Baruch, Not Just A College Anymore

By Andrea Lee

The Baruch College Campus High School (BCCHS) began operation this fall semester opening its doors to 100 ninth-graders.

BCCHS is located on the 16th floor of the 18th Street building. The school currently uses four classrooms, which they share with the evenings students from Baruch College. They also have access to the cafeteria on the 19th floor of the same building. Besides the cafeteria, the high school students also use the gym and a biology lab located at the 17 Lexington building.

The high school students also have access to the college’s library. But they have been told that the college students have the priority said Jill Myers, principal of BCCHS.

BCCHS has its own computer lab consisting of 25 computers with Internet access on the 16th floor of 18th Street building. Although the computers were purchased through the school’s budget acquired from the Board of Education, Baruch College paid for half of the cost for the wiring system. This cost-sharing enabled Baruch students to share the computer lab with the high school students.

The high school currently enrolls 100 ninth graders. The plan is to enroll only ninth graders in the subsequent years. “We will enroll 100 students in ninth grade in the next few years and hope to run the school with 400 students at the maximum capacity,” said Myers.

Children residing within the Community School District Two will get priority for admission to this school. Aside from residency, the students’ grades, citywide test scores and recommendation from their junior high schools will be considered for admission to BCCHS.

BCCHS is designed specially for children who live within Community School District Two, which runs from...

Baruch College is at 14th place in the amount of child care available, among the 17 CUNY senior and community colleges, according to a study conducted by The Ticker. Baruch has 20 child care slots which 49 parents are using.

The comparisons were done relative to the number of students registered at each of the schools. Baruch has 15,164 students, according to a preliminary snapshot done by the CUNY Office of Institutional Research and Analysis. It is the fifth largest student body among the CUNY's.

The Ticker also included in its comparison, as stated by the director of the program, Dean Bellamy, the Director of Early Learning Center, said, "I have seen these writings for as if we are building a relationship with the students who currently receive an AT&T Global Card membership, we are also trying to work out a deal with the AT&T Global Card membership, which is free. Membership is also free for students enrolled in the program."

With their membership, students can use up to $150 per month for AT&T Global Card membership, which is free. Membership is also free for students enrolled in the program. We are also trying to work out a deal with the AT&T Global Card membership, which is free. Membership is also free for students enrolled in the program.

The large capacity is made possible, Bellamy said, by obtaining funding from state and federal sources outside CUNY. They also get private funding occasionally, Bellamy said. The size of the programs are not an indicator of the quality of care, according to the director of the child care services. Baruch's Early Learning Center has a reputation for quality among the directors at the other CUNYs.

"We are very glad to be here, and we are trying to be part of the community and the college," said Myers. "Baruch college has been very kind and supportive.

Unlike other special interest high schools, BCCHS does not currently provide a specialized curriculum. "This is a regular high school and not a high school with higher education purposes," said Myers.

"Some City University of New York (CUNY) Colleges, such as Hunter College, offer this kind of high school that emphasizes a higher education program, which is not the case of BCCHS," she said.

BCCHS follows the regular high school Regents curriculum which includes Biology, Mathematics, Spanish, Art, Writing, Reading, Global Studies, and Gym.

In the future Myers is planning to develop a curriculum with some college courses to juniors and seniors. "For now it is still early, they high school students are only fourteen," she says.

"BCCHS is also in the middle of establishing after-school programs. It is in the process of developing a newspaper, a student government, a basketball team and tutoring services are being offered to the students by the college and..." said Jill Myers.

Turkey And Deja-Vu

Like the freezing winds of winter the year blows coldly by and only too late do we realize how much we've overlooked and taken for granted. As the year's end draws near, we Baruchians must all reflect on our activities and account for where we are today. With the advent of the new Scholastic Aptitude Test criterion, Baruch is sending out a clear message to its prospective students that it has standards that must be met. Standards which those who have gradually converted themselves to prove to prospective employers.

Plans for dormitories are underway over the 23rd street post office(literally over). A reality that was but a dream a year ago. Baruch is sending out a message to its prospective students that it has standards that must be met. Standards which those who have gradually converted themselves to prove to prospective employers.

