tickets be sold at a lower price, but the administration refused.

I urge the administration to consider the concerns of students and to hold future events that are more accessible to all students.

Sincerely,

- A Note to the Readers

The Ticker attacks the actions of the Board of Trustees.

At the time of the article, the Board of Trustees had not yet implemented any changes in the tuition and sticker policies.

The Ticker states that the tuition and sticker policies are unfair and that the Board of Trustees should be held responsible for these actions.

We encourage readers to submit their own Op-Ed pieces to the Ticker.

What's Up With the Men in Blue?

By Richard D. Roberts

Even though Golden Key began as an organization of women, it is relatively new at Baruch College. Several people have written articles about the latest appears. An investigation was conducted. What type of people made up their membership?

What do they think of the Men in Blue? With an Open Mind

1) What do you think the future holds for the New York police force? What's Up With the Men in Blue? With an Open Mind

2) With the recent outbreaks of police brutality, which resulted from the recent protests, the public is demanding more accountability from their local police departments. As a result, there has been an increase in the number of lawsuits filed against law enforcement agencies. In some cases, the officers involved in these incidents have been found liable for their actions.

3) "Police commissioner brought out publicly. "We should be kicked off the power correctly, have been reviewed for charges." The New York police force has gotten away from this situation."

4) "Today's police of­cers are no longer(sprintf{"ANew York police force"
"in the past. They are not just white or black. But it does not give them the authority to serve when they are needed."

On the contrary, they are here to protect and serve. They are here to ensure that the city remains safe for all residents. The uniform does not give them the authority to act as they see fit.

Several incidents have taken place recently that have raised concerns about police brutality. These incidents have sparked protests and calls for reform. However, some people argue that these incidents are isolated cases and that the majority of police officers are dedicated to serving their communities.

The question remains: What do the public think of the police force in New York City? Do they believe that the officers are doing their job correctly? Or do they feel that the police force is overstepping its bounds? These are questions that need to be answered.

In this Section: Game Pak Attack And Man Created Art Asian Week Centennial
April 8 - 12

By Lawrence Chiu

This year's Asian Week celebration was held on April 8-12. Events such as the opening ceremony, arts and craft workshops, photo exhibit, movies, food fair, and evening show were held around the campus. The main event of the celebration was the evening show on April 11 in the auditorium of 17 Lexington Ave. Although the show started a little late, it was a great success.

The evening show began with Chinese lion dancers coming down the aisles to the beats of the drum and gong. The dancers performed a second lion dance when they reached the stage. In addition, the show consisted of Filipino, Taiwanese, Indian, and Vietnamese dances. Chinese swordplays, music, dance, and Japanese Kabuki were also performed. Guest speaker for the night was Wilson Shum, president of the DSSG. But the special attractions of the evening show were the three-part fashion regatta and Master Lee, the stand-up comedian. The fashion show displayed international styles, such as Malaysian fashions and progressive ones. Students and guests were impressed by the model's performances. All the modeling was done by Asian students. The comedian was great as he kept the audience continually laughing for nearly a half hour.

For those students that missed this year's celebration, look out, because we will be back next year!

Before anything else, I have adventures, something goes wrong. Another robot magician has unseated the head computer and reprogrammed an entire planet's worth of steel men... for war! As usual, very few men in on a mission to reclaim the planet from the evil empire. He is the Low Gravity Man, star of Earth's only challenging game? Well, we got ten - or at least twelve - of them. The Low Gravity Man.

Of course, our hero isn't a normal, run-of-the-mill robot. He possesses an electronic communicator/record player/EMOSDL color mixing board, plus anti-gravity abilities. Low Gravity Man can jump one and one-quarter screens high. With his other abilities (like medicine and EMOSDL power), LGM has a distinct chance at success. But wait. He can also extract energy weapons like kryptonite, firearms, and other things he's seen in films. More importantly, however, he can even control enemy vehicles! By flying in a barricade, throwing objects, or selling himself to other planets and stealing robots in enemy walk, LGM can cause as much damage as he pleases. Still, you do have the skill and tenacity to use this map.

LGM doesn't lack for enemies, either. Each level has its own unique set of monsters to overcome. On the fall in sector 2-1, you'll be up against Solarx, a two-headed, four-eyed, one and three quarter screens tall robot. If you manage to vanquish Solarx, you'll be faced with an even more challenging monster.

TheTaxis USA Corporation has redone itself. After a series of changes release the Brain Fighter, this one is a bit bigger. The new Taxis USA, however, is no longer a robot. It is a large, blue taxi. And the new Taxis USA is the only vehicle that can transport passengers to Mars. This allows you to start the game over if you aren't careful.

LGM will try to help you, but there are limits. The limit is in the amount of power he has to spend on each level. If he runs out of power, you're on your own. LGM is the only vehicle that can transport passengers to Mars. This allows you to start the game over if you aren't careful.

