Hillel Charges Rights Violation

By Eric Loyola
Two Jewish students registered a complaint with the department of Purchasing and the office of Student Development about what they perceived as a violation of their First Amendment rights by the Baruch College mail service, which refused to distribute a flyer.

The flyers invited interested parties to a demonstration organized by Hillel protesting the not made by it. "They dropped off about a hundred flyers on Friday through the College mailboxes. In a sense, it was this request, was not if, without precedent, certainly unusual."

By extending the explanation that although he passed on an order not to distribute the flyers, the decision not to distribute the flyers was ultimately not made by him but by Howard Galin, then vice president of the College. Acting Vice President Michael Zavelle also received a copy of the letter. Galin, who now works in the budget office of City University of New York headquar ters, prefaced his explanation of the events as he recalled them by saying, "I'm not trying to suffice the blame off on someone else."

Galin said, that he met with President Matthew Goldstein and his Executive Assistant Burt Hansen to discuss the content of the flyer. "It was our opinion that it was not appropriate to send it through the College mail," Galin said, adding that, "It was a joint decision and for whatever that was worth that's what we decided."

In the letter the Hillel officers stated, "We believe that the refusal by the Baruch College mail service to distribute our flyer on the grounds that it was too controversial is quite simply censorship, and has no place on a college campus."

Galin assured that the action was not meant to isolate any particular group. He also said, "I think it was an other group we might have done the same thing, but I can't speak for the president."

Goldstein could not be reached for comment.

In response to the allegations that the students' First Amendment rights were violated, Galin insisted that they did not infringe on their freedom of speech. He said, "We told Mr. Garlock that we wouldn't have the mailroom deliver it, but if members of the Hillel society wanted to distribute the flyers to any building, office or rooms, they were free to do so."

Garlock, who said that he was exercising his right of free speech just by giving his opinion on the issue, said, "Whether or not those rights were violated here is certainly a matter of debate and I would take the position that they have the absolute right to say or print whatever they wanted."

"But," he hastened to add, "I ask College employees, as part of their jobs to participate in the distribution it is a slightly different issue."

Professor Seth Lipner of the Law Department, prefaced his statement by clarifying that he was not an expert on First Amendment matters, elaborated on the issues in question.

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion; or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

Lipner stated that the law did not apply to private par ties, but that Baruch was a quasi-governmental agency and not a private institution.

D.S.S.G. Approves $700 For Aiwa Stereo System

By José N. Ercanandez
On Tuesday, Nov. 5, the Day Session Student Government held a meeting at which Chillon Thornhill, the chairman of the finance committee, announced the D.S.S.G. buy a stereo to tape meetings and for recreational purposes.

Thornhill and other council members said that they had found audio equipment that suited their needs. The cost: $700. A debate ensued about the merits of the proposed purchase.

Geraldine Chueco, a lower council member, agreed with Thornhill's suggestion, but council Chairperson Sheryll Pierre expressed reservations along with others concerned about the image the student body would be presenting if they went ahead with the purchase.

Pierre said, "Students are concerned with the money being spent, when they have no input." To which Thornhill replied, "We are they, referring to the widely perceived apathy of Baruch students.

André Palmer, president of Inter-Varsity Christian Fel lowship, said, "For as long as I've been here the club has wanted a tape recorder to tape our meetings and they (the D.S.S.G.) finally approved the $65 to buy it."

He added, "And I've been here five years."

Thornhill bolstered his argument by indicating that funds were available. He explained that because Levanda Davis, D.S.S.G. president, had been elected vice chair of the University/Student Senate and would receive a stipend from Baruch, council would revert to the D.S.S.G. for its use.

It is unclear whether or not Davis will recall the stipend since USS funds have been frozen because of September's scandal involving over spending by USS Chairman Jean C. LeMarre.

Another point used to justify the purchase was that the stereo could be a catalyst to bring many to the chapel. Together with Dyer, an upper council member, described by those present as one of the proposal's most vocal supporters, said, "We

DSSG Sets Up Fundraising Committee

Hillied Charges Rights Violation

Committee headed by the president of Baruch College, which the school has abolished, the rights of Hillied, with the conclusion that it was clearly impractical. However, some students have been upset with the committee because it has been criticized. In defense of Schwartz and the decision not to present a name, "The administration is solely responsible," said T. Garrett Rock. "He does have a record of staff and he has a mandate from me and the administration to take care of any tribal registration and administration of college psychiatry." Garrett echoed that the "school made the decision because it had been administratively appointed by a committee," which was headed by the president of the school and the college. The reason given for the vote was that the committee was under investigation.

