Pataki Pillages CUNY: Calls for $400 Tuition Hike

Large Cuts to Financial Aid and Budget Proposed; Baruch Stands to Lose $4 Million

The Governor's Proposal and Its Effect on CUNY

By Deidre A. Hussey

For the third year in a row Governor George E. Pataki has proposed a decrease in the budget to the City University of New York (CUNY), making springtime budget battles a yearly ritual. This year, Pataki has proposed his most ambitious plan to date, suggesting a $400 tuition hike (a $56.9 million increase in the operating budget for higher education) and $176 million reduction in state financial aid.

As Governor Pataki enters his third year of a promised reduction in state taxes and facing a 1998 reelection bid, the proposal for CUNY has been expected due to the lack of voting power students have shown in the past. Pataki's proposed cut to the operating budget will be hammering down in the state legislature, where last year legislators beat back Pataki's proposed cuts to the operating budget.

In his proposed budget, Pataki implies that $56.9 million reduction from CUNY will be partially absorbed by a 14% increase in revenues, leaving CUNY only a $33 million deficit to the operating budget. The remaining budget funds all individual college services, such as hiring professors, support staff, including counselors and libraries, hours and other services.

Large Cuts to TAP

The most detrimental part of the proposal are the various ways Pataki has suggested to reduce financial aid. Currently, New York State's financial aid program, the Tuition Assistance Program (TAP), serves over 72,000 CUNY students. If the state legislature accepts Pataki's proposal, over 12,000 students will lose their TAP, according to figures provided by Chancellor W. Ann Reynolds's office.

The largest savings will come from decreasing TAP, by coordinating it with federal financial aid and calculating 50% of a student's Pell award toward his or her TAP award, thereby reducing aid individual students will receive. According to Pataki's statistics this calculation of TAP will save New York State $109 million.

Also proposed is a change in the procedure of computing house-hold income, which determines aid eligibility. Currently a student's award is based on net income—coming after deductions. Pataki has suggested that it be based on Federal Aggregated Gross Income, a figure that represents one's income before taxable deductions. In doing so the state will lower the number of students eligible and save $15.5 million.

Any increase in tuition will not be reflected in the 1997-98 TAP award, but will be based on the 1996-97 tuition rate. State aid will no longer take into consideration the number of children a family has in college and will reduce the amount of TAP a senior receives by $300 rather than by the current $200.

Pataki: CUNY Is Still A Bargain

"Every year at this time we hear this 'sky is falling' rhetoric and it never happens," said Michael McQuinn, spokesperson for Pataki, when asked about the impact of the budget on the state's poorest students. "The fact of the matter is that CUNY remains one of the best bargains in the United States and will continue to be a bargain. Even with the Governor's suggestions, New York has the most generous Tuition Assistance program in the country."

Every year the Governor proposes a budget to the state legislature, which the legislature debates and eventually ratifies a budget based on his suggestions and their own modification proposals. If the legislature passes a budget that severely decreases funding to CUNY, it is the final decision of the Board of Trustees to pass a resolution to raise tuition.

Since Pataki became Governor in 1994, every state proposal has suggested severe cuts to the CUNY budget. In 1995, the state legislature cut $100.1 million from the CUNY budget, forcing the Board of Trustees to raise tuition by $750 a year. According to Reynolds's office, CUNY has lost over 119,000 students since 1995 as a result.

The Reaction

By Dusan Stoijkovic

Governor George E. Pataki's latest proposal to slash the State Budget for Higher Education has disconcerted and outraged CUNY students. At least the ones who have heard of it.

"That's the worst thing they could do," states Lars Prince-Sammy, emphasizing that education must be a top priority of government, "not just for the sake of handing people diplomas, but rather preparing them to function as productive members within society."

Pei-Cen Lin, a surprised Accountancy major, says, "Nobody told me about this current round of budget cuts. It's going to be devastating." She adds pensively, "I guess we'll never finish our schooling."

"I think the cuts in financial aid are going to hurt people most," says Nadine Dominique, a Computer Information Systems major, pointing out that a number of her friends were forced to choose between school and work after losing monetary assistance in the past two years. "Once again, people are just going to have to make that choice and many of them will opt for work," the graduating senior adds.

Baruch Slated For $4 Million Cut

According to the Governor's proposal, Baruch is slated for a $4 million cut, a figure that excludes the loss of revenue due to students dropping out owing to lack of financial aid and tuition increase. In 1995, Baruch lost 18 positions due to budget cut and 17 contracts were not renewed. The Department of Academic Skills was abolished and the restructuring of Baruch began, beginning with a new class grid, larger class sizes and the consolidation of departments.

