Renovated Campus Building Named In Honor of Son of Baruch Benefactors

At our $280 million dollar academic complex nearing completion, another new building was christened and added to Baruch's ever-expanding campus just around the corner.

In a blaze of ceremony, featuring more distinguished guests than have been seen at Baruch all year, Steven Newman Hall, the new home of the Newman Institute for Academic Complex, was dedicated in ceremonies held in the renovated building.

"The ceremonies were terrific," said Dean of the School of Public Affairs Stan Altman. "Everything was respectfully and tastefully done."

The celebration lasted well into the evening as dinner and cocktails were served on the second floor of Newman Hall following the close of welcoming ceremonies.

Renovations on the building were begun in January, 1998 according to Karl F. Schmid, assistant vice president for campus facilities and operations. "Renovation costs, including a new boiler which serves the 17 Lexington Avenue building as well as the 135 E. 2200 Street building, are $5 million," said Schmid. "Furniture and equipment for the building cost approximately another million."

The bulk of the renovation cost was absorbed by the state agency that is paying for the new academic complex, the New York State Dormitory Authority. However, according to Altman, some money for interior fixtures had to be allocated by the CUNY Board of Trustees.

"The building was not paid for with state money," said Altman. "Furniture and equipment for the building cost approximately another million."

The newly renovated building was named in honor of Steven L. Newman by a unanimous vote of the CUNY Board of Trustees in the spring of 1997 in recognition of the "extraordinary leadership of Bill and Anita Newman," according to information released during the event.

By all accounts, the dedication appears to have been a success.

"There was a sense of collegiality and warmth throughout the event," said Altman. "Whether you were a student, faculty member or part of the administration, you could not help but feel the collegiality of it."

 Dante Garibaldi, director of admissions, the workshops and simulations were designed to familiarize students with the "meaningful and hands-on approach necessary" to learn and apply effective administrative management techniques.

"We learned how to approach administration and attack certain obstacles in making things work," said Jean Paul Sets, the junior class president of the High School of Economics and Finance, one of the 18 schools represented. Organizers had noted that the other two schools that did not attend.

Last spring, a group composed of high school teachers and Baruch officials came up with the idea ever since to discuss ways they could "teach" each other about.

"It just sort of evolved," said Ann Gilges, director of Intern Programs at the High School for Leadership and Public Service, and a member of one of the sessions.

That initial idea was expanded to a full-day program through the efforts of Baruch and other programs in the School of Public Affairs as well as New York high schools.

The conference was a success, according to organizers. "We hope to do it every year," said Sets.

Rally Draws CUNY Students Together in Anti-KKK Protest

By Mark Henry
TICKER News Staff

As you can tell by the headline, there will be several public systems for the City Council. Judges and other electors are divided. The most important, well, there should be a bal­ ter proposal to amend the city charter. It is possible for public participants in our democratic system of government to ensure that regulations form and register for the right of free speech and freedom are protected. Make so minutes, the only thing that counts is the vote. Even your

The Sunflower

Y was that day, she saw my heart had been open.
I was in shock after her words. My heart was pounding, my hands were sweating. My mind grew to the flower shop.

This time I will get flowers.
I thought as I went to the flower shop.
I continued and asked me to do the same.
She said, "Thank you," she said puzzled. That's when my heart began to feel heavy.

Eve and Tammy glanced at each other. They seemed to like each other.
They seemed to be with other women but I was afraid of them all.
She asked me, "Is this guy doing here reading my hand?"

"I was on Prince Street last weekend and I saw a cool sunflower," she laughed, "I didn't think we should break up."

"What?" I replied.

"Yeah, so I went in."

"I passed a lady to draw on my hand."

"And what did she draw?"

"An apple," she laughed.

"I don't even ask her to draw a sunflower."

And she asked me to do the same. Like right, I was smoking something on paper and gave it to me. It was "One day and sunflower" on the other. I was amazed. I thought,
"What is this guy doing here reading my hand?"
He also gave me a look, but then Eve glanced away. We were waiting for the terminal and sat down on the floor until it was time to leave.

The club was about 15 minutes away.
I killed it with a "Thank you," she said puzzled.

A Rally to End All Rallies

Another blow to the United States Constitution and the Bill of Rights has been struck. Let freedom ring throughout the land, Free speech and freedom of expression have won another round in the courts.