DSSG Approves Stereo

"The program was a group run by Baruch's Student Government Association and was also a part of the School of Business Administration's experimental program to provide additional activities for students. The program was approved by the Senate and the College Administration and will be advertised to students at a later date." DSSG approved the group and stated that it will be used for the meeting.

The City University of New York acted on a request from the Senate of CUNY students to solve on what day the 12-day all-day strike will begin. Nearly 20,000 students, ranging from freshmen to seniors, are expected to participate in the strike. The strike was called to protest the school's decision to cut back on financial aid for students. The members of the Senate of CUNY students are under investigation for their role in the strike.

HEALTH ADMINISTRATION PROGRAM REORGANIZES AFTER BUDGET CUTS

By Frank Gaul

Due to budget cuts and a decrease in the number of students, the Health Administration Administration program has been reorganized into a part-time program at Baruch College. The program will be offered in the evening, and the students will be required to work full-time and return to work full-time after the program is completed.

Answering An Assault on Baruch Women

By Michelle Payne

We want to outline the most important features of a recent Baruch College essay on the topic of multiculturalism and its relation to the status of women. The essay was written by a student who claimed to be a representative of the multicultural movement. We believe the essay seriously misrepresents the views of women and women's rights organizations.

For example, rape, whether or not it is an act of violence against the woman—it is not sex.

President John Godbold, who has had years of experience working with Baruch College students, made the following statement: "We are all human beings, and to attempt to assign victory to the playing field with aggressive contempt for women." Professor Godbold dealt with rape from the perspective of the violent culture fostered by this society. He linked the issue to the overall struggle of women against sexism, and emphasized the importance of the examples of the assault that occurred at all levels of institutions.

The president pointed out the financial information and statistical data in his presentation. He reviewed the St. John's University rape case, he stated.

The financial penalties associated with the incident included the loss of financial aid to the student, the cost of medical treatment, and the cost of legal representation. The student was also expelled from the university, and the college was taken to court. The college settled the case for a large sum of money, but the student refused to accept the settlement.

"Mr. Thornhill evidently does not respect or represent the views of the women on the council of which he is a member."

The student's response was that Mr. Thornhill had not been truthful in his account of the incident. Mr. Thornhill did not represent the views of the women on the council to which he belonged. The student argued that the truth could not be hidden by the president's report.

"In August, the African-American community organized meetings and demonstrations to protest the acquittal of the landowners.

I had the honor of reading the student's report, but I did not participate in the protest. The student's report was published in the St. John's University conservative newspaper, the St. John's Evening News. The student's report was not challenged by the university administration.

"The trial of the remaining two defendants was brought to a close.

Professor Aliss Solomon of the University of Pennsylvania conducted the trial of the remaining two defendants. He ruled that the evidence against the defendants was insufficient to prove guilt. Professor Solomon's decision was challenged by the prosecution.

"It's time for us to expose these organized and well-financed groups that are using the name of Baruch College to create confusion and disrupt social harmony."

The student was referring to the Black Student Union, which was active on campus at the time. The Black Student Union was accused of organizing and disruption on campus. The student argued that these groups were trying to create confusion and disrupt social harmony on campus.

"The shackle of bondage is not broken.

The student argued that the shackle of bondage had not been broken. The student claimed that the shackle of bondage had not been broken, and that the truth could not be hidden. The student argued that the truth could not be hidden by the president's report.

They released their first album, "In the New World," in 1978, which included the hit single "Roxanne." Their second album, "The Police," was released in 1979 and included hits like "Can't Stand Losing You" and " Roxanne.

In 1983 they released Synchronicity. They added five more hit singles to these, and "The Police," became the epitome of their career. The last album, "Every Move a Man Makes," was released in 1986 and included the hit single "Every Breath You Take.”

The Police disbanded in 1986, but their music continued to influence the music industry. "Every Breath You Take" became a staple in rock radio playlists for years to come.

The Police's influence extended beyond just their hits. The band's sound, characterized by driving rhythms, distinctive vocal harmonies, and the keyboard presence of Stewart Copeland, influenced countless other bands who followed in their footsteps.

In the 1990s, The Police reunited for a few select performances, and their music gained new fans with each iteration. Their music continued to be celebrated, with many fans citing them as one of the greatest bands of all time.

In 1980, they released "Reggatta de Blanc," their second album, which included hit singles like "Message in a Bottle" and "De Do Do Do, De Da Da Da." This album was a huge commercial success and helped to establish The Police as one of the biggest bands in the world.

