Credit Evaluation Methods Gradually Improve

Bernard Baruch Gets His Way

By Lihabez Reyes
Editor-in-Chief

According to Thomas McCarthy, director of the Registrar's Office, there are guidelines by which credit evaluations are made. Sometimes the number of guidelines can be overwhelming for the person evaluating a student's transfer credits. Difficulties arise when a student transfers from one non-2-year CUNY program, when they transfer from private institutions and when they transfer from out of state.

After the student's credit information has been sent to the Registrar's Office, evaluators determine which classes are transferable and have an equivalent at Baruch. Unfortunately, this is where the process begins to slow down. "Until recently the process of evaluating credits has been, by and large, a paper and pencil process," said McCarthy. Before the database was created and even now, the evaluations are carried out by a person who sits at a desk with both a student's record and a guideline booklet that outlines the courses that could be transferred for credit at Baruch. According to McCarthy, transfer students outnumbered freshmen 2722 to 1499 this academic year. One could imagine that with such a large number of transfer students, there would be more transfer evaluators on hand to quickly assess their credits.

Bernard M. Baruch Way

Mayor Rudolph Giuliani has signed a bill co-naming 25 street between Lexington and Third avenues, to Bernard Baruch Way in honor of the contributions that Baruch made to New York City. The mayor stated "The Last Bill before me... would add the name 'Bernard Baruch Way' to East 25 street."

One sophomore Tamia Silver said, "I think it will foster a feeling of pride and community in the students. It could not have come at a better time either seeing that we are getting the new building it may even give us a more campus-like feeling," although the co-naming of the street has not yet received much publicity in the Baruch community.

Adding the Baruch name to 25 Street brings the light influence Baruch still has on the community long after his passing, while uniting the campus his name adorns.

Bernard Mannes Baruch was born on August 19, 1870, in South Carolina. In 1881 when Baruch was about ten years old he moved to New York City with his family. Eight years later in 1889 he graduated from City College and began working as an office boy. Baruch became fascinated by Wall Street as he ran errands in the area.

As an adult, he married Annie Griffin in 1897 and had three children, and after several years in the brokerage business, he became a partner in the established firm A. H. Thomae and Company. He then bought the Powerful New York Stock Exchange from the earnings he made and was making millions by the time he turned thirty.

Baruch had the burning will to succeed and opened Baruch Brothers with his brother Herman Baruch. In 1907 the two brothers bought H. Hallett and Company which already had many offices in New York, London, and Berlin. Baruch became his expert on the nation's industries and economic resources, which prompted President Wilson to ask for his assistance as the First World War loomed. Baruch was put on The War Industries Board and helped in peace negotiations with Paris.

At the end of 1918 he was inducted into the South Carolina Hall of Fame in 1985.

Any biographical account of Baruch's eventful life with this tribute, something the Baruch community has stood for all along.

Technology Improves Evaluation Process

On the contrary, at one point Baruch employed four full-time evaluators that needed to review over 500 credits in order to second-guess the mistake that only one person had made. professor and coordinator of the Office of Credit Evaluation, said Thomas.

“Let your voices be heard, go straight to the top and demand more evaluators,” stressed Thomas.

Although the new database will help speed up the evaluation process, it will not stop people from coming to the Office of Credit Evaluation with their concerns.

“Don’t blame us, blame the administrators,” said Thomas.

Shun-Wu Wu, a senior who transferred from the University of California at Davis, said mishandling fees with the new database. He knows that the database will provide relief to some but others will not be affected by it. “I did attend a similar institute because every transfer student seems to have a special circumstance,” he said.

Thomas expressed concern over the fact that many transfer students who reach the University of California at Davis, do not have a special circumstance,” he said.

Although the new database may not be the administrative position (an evaluator),” stated McCarthy.

The database is designed to provide an easy way of transferring courses and credits for students who have transferred from other colleges.

“Let the bad news be heard, go straight to the top and demand more evaluators,” stressed Thomas.