Let it be said that no matter how vile, disgusting or unpleasant the message, that one is not discriminated against. Make no mistake, the right to freedom of expression is one of our most precious and treasured rights and we must vigilantly preserve and protect it.

The sad thing is that it took a Klan rally to get some of us out of our beds and off our behinds. We demonstrated to put the hate mongers on notice that CUNY will not allow bigots to 'come into our campus and voice their views and opinions expressed, we must bear in mind that only by the free speech and freedom of expression have won another round in the courts.

We, the members of the Press, wholeheartedly congratulate the judges for upholding the basic freedoms guaranteed us by the Constitution. Without such rulings as upholding these rights they make the information could be filtered, censored or even denied to you the public.

Regardless of how much we may disagree with the dissenting views and opinions expressed, we must bear in mind that only by protecting their right to free speech will we safeguard our own.

MINNERS' COMMENTARY

By John Minners
Ascanio Arts Editor

I'm in a pissed off mood, so let's just get this over with. I received some e-mails the other day, asking why don't I write about college sports. Specifically, Baruch College. Oh yeah, my name is Jon Minners, not Joe Minner. How do you get that wrong? It clearly says it in the byline, and our computers don't have bad penmanship, so it's not like you couldn't see it very well.

Anyway, I don't write about Baruch sports because I don't get to see any Baruch sports. My schedule is too tight and it's not like I see any team schedules posted all over the place for me to be informed as to when the next game will be played. Maybe the schedules are announced over Baruch Radio, but where the hell can you get Baruch radio. Their signal has like no power whatsoever. People standing right outside the station can't pick it up, unless they raise one foot in the air, hold a reed of aluminum foil at a 90 degree angle, click one heel against the wall, and say, "There's no place like Baruch radio..."

There I go, off on a tangent. Just this once, I will write about Baruch College sports. This whole column will be about Baruch College sports. Hope that satisfies you.

Thank god Kenny Rogers isn't on the Baruch baseball team. Boy did he screw up my bold prediction last week. I was crying before he threw his first pitch. I am so upset about the Mets and can only hope next year will be a better one. Speaking about Baruch sports, I can't wait to see the Yankees win it all. The Braves were lucky to get past the Mets and now have a bigger threat on their hands. John Rocker is a big wrestling fan and that's why he acts the way he acts. Well, consider this a big wrestling match. Your team beat the Mets, but now their bigger, badder tag-team partner has come to hand you your ass. Yanks in five.

Hey, Baruch sports isn't so bad. I saw the fight between Mike "I don't know about Baruch. Hell, I've never stepped foot in a college" Tyson and that other guy.

Tyson got a bad rip on this one. Plenty of people throw punches after the bell, so he's not at fault for this. Other Guy (That's his name, right?) got up, walked, skipped and did a little jig, before going to his corner. All of a sudden, he couldn't move his leg anymore. He twisted his knee and couldn't continue. Other Guy and his camp thought for sure Tyson would be disqualified for his actions, and a rematch would be set up. Other Guy would get another $800,000 for the fight and be even richer. I was turning to go back to my corner, when he hit me in the jaw, he whined, but he wasn't turning anywhere, so that makes him a lazy sack of shit. His knee was fine when he was going to his corner, and all of a sudden, he needs life support for the trip back. Loser. If Mike Tyson gets screwed on this fight, I will never watch a boxing match again.

Let's look at other college teams. The guys that have graduated from various colleges to make up the New York Giants seem to be making a run at the playoffs at that the beginning of the season, seemed out of reach. Turns out, the Giants don't suck after all.

Now to the world of amateur wrestling. World Championship Wrestling has two of the World Wrestling Federation's former writers, and all of a sudden, I am seeing girls in scantily dressed clothing, men cockfighting with guitars, Jeff Jarret grabbing his crotch and saying the word, "I'm good. Wow. It's good to see WCW copying. WWF and making a better product. For now, we will call their programs, WWF Raw-Lite. A Baruch sports team played a game somewhere someday that passed awhile back. They may have won and they may have lost. Who knows? Maybe I should actually see a game. Maybe I shouldn't. If you really care about the Baruch sports teams, go see a game and write for Ticker Sports. Show me what I am doing wrong. I promise not to get bitter about it... for awhile.

Well, I got to be going now. I am in training for the big Baruch Philosophy midterm I must take. Go Baruch! Later...