"Every Breath You Take" became a staple in rock radio playlists for years to come.
Movie Review

Gunning For A Hit

Year: OTT's Star, Starring Andrew McCarthy, Valeria Golino and Sharon Stone; Directed by John Frankenheimer; Written by David Raybourne; Triumph HomeVideo/Columbia Pictures. MPAA Rating R. RATING B+ By Philip Brown

There is a fine line between what is good and what is bad in David Raybourne's Gunning for a Hit, but his use of reality television and video gaming will put on the audience as much as the characters. This film is not particularly original and the writing is weak, but it is still an entertaining film.

Gunning for a Hit is a story about a group of filmmakers who are trying to make a film based on the hit television show, Gunning for a Hit. The show is about a man who is hired to kill his boss, but instead he decides to kill the boss's son. The filmmakers in the film are trying to replicate this story, but they are having a hard time getting the funding they need.

The filmmakers in the film include John, a former reality TV star; Andrew, a former video game designer; and Sharon, a former sportswriter. They are all trying to prove themselves and are willing to do anything to get their film made. The film is about the struggles they face and how they eventually succeed.

Despite the weaknesses, Gunning for a Hit is still an entertaining film. The actors are all good and the writing is weak, but the story is compelling. The film is a triumph of will over adversity, and it is a story that will appeal to fans of both reality TV and video games.

The film is not without its flaws. The acting is uneven, and the dialogue is clunky at times. But these are minor issues compared to the overall quality of the film. Gunning for a Hit is a film that is worth watching, even if it is not without its flaws. It is a film that will appeal to fans of both reality TV and video games, and it is a film that is worth watching for its entertaining story.

Fantasy For Sale:
The Comic Book Convention

Are you sitting there wondering how you can get the best deals on comic books? This year you are invited to pay your respects to the comic book gods at the comic book convention.

When you walk into a dealer's tent, you are greeted with the same scene as your little brother or sister used to see. You are in the land of the comic book collectors. You are surrounded by all the latest and greatest in comic book collecting.

If you are a comic book collector, you are certainly aware of the interest collectors have in going to a comic book convention. There is something to be said for going to a comic book convention. For starters, you will be able to access a vast collection of comic books. The convention is a place where you can find everything from the newest releases to rare and vintage comics.

There are over 500 dealers from all over the United States and if you want something specific, you are bound to find it somewhere. I had a look at the table and the dealer was able to find all the books I was looking for. The dealer was able to find all the books I was looking for.

Though all the (unsold) collectors were jumping at the chance to pick up all the "still" books, you will find a lot of books at any convention. The dealer was able to find all the books I was looking for.

When you come to a comic book convention, you will find a lot of different types of material. You will find everything from the latest releases to rare and vintage comics. You will find a lot of material that you won't find in other places.

Riddle of the week: Why was Babcock the third base coach, then just three weeks later rehired as the manager?

(A) Buck improved greatly during the three weeks he was unemployed.

(B) The Yankees are using a new promotion system.

(C) George Steinbrenner is still running the team.

After Twins first baseman Kent Hrbek muscles Ron Gant off of first base for an out, several offers to wrestle professionally. After the way he hit in the series just doesn't cut it any more.

Bad advice. At age 21, he would lose his job by now, Now that the NFL season is over, Super Bowls, especially the World Series. In years, the Rams will outscore the Steelers, especially the Kansas City Chiefs.

When he took over the Rams in 1983, they had a terrible defense. Hunter was paced by Caesar, who had 13 kills and 9 blocks in the match, and by Carmen Tieso, who had 23 assists, and earned a place on the All-Tournament team, along with Sharon McFarlane. Baruch was led by Wendy Lau with 15 points. Lau earned All-Tournament honors as well.

By Eric Grossman

If hard work pays off, this year’s basketball team should be paid in full. On November 25 at 4 P.M. they will play against NY Tech and the squad can hardly wait.

Coach Rankins along with assistant Rick Swillinger feel the team will be one of their better ones. The Rams are young and will improve as the season progresses. We’re quicker and deeper than last year, which makes us more flexible,” said Rankins.

Seven veterans and five freshmen will try to improve on last year’s 12-13 record. Rankins said, “each player has a role to fill. If this year is successful, they will have a chance.

Redskins- They seem like the team to beat and should make it to the Super Bowl. If they do, and they have no apparent weaknesses. Home field advantage should make them very competitive.

Giants- The defense is good enough but the offense will be the teams downfall.

Bucco- Take them out of Madison Square Garden and they are very beatable. They have no running game.

Chiefs- They have a real chance. Defense is excellent and so is the running game. Bills- Definitely the team to beat. They have an awful lot of talent on both sides of the ball. They seem to be on a mission to get to the Super Bowl and become the standard for all other shortstops.