Among the concerns that the database will not provide any relief to students is the fact that it will not speed up the evaluation process.

Unfortunately, the hiring of more evaluators was another college and that of the equivalent here at Baruch was much higher. He pointed out the cost of hiring an evaluator.

The Wrath of Samuelson

The magazine of economics is best exemplified by Samuelson & Nordhaus in their textbook, "Macroeconomics." (The AP edition is the best.) To begin with, their advice on how to achieve success is always bleak and very honest. Even when the prospects are favorable, they are qualified and often make you feel that you are not up to the task at hand. However, their advice is always sound and practical. They emphasize that if you are serious about economics, it is important to have a solid knowledge of economics.

The book is well written and easy to read. It is a good source of information for those who take economics seriously. It is also a valuable resource for those who want to learn more about the subject. The authors' style is clear and concise, which makes it easy to follow. The book is highly recommended for anyone interested in economics.

KEIFMAN INFORMED ALL OF THOSE PRESENT AT THE MEETING OF THE Queer CUNY Conference that he would be held on Saturday March 10th, 2001. He passed around a handout summarizing the workshops and activities that were to be held during the conference. The handout listed on the agenda included a keynote address, a panel on planning seminars, and a poster reception.

The essence of the conference was to be found in a theme: "The Queer CUNY Conference." The theme was chosen by the Queer CUNY Conference Committee, and it was held on Saturday March 10th, 2001. The conference was held to discuss issues of importance to the LGBTQ community, and it was open to all.

"It is wonderful to have a place where people of all sexual orientations can meet, express their views and find out more about themselves and others.

As the meeting progressed several issues were addressed concerning discrimination not only to the gay community, but to others as well. For example, it was mentioned that there are several gay individuals that have made significant contributions to society, but have had that part of their lives downplayed simply because one wants to accept their existence. One such person was Harvey Milk, who was the first openly gay man to run for office. According to the report, Milk sympathized with the campaign that has given gay rights a platform in today's society.

In fact, intolerance plagues them even within the gay community. It was reported that young people who are homosexual often are harrassed themselves, and have times where they have been victimized by those who are open about their sexual orientations.

The meeting seemed to have ended on a note of hope. The discussion was still in swing when club hour came to an end at 2:30 p.m. Keifman, though disappointed that the misunderstanding with the television not appearing on schedule, was content with the way the meeting ran.

I think it is wonderful to have a place where people of all sexual orientations can meet, express their views and find out more about themselves and others. Chicks like this have helped me with what I became today.

The Baruch Community Has Made A Difference In The Lives of the Victims of India
Thank You – Sort Of

Our esteemed institution has actually decided to do something helpful for the students. After years of complaints and numerous editorial writings, the Registrar’s Office has finally answered student transfer-prayers – sort of.

The same office that has given every other Baruchian a migraine has now decided to relieve some of that stress from students that have and are in the process of transferring over from another institution. With the creation of a new evaluation budget, the time in which transfer students receive their evaluated credits has been cut down – sort of.

The quicker evaluations will only be available to those select few students that have transferred from a CUNY college, three SUNY institutions, NYU, St. John’s University and Pace University. Unfortunately, students that happen to come from an institution not named here are not in the least to worry about. It is always a good idea to ask the administrators in your own Office for their help. It is their job to relieve some of that stress from students that have and are in the process of transferring in.

Although it might seem out of the question to add every international institution to the database, some have decided to relieve some of that stress from students that have and are in the process of transferring in.

Transfer students find themselves in. According to Julian Forrester, senior student evaluator, accessing a foreign transfer student’s credit information is more complex, simply because the information is in their native tongue.

Unfortunately for Forrester, he does not know all those languages. Time is then expended, trying to have the information translated. But perhaps what is most absurd is the fact that he is the only foreign evaluator at the Registrar’s Office.

Forrester is charged with evaluating an average of 300 students per semester, each of which has to be done by hand. This is a process that can take, according to him, “a significant amount of time.”