But these are of little concern to the average Joe, those who have graduated constantly struggle to prove to prospective employers.

Arbitrage: Investing At Your Own Risk

By David Gertmen

Worldcom's recently planned acquisition of MCI Communications, if approved by the FTC, will create a new company that will have a market value of $60 billion and will be the largest communications company in the world. The new company will have a market value of $23 billion. Investors such as Harold Gottesman see the acquisition as an opportunity to make a good profit through the process of arbitrage. "I'm betting I can make 20% on the deal," he said.

Arbitrage is the process of buying one security in order to resell it and then selling the second security at a price higher than the first for a profit. For example, Company A wants to purchase Company B for $10. A share but shares of Company C is selling for $8. The shares of Company C is sold to a shareholder, who then sells their stock and makes a profit of $2 per share. As of Nov. 19, shares of Worldcom was trading at $33.20.

While some investors are confident that the prices will stay above the $29 level, others remain pessimistic. "I'm not so sure about this deal," said one skeptical investor. "I don't want to be left out to dry when the bottom falls out of this one," he added.

Management
In the 90's

By Gideon Moskovitz

Managing in the '90s is a tough job. Workers' morale and motivation are continually threatened by a number of forces, ranging from the legal regulations to the changing economy. One of the most important forces that negatively affects morale is the changing economy. The economy is in a state of flux, and it is important to keep employees informed of the changes that are taking place.

Ford Motor Co. says that it will leverage its expertise in the automotive industry to boost its efficiency and profitability. The company is planning to divest its automotive operations and focus on its financial services division. The move is expected to help the company improve its profitability and reduce its debt.

Today's business environment is fast-paced and ever-changing, and it is important for managers to be adaptable and flexible. They need to be able to adapt to new challenges and to think outside the box. Managers also need to be able to communicate effectively and to lead by example.

A group of computer and telecommunications specialists is working on developing a new software system that will help companies improve their efficiency. The software is expected to be available in the near future, and it is anticipated that it will be widely adopted by businesses.

Cardinal Laboratories Inc., based in Amos, Calif., has announced that it will acquire a new division of N.T.F. Inc. The acquisition is expected to help the company increase its market share and to improve its financial performance.

The SN group specializes in providing software solutions to businesses in the United States and Canada. The company provides its services to a wide range of industries, including manufacturing, healthcare, and finance.

What do you get when you put a French lady, two African women and a Canadian woman in one room? Hold-off on the matrimonial punch line. You get an International Association of Students in Economics and Commerce (IASEC) conference.

This year's conference, which was held in New York City in August, was a huge success. The conference was attended by students from around the world, and it was a great opportunity for students to network and to learn about each other's cultures.

At A.I.E.S.E.C. Bardu, there was a lot of excitement and enthusiasm. Students were eager to learn about the different cultures and to meet new people. The conference was a great opportunity for students to learn about the different cultures and to meet new people.

The conference featured a number of sessions and workshops, including sessions on international trade, investment, and finance. Students were able to learn about the latest trends and to network with other students.

The conference also featured a number of social events, including a welcome reception and a farewell dinner. These events were a great opportunity for students to get to know each other and to relax.

Minorities Getting Ahead In The Future

By David S. Ortiz

The future, it is said, belongs to those who seize it. But for minority groups in New York City, the struggle to seize the future is more arduous than ever. Members of minority groups are facing new challenges, as if Dr. Frank Scalzo and NYCAMP are saying in the matter.

They do. They do. They do.

The New York City Alliance for Minorities in Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics (NYCAMP) is an organization that works with minority high school students to prepare them for careers in these fields. Founded in November, 1992, NYCAMP is dedicated to increasing minority and female participation in the sciences, technology, engineering, and mathematics.

NYCAMP has been successful in increasing the number of minority students enrolled in STEM programs. According to the New York City Department of Education, minority students make up 47% of the student body in NYC, compared to only 28% in the United States as a whole.

NYCAMP is also working to increase the number of minority students who are enrolled in STEM programs at the graduate level. According to NYCAMP, only 12% of minority students who enroll in STEM programs at the undergraduate level also enroll in STEM programs at the graduate level.