Rod Stewart
Vagabond Heart
Produced by Rod Stewart & Bernard Edwards
Warner Bros. Records
RATING: 1/2

What do you do after you have 16 solo albums and over 45 top 40 hits? Well, if you're Rod Stewart you release your 17th album. Stewart's latest album, Vagabond Heart on Warner Bros. Records is typical Rod Stewart — powerful, energetic and full of life. Vagabond Heart is Stewart's first album of new material in over six years, a huge break when you consider that this album was originally scheduled for release in 1985. It was also one of the albums in nineteen years, was his relaxing year, not including greatest hits albums, of which he has had three. That's an excellent year, when you consider the rate at which pop bands of today release albums.

Michael Jackson released an album something like every six years, and Brave young men have released an album in over four years.

Back to Rod Stewart, Vagabond Heart has 12 tracksthat are written by Stewart, it's a pop album, and the album is written on his solo albums. In the past Stewart has been known to include covers on his albums, but they were usually three or four on an album of 12 tracks. This time through, the covers actually challenge the originals and make a wonderful combination.

Record Reviews

Ivan Lins
Awa Yio
Produced by Stewart Levine & Larry Williams
Reprise Records
RATING: **

By Kathryn Garcia

For its fascinating Brazilian music set in a pop context, I recommend this album; the only drawback is that Lins sings in Portuguese.

The rhythms and lyrics in this album are very Brazilian, and he has brought that rhythm and lyricism and maintained the purity of the music which reflects Brazilian music in a pop context. The title of the album, Awa Yio, is an African expression which means "We Go," symbolizes since the album is composed of songs that ask about the future of Brazil and the world. Ivan Lins has combined the folkloric music of Brazil with contemporary music styles. It can be compared to the album Brazil by the Manhattan Transfer for which Lins offered some material. In the past Lins has worked with pop legend Quincy Jones on various occasions. Jones has used several of Lins' compositions for other artists as well as himself, such as the track "Scientists," off of his Grammy award winning album Back On The Block.

In Awa Yio, Ivan Lins' belt vocal and sensuality. The eleven songs that comprise this album are a result of fifteen years of learning and working with the folkloric music of Brazil, and all eleven songs represent music styles. Some critics believe that contemporary music somehow lacks the "real" quality of traditional music. F.M. music, i.e. music that is played on the radio, is often criticized for being bland and lacking depth. Walker's new album, The Walk, is a good example of this. Although it may be enjoyable, it lacks the complexity and depth found in the music of artists like Morrison or Ackerman. Walker's approach is often described as "safe" and "predictable," and while it may please some listeners, it does not push the boundaries of the genre. Overall, The Walk is a good album, but it may not be for those looking for a more challenging listening experience.

How a Non-Prof Boston Agency Prepares Massachusetts' Future Workforce

By Eric Levy
Jim Williams had a long and successful career with McDonald's franchise. And now he had six to represent the mostly Asian population of the city. He was not a friend, which a woman named Margaret Van Duyne refers to as her one-woman office in Sudbury, Massachusetts. Her one-woman operation, in the basement of the Boston police. Baseball Team Wins Its First-After 9 Losses

By David A. Amir

How does it feel to be playing when you've been winless? "The first game was exciting," said a hardly believable Captain Eric Zurita as he walked past the Fitness Center in his 10th inning victory over Stevens Tech. Zurita was the winning pitcher and also the hitting hero, scoring a run and hitting a walk-off home run to lead Baruch to a season ending 8-7 victory.

Over nine games, Baruch had been winless, but nine runs by an opponent seemed small in comparison to the nine runs Baruch had given up to Staunton. "The first long home run was unexpected," said Zurita. "I think we really needed it to lift our spirits." That was the first home run for Zurita, who had two hits and scored three runs. "He was hitting well and showing good patience," said Captain Joe Grossman. "I think we should have given him more chances to hit." Zurita agreed, but said he was happy to have contributed to the win.

The victory came against Stevens Tech, a team Baruch had lost to earlier in the season. "We were tired after the previous match," said Zurita. "We really needed this win to get us back on track." Zurita's teammates were equally delighted with the victory, and said they were looking forward to the rest of the season.

By the end of the first game, Baruch was leading 6-0, but the game went into extra innings. "The team came together and started to work hard," said Zurita. "We were really determined to win this game." The second game was decided in the bottom of the 13th inning, with Baruch scoring the winning run on a sacrifice fly by Zurita. "I think we did a good job of playing together," said Zurita. "We were really focused on winning this game." Baruch's defense was strong, and the team held Stevens Tech to just two runs. "We were really happy with our performance," said Zurita. "We knew we had to make a comeback, and we did." The victory was the perfect way to end the season, and the team is looking forward to the rest of the year.