With at least 300 transfer students coming into Baruch every semester, why not input those institutions in the evaluation database?

Common sense answers this question, as all those transfer students come from different parts of the world and from many institutions.

As soon as the question is pulled to add all international institutions to the database, something more has to be done to speed up the process for foreign transfer students as well as those transferring from within the continental United States.

It’s nice that the Registrar’s Office has actually taken a step forward and actually succeeded at serving the students – sort of – it still has a lot of room to improve on.

This academic year alone, 2,722 transfer students entered the Flagship of CUNY and there were only four evaluators to assist them all. Perhaps hiring more evaluators would handle evaluations a good way as well as a great place to start.

But then again, maybe our dear old institution knows what is best for us – sort of.

Who’s to Blame for the School Shootings?

By David Gans

Who’s to blame for the latest school shooting? That’s a question that most people have been asking themselves since the last school shooting. Many media after the most recent school shooting has been attempted to stage a school shooting. Many people are asking whether or not to increase the amount of security at schools. The same type of question has been asked before as well. Asking the question can sometimes bring about a variety of answers. A question can also provide a way to see the problem from different perspectives. Asking the question can allow us to see problems that may not have been seen before.

Two Streaks and a Milestone

The Devils continue their domination over the New York Rangers, and extend winning streak to 12

By David Martinez
Managing Editor

One night of hockey, a milestone reached. Two streaks continue and a Milestone reached at the end of the Devils' 4-0 win over the hapless New York Rangers.

In the midst of all of these record-setting events, the Rangers looked more like they were getting ready for a pee-wee league game to get their minds back to their game plan then the team that the Devils are so well on their way to getting to the Stanley Cup playoffs.

The Rangers have dropped a win against the Devils in nearly four years. The Devils have recorded an impressive 15-0-8 record within that time span, and their 4-0 win over the Rangers showed no sign of worry that the streak may end any soon.

Yet another milestone was reached this night as Devils goalie Martin Brodeur etched his 50th career shutout against only 37 shots in the game, setting the National Hockey League record for shutouts in a career. Though the defense did play a tight game, and the Devils...
BASEBALL TEAM OPENS ITS SEASON

The baseball team opened its season this past week. The team traveled to Tennessee for its season opener against Middle Tennessee, as NCAA Division I team with a 14-1 record. In both games, the Statesmen were "run-ruled," but they had some moments of fun against the powerhouse Middle Tennessee team. The Statesmen took the South 25-5, so things were complete as they were able to play baseball of long and easy wins as the oldest division than Baruch. The Stateswmen were back in New York for the end opener against a CUNY team in John Jay. The game was a doubleheader that Baruch won - two run-ruled gut-wrenching games.

The State was to CUNY in a two-game set and 2-1 with 2-1 and 1-0 loss to Hunter in four games (30-26, 26-29, 23-26) and 13-30) in a loss game to Lehman in three straight games (20-28, 24-20) and 23-30. The Statesmen thought they had received a break by way of a win due to injury when they were able to get back into the game in the last two games. However, the team has been excluded for 15 games. Now 1-7 in the last five games in a row - is the Statesmen's best chance to get a win.

Nelly M. Neira, in the Op-Ed section of the March 12, 2001 issue of The Tribune, used a question that read, “Is horoscope, really, the existence of God?” for her piece entitled “The Unspeakables.” For those of you out there that don’t know what an Unspeakable is, let me use Ms. Neira’s definition, “without godism.” Very good! Ms. Neira’s, an exciting way of putting it! At any rate, the late-great Jefferson said much about how other religions, things in his life, such as, "Bigotry is the disease of ignorance, of morbid self-righteousness, of obstinate belief in error. And is this difference of no importance? Is it not the foundation of a greater or less share of beauty in the world?" Jefferson also said, "There is so much other Unspeakable nonsense that Ms. Neira speaks of in her article that it would take too many pages and the time that I have to tell you about. Ms. Neira, this simple thing that she is bumbling idiot, would be used to print it so it was worth putting on her. I will just say this one last thing about Ms. Neira’s piece. She showed her activity with this line, which is referring to a gun, “Trust me, I wouldn’t pull the trigger – religious or otherwise.” I wish the trigger would be pulled on the computer screen that you are viewing, so that would not happen. I am here to tell you, the voice of the Aruban community, am the only voice that makes wrongs right. Neira wants to ignore your God’s laugh, cruel, ignorant, and incomprehensible. "Oh, Liddy. This is not the new: it’s just the old." Ms. Neira is not bumbling idiot, but Tribulation is waiting for everyone to respond to these writings. Tribulation is outlandish, and wild. Piercing my heart deep down to my very being