Pork

Pork is a popular meat in many countries, but there are concerns about the purity of the meat supply.

According to the USDA, pork is the most commonly consumed meat in the United States. However, pork is also the meat that has the highest risk of contamination with antibiotic-resistant bacteria.

The USDA has reported that up to 40% of pork sold in the United States contains antibiotic-resistant bacteria.

The use of antibiotics in livestock is a controversial issue. Some people believe that antibiotics are necessary to keep animals healthy, while others believe that they are unnecessary and that they contribute to the development of antibiotic-resistant bacteria.

I am not a fan of the police department. A good amount of my brothers and sisters have been beaten to death and harassed endlessly by pigs. But we need them. It is a fact, and we have to be there to prevent crimes. But police do not deal in crime prevention but crime reaction.

Homicide: Life on the Street deals with the ultimate part of crime reaction: to find a murderer and to prevent crimes, but crime reaction. But we need them to be there to prevent crimes. But police do not deal in crime prevention but crime reaction.

Andre Braugher.

Black character is a way I see myself and have been Andru Braugher. His portrait is that of a man who is a black detective and investigator. His characters are a mature, exciting and realistic, especially as shown on the small screen. Not many actors have the persistence to keep my integrity. If my integrity is my culture, I must recognize. I recognize that if I die, my seed will be ill like me. "If I die, my seed'll be ill like me..." My culture. My spirituality, art, comes from the forms of cultural expression, that I experienced in my life, done by my people expressing their trials and tribulations. Forms of originally created music, dance, an poetry that kept the alive. I was uplifted just seeing other poor people, the way I express myself is through my struggles. It meant you are a good father to him. One who nurtured me with the words will survive. He'll feel used when many teachers, poor and righteous, who have taught me the highest meaning of the word, his ancestor's primary mixture of Africati, Aborigine and merengue con pastelles -- were the journies she nourished me with. The waters of passion, the apnea of Vito Marcantonio. And that's words to live by from "The Watcher's Seed at?!!"

When others are not representing you, it is the sign of God that you should represent yourself. I have done this yet the next question that arises has arisen. If I should die tonight, my needs must already be realized, so that the meaning of the words will survive.

This extension of my life cannot be created without merging with the woman. The woman whose beauty I never realized until I looked in my mirror and saw myself. When I told her, I experienced the beauty in the pieces of my culture I never knew existed. Plates of delicious food,停下来, then and when we went the distance when I put her on the phone, I certainly loved her before, during, and after. No longer did I think of me and my struggles, it was me and I.

It's hard to know who to give thanks to for this blessing of opportunity. The opportunity to create life. In creating life I'm forcing the audience to recognize and emulate a distinct maturity. A distinct maturity, I have to balance the love I have for my people, my country, what is in this culture, my culture. I will face and the hypocrisy I must recognize? I will have to sacrifice my seed and yet have the persistence to keep my integrity. If my integrity is sacrificed then I'll have nothing.

Am I ready for these lines to blur when mouths are hungry, lives are short and righteousness is a heavy burden. The opportunity to create life. In creating life I'm forcing the audience to recognize and emulate a distinct maturity. A distinct maturity, I have to balance the love I have for my people, my country, what is in this culture, my culture. I will face and the hypocrisy I must recognize? I will have to sacrifice my seed and yet have the persistence to keep my integrity. If my integrity is sacrificed then I'll have nothing.

Through his mother's wish, his name would be mine. Although it was once hesitant I said to someday make him proud of the legacy his will with me. The feelings that would surface with having made something that is part of you and part of what you love is incredible. The opportunity to create life. In creating life I'm forcing the audience to recognize and emulate a distinct maturity. A distinct maturity, I have to balance the love I have for my people, my country, what is in this culture, my culture. I will face and the hypocrisy I must recognize? On our last page: a chat with Rob Rowe of Cause & Effect.