Efforts have begun in the Baruch community as well as CUNY to organize attention to the plight of CUNY students. "Legislators are faced with many big agenda items this year in Albany, like welfare reform and property tax cut, casino gambling, and rent control," said Carl Isra Prince-needle passes a budget as productive members within society."

As Governor George E. Pataki plans to cut the budget for both CUNY and SUNY by $475 million in the upcoming academic year, tuition is expected to increase by $450 over a year for both in-state and out-of-state students. The Tuition Assistance Program (TAP) will continue to decline. This is one of the worst incidents in a series of dramatic decreases in the student budget for higher education that date back to the '70s when the Pell Grant was abolished.

The governor's plans to propose cuts to TAP are especially worrying because they not only make it difficult for low-income families to pay for school, but they also weaken the state's ability to support the Governor's promise to create a "new concept for us-and the future." According to Governor George, "We have to make sure that our legislators are aware of what students, not only CUNY students, are facing this year.

In addition, Governor Pataki has been working on a letter recent to legislators. "I'm working on a letter right now to the legislators and the student leaders. We plan to hang as many flyers as you won't be able to turn a corner in the school without seeing one." He went on to say, "I personally have been talking with student leaders from the USS and Queens College on organizing a rally as we can get 50,000 students out and make Pataki change his mind.

The Evening Session Student Government also plans to participate in actions against further budget cuts. "We're working on a ten-point plan to distribute to the editorial offices of all major newspapers in New York." In this letter, Governor George student leaders will reveal the truth about the bills that the state government has been promoting about higher education. We have to organise the negative impact those cuts will have on all students, students at Baruch College and SUNY, and students in all parts of upstate. districts, it is especially important that we work together with students from other campuses in New York State. We have to make our legislators receptive to their constituents. We have to get to know our legislators and speak to them, we have to write to them letters. We have to make them aware of how the Governor's budget cuts will be a day of lobbying in Albany on March 5, organized by the USS, CUNY Legislative Action Committee and New York Public Interest Research Group.

As for the cuts themselves, Governor Pataki has been talking with the tax rebels on New York State's actions against further budget cuts. "I'm from, education is not a business of students at the expense of students. The last time tuition was raised, people got $20 back on their tax returns, but our tuition increased by $350.

Many CUNY students are having trouble understanding how to pay more for something with which their colleges can't provide them. Glass, Student Council and Management major at Lehman College, says, "They think it's ridiculous, we're no longer allowed to register early and phone registration is still a method being used.

By Samuel Johnson, "Education is a right! We have to make legislators aware of what students, not only CUNY students, are facing this year.

We are being made for a letter writing campaign informing legislators that they require our participation. Students held a CUNY-wide demonstration in Albany on March 5, organized by the USS, CUNY Legislative Action Committee and New York Public Interest Research Group.

The most devastating cuts to the State's budget in higher education, however, came in 1993. Pataki proposed a budget that called for $165 million in cuts to CUNY, which eventually led to raising tuition by $30 a year for in-state residents. He also proposed a 10% reduction in TAP, as well as the elimination of the Search for Education, Knowledge and Literacy (SEEK and College Discovery, CD) programs.

In response, Anthony G. Giordano, Jr., Chair of University Student Senate (USS), said, "Governor Pataki, through his Executive Budget Request, has confirmed our worst fears: that he has no commitment to supporting education. "Education is a right! Fight! Fight! Fight!" He's mean, his name is Pataki!"

Pataki's demonstration began peacefully with handouts and speeches but ended with 45 arrests. Two students actively demontrated in the 1993 protest, it was a movement of 10,000 students who actively protested that took place about 20 years before—we students bitterly complained for transforming CUNY, which had been tuition-free

The New York State Appellate Division reversed a resolution of the CUNY Board of Trustees on March 1 that allowed 120-credit diplomas to be awarded. The court's decision is: "In the state with the most public universities, right up there with Michigan and Berkeley, we were ranked number one in the country in producing CEOs and Chief Officers. We moved abroad in a national study of American research universities four years ago. On questions involving financial aid, Dean Proto replied, "Laws will be a last resort for students. The study of degree requirements in all academic fields, including physical education, should be noted."

Barnes & Noble Offers Baruchians 5% Discount

By Deidre A. Hussey

As an alternative to the long lines and high prices of the Baruch College bookstore located in the basement of 365 Park Avenue South, Barnes & Noble located in Union Square at 18th street is offering a 5% discount on all textbooks throughout the semester.

To service the particular needs of very busy and time pressured Baruch population, Barnes and Noble has opened it doors exclusively to Baruch students on Thursday January 29th from 8:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. Besides offering a 5% discount on textbooks it will also extend a 10% discount on all school supplies.