I see not where has the road split in two

By the invisible hands of despair

what point my

Leaving me wounded, lying like

Scrolling around because of the one

Was it the time I behold you?

The time you glanced at me

Into the eternal Suffering

Bleeding, waiting hoping

But unnoticed she went

Making its presence felt

Trying to entice (him)

Into this peaceful world now sharing

Shining like my voice

The voice that has been said

By the merciless doctor that you, no more...

The ground swirled around in the wild dance

My life spins through my head

I see your lovely face, your eyes, your soul

I hear your gentle voice that has so many times

Called me the beauty of names

"My Dear Son..."

My strength has blinded me, my other mind

Left never to be back

I am down on my knees,

My hands are raised in question to the God

Eternal question (I have never been answered)

Until the day we meet again

And life has left its unmistaken mark upon your graceful face

That gentle voice, that has so many times rocked me to sleep

I want all people remember me for years

For years lived and those left behind

From hills of China to the Tel Aviv

The light that guides me through the darkest tunnel.

I see your lovely face, your eyes, your soul

You hairs gray and you are not that young

Into this peaceful world are now shaking

The hands that have delivered me

My life spins through my mind

Until the day we meet

Is now harsh and frail

Do you really wish to know?

Is that what you ask?

Is that what you ask?

I'm not sure, I'm not sure, Jigga...

Can't I say maybe...

I'm still my mamma's baby

Jigga, you don't wanna think too blind...

I'll tell you another day...

But I needs me some time, Jigga'

I think I know my final say,

It manners which way you ax, Jigga'

But never mind, Jigga'

I wish I could speak my mind,

It manners which way you ax, Jigga'

Someone to share me with.

Someone to play with,

Someone to walk with,

Someone to dream with,

Someone to understand me.

Someone who understands me,

Someone who stands beside me.

I can't give people my all...

There are a few... that I call,

Yet, I can't give them my all:

BUT I'm afraid that, they won't understand at all

I'm afraid that they won't call.

911, after they shot me through my soul.

I don't ask for much...

I'm not picky or such.

But, I do like making a fine catch

Wherever something seems to match.

For example:

A man in Banana Sweaters...

Means casual, but sophisticated matters.

A man in a motorcycle...

Is always trouble.

Ch is a pretty boy,

Always a pretty boy.

A man in dorky glasses...

A man in a motorcycle...

For Example:

A man in Banana Sweaters...

Means casual, but sophisticated matters.

A man in a motorcycle...

Is always trouble.

Ch is a pretty boy,

Always a pretty boy.

A man in dorky glasses...

Usually goes for jewelry boxes.

A man with a record.

Will go platinum, or just stay with a record.

A man of martial arts...

Has no clue about the martial arts.

Yet, he carries love full of cars

For his weapons and his darts.

A man who worships the gym...

Usually loves only him.

A man who is usually withdrawn and quiet

Usually makes you yawn and recommends a diet.

A man who talks too much....

Is not the mental?...

Or can I?

There was one who didn't care...

There is not much of a proportion.

He is the one who attends events in slippers,

He is the one that would take me motorbiking,

or just hiking.

He is a pretty boy.

He is a beautiful boy.

He doesn't wear glasses...

But, he looks through lenses...

And captures my senses.

He is the one who attends events in slippers,

He is the one who gives me the spins.