By Syed A. Bokhari

The group Cause & Effect formed back in 1989, and since then, they've produced a couple of alternative radio and club hits, such as "It's Over Now," "What Do You See," and "I Think You Know Her." Despite their accomplishments, the band has been through it's ups and downs, switching record companies, and the deaths of co-founder Sean Bowley. All this, however, has only made them stronger. With their new release, Innermost Station, we find the band going back to the indie scene from which they emerged, bringing forth their most varied and diverse release to date. I managed to have a chat with the trio's vocalist and guitar player, Rob Rowe. He said, 'may have had a bit too much wine, 'but he still managed to answer some questions.

Sy: Cause & Effect has had a few name changes in its lifetime; getting back to Sean Bowley's untimely death...what keeps you guys going?

Rob: I think that what keeps us going is the love of creating music together. There have been several times in the history of C&E when it seemed that things were over but something always came along when we needed it to keep things going. We're all good enough to put out our music by ourselves but what I love is when I see a demo that I've put together become so much more because of Keith and Rich's work on it. We work well together because we all have strengths that the others don't have.

Sy: Without label backing, how was the making of Innermost Station different than with your previous releases?

Rob: With TRIP, we were working with a pretty large budget that allowed us to go to London and work with Martyn Phillips. We had a lot of freedom then because a lot of the responsibilities rested on Martyn. We got to be the artists and only the artists. With Innermost Station, we're working with a single thing from putting together the studio to manufacturing. That is a lot to carry but I'm glad we did it that way. We had become too dependent on record companies and managers to run things for us and we weren't doing a very good job.

Sy: How would you compare the sound and feel of Innermost Station to Trip or Another Mission?

Rob: This album is a definite departure for us in many ways. We recorded a lot of the drum live and tried to incorporate more of my guitar playing into the mix while still displaying our love of analog synths. I think there is less of a dance influence on this one which is a reaction to the band being labeled a dance band by Zoo which led to our publicity being centered around that. We've always felt strange about that label since we consider ourselves songwriters and dance music is generally more about production than songwriting. When you hear a dance artist explaining the meaning of lyrics like "Be my lover, won't you be my lover" it turns the whole process into a joke.

Sy: Lyrically, you seem to paint a somewhat bleak picture of society in "Generation" and "Beau." - do you really feel that technology and commerce are destroying us?

Rob: I'd be a hypocrite to say that technology and commerce are destroying us. I'm now using the internet as the primary means to sell our records but there are a few things from the modern society that get under my skin. One of those is the suburban shopping mall and all the mindlessness that they represent. They're the modern day cathedrals. A placid to worship America's god-money. There are so many that work to consume and for what? A huge TV, a shinier car? I'm not sure that 'Best' fits into this but this is definitely at the core of 'Generation.'

Sy: What would you say the band's major musical influences are?

Rob: There are so many and we tend to let more of them show through on 1MS. In BM, Smiths, DM, Fluke, Underworld, James, U2, Radiohead, Suede. The list goes on. Smiths was the biggest DM fan I've ever been involved with. I'm not involved in any other projects.

Rob: Keith has been working on some club stuff with Dania from Anything Box and has done some remixing. Rich has been involved in a project for a Dallas band called Anon. I've been working on songs for C&E and an instrumental side project that I may release some day if it feels right.

Sy: Any future plans? A tour perhaps?

Rob: We're going to concentrate on building a relationship with Liquefication and see where IMS takes us. We have about 20 other songs ready to record so we'll start on the next album before the end of 1998. We have had huge gaps between albums. We're trying to change that and we're in complete control again it will be a lot easier. We'll love to come down and see more of the city but we'll have no set plans.

C&E's recent new album, Innermost Station, was released back in November 1998. It features nine new songs, and is produced by the band themselves. Visit www.causeeffect.com to hear some sound samples, and to learn more Cause & Effect.
Biting and Reciting!

There’s no more disgusting thing when dealing with art than plagiarism. But what’s even more atrocious is biting, because it is a way to re-use your own work. Unfortunately, biting is common in all art forms and nowadays, wannabes find it exciting and prosperous (i.e. Puffy).

Disney’s entry in the animation movie market, is not a bad movie at all. In fact, it is entertaining. Filled with wonderful animation and beautiful artwork, it follows the story of a Russian princess who gets separated from her family because of the curse of the evil Rasputin (voiced by Christopher Lloyd). Ten years later, with the help of Dimitri (John Cusack) and Vladimir (Kelsey Grammer), Anastasia (Meg Ryan) is brought back to her family.