“This is an alternative to the campus bookstore and should save students both time and quite a bit of money,” says Dan Perez, Day Session Student Representative for Academic Affairs, who coordinated this effort in response to the long lines, poor service and lack of text books stocked by Baruch’s bookstore.

Baruch’s bookstore, a profit enterprise owned by Falleti College Stores, an industry leader in textbooks operating in over 500 locations, was a focus of piece last semester in The Ticker. As reported three out five students expressed outrage and dismay as the initial cost and lack of required textbooks. Manager Timothy Moreland defended the high prices saying that publishers set the initial suggested retail price and “We [the Baruch bookstore] just tack on $20.” Barnes and Noble also donated $1000 to Baruch College book reserve, which offers textbooks on reserve at the library for students who can afford to purchase them. According to Perez, Barnes and Noble should have a large number of the text books students are required to have and also, “buy back current issues of used textbooks at better prices than the college book store.”

Barnes and Noble spokesperson Jason Chan stated that Barnes and Noble hopes to build and current and future relationships that benefit both sides. Perez agrees, “The more students patronizing Barnes and Noble, the more bar-

WHAT ARE WE, ROCKEFELLERS??

As part of annual budget process, Governor Pataki has, once again, proposed Draconian cuts to the CUNY budget, suggesting a tuition hike to make for the lack of money he feels we do not deserve. To compound the situation, Pataki has proposed dramatic reforms in the eligibility requirements for Tuition Assistance Program (TAP), which would force over 12,000 CUNY students to rethink their education.

Pataki has presented his budget to the legislature, and it is now in their hands to decide the fate of the 250,000 New Yorkers desiring higher education. The Baruch Community, students, parents, teachers and administrators have to unite and work harder at forcing the attention of State Senators and Assembly persons about the ramifications of the Governor’s proposal. At a time when the state legislature has big agenda issues to decide on, such as welfare reform, rent control, casino gambling and property tax cuts, we, the Baruch community, must work to convince our representative that CUNY students are vital to the future of New York State’s economy.

In the words of Assembly Ed Sullivan, Chairperson to Higher Education Committee, “We, the CUNY family, teachers, students, alumni, parents, and administrators have to ban together and make each State Senator and Assembly person feel the potential wrath of students if they do not come back with a budget that is fair to students.”

CUNY KISSES PATAKIS PATOOTY; TUTION INCREASES IMMINENT

by Crista Lee

Those Nixon-era tuition hikes that just don’t go away. Less education means more crime (drug). Drug dealers will go for the soft targets. College students are soft targets. They just need to keep pushing, don’t mean nothing isn’t about to happen. Either we’ll all go to jail, or going to school won’t be worth it. America is going to hell. We all know we’re in a downward spiral, but with the right leadership, we can turn our country around. We need to work together to make sure that our future generations are not left with a legacy of failure.

Quote of the Fortnight

“No governor in the history of this country has ever asssailed higher education like Pataki.”

---Assembly member Ed Sullivan, Chairperson of the Higher Education Committee.
Mayor Iuliani, Governor Pataki,

I am writing to you about the current student movement here at City College of the City University of New York. This movement is not about some abstract concept; it is about real people who are seeking solutions to real problems.

The movement is a response to the failures of our educational system. Our schools have failed to provide the skills and knowledge that students need to succeed in the world. Our government has failed to protect our rights and our civil liberties. Our society has failed to address the needs of the poor and the marginalized.

The movement is a call to action. It is a call to demand the changes that are necessary for our community to thrive. It is a call to hold our leaders accountable for their actions. It is a call to create a better future for all.

I urge you to listen to our voices. I urge you to take the steps necessary to address the issues that we are raising. I urge you to support the movement of the people.

Thank you,

The only difference between a person who wishes to look at the newsgroup and a real bulletin letter.

Similarly, when one person requires the writer to type his board will see the message. everybody who reads the bulletin when one person puts a message on a bulletin board, they newsgroup (posts a message), and people get it and try it. An article. Not only is it possible to anything that a person does newsreader is a computer program over the Use net (Usenet). They put a sample version you to write your own letter. It will allow you to read all the responses to a certain letter (post) or to generate your own response. You may respond on the bulletin board so everybody can see or respond via email so only the person who wrote the letter may view it.

Now for the pleasant surprise you get for getting this far in the article. To use a Usenet newsreader as a computer program that allows the letters people have written and allows you to write your own letter. It will also allow you to read all the responses to a certain letter (post) or to generate your own response. Jerry Maguire. It is rare indeed that a commercial hit is a really good movie. Jerry Maguire has grossed over $100 million and is projected to earn nearly $130 million. This film was also nominated for 3 Golden Globe Awards, including Best Picture (motion picture comedy). Best Supporting Actor (Cuba Gooding, Jr.) and Best Actor in a musical or comedy for Tom Cruise, who won the award. Adding to the win, Cruise was named Best Actor by the National Board of Review. However, the critical reception does not stop there. The Director's Guild of America nominated five nominees for Best Director of the Year and Cameron Crowe was named one of the choices. Aside from last year, when Ron Howard won the DGA award and was not nominated for the Oscars, the winner of the DGA's best director award usually wins the Oscar. What can this all mean?