He is the one who takes me to mars...

And set me free from these cageing bars.

He is the one with eyes...

As blue as the sky.

Or as brown as hair dyed.

He is the one who makes me laugh and smile.

He is the one who walks with me a whole mile...

...(or)

He is the only one I want to dust.

He is the one I can't possess.

For... I'm cursed...

With mind and body defects.

I know he wants me.

But, does he just want me...

Or does he want to love me?

Does he just want the physical...

And not the mental?

Is he only interested in the physique...

And not the psycho-logical?...

I don't know...

(probably I will never know)

Unless, I attempt to know.

And to ask is the only way to know.

Yet, I can't ask and stare...

I can't confine and inquire...

All these feelings, I can't show and bare...

Without knowing that, these are feelings, we start.

He invaders my mind...

And makes my heart pound.

He haunts my dreams...

And my body screams...

With joy and satisfaction it seems.

If you listen to the radio, you might unexpectantly hear the new single by Moby called "Clenched Teeth." It is a cover of a song by the 1970s band "Street Pea," which was never a hit and was often forgotten. Moby's version has gained popularity, and it has become a favorite among fans of his eclectic music style.

The song is a mix of electronic beats and soulful vocals, combining elements of hip-hop, R&B, and indie rock. Moby's distinctive voice is accompanied by a prominent bassline, creating a hypnotic rhythm that keeps the listener engaged.

Moby's version of "Clenched Teeth" has been praised for its innovative use of sampling and its ability to breathe new life into an old song. It is a testament to Moby's talent as a producer and his ability to take influence from various genres and create something entirely unique.

Incorporating elements of old school rap and modern electronic music, Moby's version of "Clenched Teeth" is a great example of how contemporary artists can reinterpret classic songs and bring them into the present.

The song has gained a lot of attention on social media, with many fans sharing their own interpretations and remixes of the track. Moby's version of "Clenched Teeth" is a perfect example of how music can cross boundaries of time and genre, and how it can continue to evolve and inspire new generations of listeners.
It is Saturday night, March 10th, and the Hammerstein Ballroom is ready to explode. Thousands of rabid fans pack the concert hall to the gills, creating an air of tension that continues to mount as the evening's headliners prepare to take the stage. Finally, at 9:30 p.m., the house lights go dim. The audience erupts into a unison chant: "Pantera, Pantera, Pantera." The night, which had seen three previous bands, Nothing Face, Morbid Angel, and Soulfly perform, has finally reached its most anticipated climax.

The band members make their way onto the stage, one at a time: Bassist Rex Brown, followed by guitarist dimebag darrell, and his brother, drummer, Vinnie Paul. The three of them immediately launch into a song from the band's new LP, Reinventing the Steel, called, "It's Fucking Electric." Following their introduction, lead singer, Phil Anselmo, swaggers onto the stage and launches right into the vocals. His voice still has the raw power, which has been creating that 'tough as nails' Pantera sound that they have been playing around the world for the past twelve years.

The night featured the band playing many of the songs off their new album such as the Grammy nominated "Revolution is my Name," as well as "I'll cast a shadow," a song that Phil dubbed 'the newest Pantera classic that we will be begging him to play.' The next time they come around, which, for those interested, will be sometime in the summer.

The band also played many classics such as "Breaking the Walls of Heaven," and "Pills of Sin," which come from their first album, Cowboys from Hell, and "Cowboys From Hell." The crowd was in a frenzy, and the band's energy was infectious. The audience was on their feet, cheering and chanting along with the band.

The show's presentation was also quite superb. The lighting served to enhance the music playing, and the presence of a big steel Pantera logo on the stage, served to display how much stature the band has gained in its long career. The only disappointment in their set, the interior sound of the Hammerstein audio equipment. The limitations were obvious on songs such as, "Suicide Note," where the speed and harshness of the music could not be fully appreciated, and times ended up sounding jumbled and amateurish. All in all, Pantera put on another superb show.