The amusing bat, Bartok, provides comic relief and the voice of Bartok, Rasputin’s bat of Notre Dame ten story to life. Hank Azaria provides comic relief as a real classic or even original classic. The Lion King, Pocahontas, get the point. They have a tiring for power moves in Hollywood.

The story revolves around the people he meets and being that I’m a way that I. to creating anything original cause it is a way to wear the reputation of other than plagiarism. With art than plagiarism.

But what’s even more atrocious is biting, because it is a way to re-use your own work. Unfortunately, biting is common in all art forms and nowadays, wannabes find it exciting and prosperous (i.e. Puffy).

Wow! I almost had an orgasm listening to this! The Chinese Burn E.P. by Curve is the first official release from Curve in a little over a year since the duo reunited in 1996. It is a remix collection of the title track plus two more songs. Curve’s music is new wave, it’s dance music is layered with electronic effects, aggressive bass lines, and guitar distortion reminiscent of old-style Jesus and Mary Chain. Is no wonder that bands like Garbage have been bitten off their sound (Butch Vig even admits to being heavily influenced by Curve).

Included are two alternate original versions of “Chinese Burn”—the Flood Mix and the Steve Osborne Mix. The latter, which appears in the video, is my favorite of the two because it’s much more raw and aggressive than the Flood Mix. The Olympia’s quality. Although this mix does change the music slightly, it’s nice to hear a different interpretation. Switchman’s “Ease of the Storm” and the Luminous Calm miss both exploit the beat, and contain more elements of the song than does the Forbidden City Mix, although once again, we only hear tiny fragments of the vocals. The Headache Meditations Mix by Dean Garcia, which is a new version mastered behind Curve, is the best mix of the two. It starts off quiet and ambient then the vocals come in. The vocals, as usual, have been manipulated by keyboards (or computers), which makes it seem like the keyboards are “talking.” Then, the beat comes out of nowhere and makes this thing groove like a mother.

“Robbing Charity” is a bit more relaxed than Chinese Burn. This track sways way more towards the techno side, and I really like this one. The track is a bit of a surprise, or at least a shift in gears. The best sounds a bit like Jane’s “Drug Store”. It’s not really simple, and the production is less “slick” as compared to the other tracks, proving that diversity is still a factor in Curve’s sound. This E.P. is a great teaser for the band’s new album due out in early 1998. The only problem is, that now that I’ve been teased, what do I do with them?

DREADLOCKS: Four perspectives

By Khadime De Prada

I grew up visiting my father's friend, who was a police officer, and he worked at the police station in Jamaica. It was a place I visited regularly as a child, and I remember being fascinated by the various aspects of life there. The island of Jamaica. It was at this early age that I began to appreciate the teachings and principles of Haile Selassie, the late Imperial of Ethiopia and instigating a number of reforms including the abolition of slavery. His messages of wisdom and love. When they listen APRIL ESTRADA to me or my mother, they feel more knowledge and clarification about Rastafarianism. My brother's views firmly opposed. 'Self'

In my opinion, there is a direct correlation between the beliefs of the Rastafarian religion, or any religion for that matter, and the way people feel about themselves and the world around them. I firmly believed in the Rasta way. Therefore, she strongly stated, "This is the sequel to my nightmare was beginning."

I was a Rasta. But it is a way of life rather than a religious state. You have to realize it was me you wined and dined. It was me you told me about comes along and picks up your feet. His were more of a cultural statement rather than a religious association. The beliefs of the Rastafarian religion. His views further clarified my interest in dreadlocks and Rastafarians. In my quest for more knowledge and clarification about this religion, I decided to...

After a season of struggle, Baruch College has gone with a new approach in head coach Rick Swillinger. The longtime men's assistant coach who served as interim women's coach at John Jay as well, has finally settled in where he started, at Baruch. The Youthfull Stateswomen will rally around freshman guard Natalie Testamark, with added scoring expected from Springfield transfer Dana Greco. -CUNYAC