Jerry Maguire is the story of a sports agent who realizes that the only way to become a successful person is to change his professional and eventually his personal life. It is a typical coming of age story on the surface but what separates Jerry Maguire from a Disney movie is the unpredictable turn of events in the film and the depth of its characters.

Cameron Crowe's script is rich in characters. He presents dialogues and speeches that are written in such a way that makes them likeable in a very personal way. It is a love story with a feeling of growing up, and a sense of change. It makes the character memorable. This is an actor's movie in that sense and it is the reason why Tom Cruise, Cuba Gooding, Jr., and Renee Zellweger are so good in their roles. Cruise uses these emotions and turns them in the narrative supplied by Crowe. Renee Zellweger is a strong actress, and Cuba Gooding brings a sense of style and life to this character and presents one of the year's best performances. Renee Zellweger is the heart, Gooding, Jr. is the soul, and Cruise, as Jerry Maguire, is the film.

It would be absurd to discuss the greatness of Jerry Maguire without mentioning its director. All great film comedy is dependent on direction. Timing is everything. When someone delivers a great punchline or when a great sight gag is about to come up, the camera has to be on it at the right time. Not too early, so that we don't get the joke before hand, and not too late, so that the joke bores flat. But directing a comedy like Jerry Maguire is so difficult because its not an outlandish comedy. People aren't going to stop every two minutes. Funny lines aren't spit out every two seconds. And though this film isn't a dark comedy like "Pulp," it contains numerous dramatic moments that must be made distinguishable to the audience. Crowe put it all together because he understands everything he wants from every scene and each shot is set to evoke a particular emotion. This is probably due to the fact that he wrote the movie himself but it takes more than that.

Cruise uses these emotions and turns them in the narrative supplied by Crowe. Renee Zellweger is a strong actress, and Cuba Gooding brings a sense of style and life to this character and presents one of the year's best performances. Renee Zellweger is the heart, Gooding, Jr. is the soul, and Cruise, as Jerry Maguire, is the film. It is rare indeed that a commercial hit is a really good movie. Cameron Crowe's script is rich in characters. He presents dialogues and speeches that are written in such a way that makes them likeable in a very personal way. It is a love story with a feeling of growing up, and a sense of change. It makes the character memorable. This is an actor's movie in that sense and it is the reason why Tom Cruise, Cuba Gooding, Jr., and Renee Zellweger are so good in their roles. Cruise uses these emotions and turns them in the narrative supplied by Crowe. Renee Zellweger is a strong actress, and Cuba Gooding brings a sense of style and life to this character and presents one of the year's best performances. Renee Zellweger is the heart, Gooding, Jr. is the soul, and Cruise, as Jerry Maguire, is the film. It would be absurd to discuss the greatness of Jerry Maguire without mentioning its director. All great film comedy is dependent on direction. Timing is everything. When someone delivers a great punchline or when a great sight gag is about to come up, the camera has to be on it at the right time. Not too early, so that we don't get the joke before hand, and not too late, so that the joke bores flat. But directing a comedy like Jerry Maguire is so difficult because its not an outlandish comedy. People aren't going to stop every two minutes. Funny lines aren't spit out every two seconds. And though this film isn't a dark comedy like "Pulp," it contains numerous dramatic moments that must be made distinguishable to the audience. Crowe put it all together because he understands everything he wants from every scene and each shot is set to evoke a particular emotion. This is probably due to the fact that he wrote the movie himself but it takes more than that.

Hip Hop Editorial by Edward Rodriguez

The complex flexibility of the English language, its high degree of versatility, and the nature of language in general consistently to great works of literature, which have succeeded for over a century. However, the validity of this language is in many cases an illusion that is not accepted by the mainstream society. This is why the experience of hip hop music for its critics and the entire hip hop culture is a creation.

The language of hip hop has a higher command of English than many of the other musical genres in America. This is due to the formation of new and different dialects as a natural result of the culture. This is because English is a language of the people, it is the lingua franca of the American working class. This is why the experience of hip hop music is in many cases an illusion that is not accepted by the mainstream society.

The prior ignorance to the African American perspective is the result of the educational system in the United States that has succumbed to the values of the white majority. This is why this educational system has impacted many of their cultures. The oppressions of people of any nation can only be understood by understanding that challenging of the good, the bad, and the ugly. This is because the people are always asking the question of what is the language of that land.
